ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 9; Madras and Allahabad, August 7; Calcutta, August 6.

THE official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending July 26, says that there has been good rain during the week in British Burma, Assam, and Bengal; but the fall has varied in the last named province, having been excessive in some parts and deficient in others. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh also the rainfall, though general, still seems to have been somewhat insufficient in a few districts. In the Punjab, in Rajputana, in the Central India States, in the Central Provinces, and in Guzerat there has been copious, and in many places very heavy, rain. Prospects in these territories and states are satisfactory, though here and there the early sowings have been damaged or impeded by the wet. In parts of the Deccan, both in the Bombay Presidency and in the Nizam's dominions, rain is much required. In Berar and Coorg prospects are generally favourable, but the want of more rain is a good deal felt in several districts of the Madras Presidency and of the Mysor state. Prospects are now good in the greater part of India. In some portions of the centre of the country a break in the rains would be beneficial, whilst towards the south the weather has, as yet, been in some cases too dry.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times gives us further information, up to date, regarding the prospects in Mysor, where, however, the situation seems to be practically unchanged. He says:—"More rain is wanted in the northern and eastern districts of Mysor, where prospects continue doubtful. Prices are falling slightly."

WE are glad to observe, from the Calcutta telegram in the Times to-day, that it is now settled that Mr. A. Mackenzie, secretary to the Bengal Government, succeeds Mr. Grant at the Home Office, when the latter acts for Sir A. Lyall at the Foreign Office. Mr. Mackenzie's career in Bengal has been a distinguished one; and his accession will greatly strengthen the Supreme Government, where the Bengal element has been somewhat under a cloud since Lord Ripon's accession to the Viceroyalty. An earlier telegram informs us that the shuffling of the cards in the Bengal Secretariat, on Mr. Mackenzie's departure for Simla, will bring in Mr. D. M. Barbour as financial secretary. Mr. Barbour's early service was in Bengal, but he has long been recognised as one of the most promising officers of the Financial Department of the Supreme Government, in which he has filled the under secretaryship at headquarters, the Madras accountant generalship, and other important posts.

No actual change has occurred in the position of affairs in Afghanistan during the past week; but there are indications of reviving energy on the part of the Ameer Abdur Rahman. And the impression seems to be gaining ground that he is likely to make a good fight of it—which is in itself a consideration of some importance, for hopefulness is of the greatest value in Asiatic warfare.

THE official telegrams of Afghan news, received from the Viceroy at the India-office, are:—

"SIMLA, AUGUST 26:—Following from St. John, 25:—'A trustworthy correspondent sends information that Ayub's force has much diminished, and that his eight regiments do not number more than 400 men each, of whom the Cabulis are very discontented. Ayub has sent more small arms, tents, stores, and money towards Herat. It is believed that some danger is threatening him in that quarter. Ayub's attempt to raise the Durani Horse has failed. It is improbable that Ayub will be able to meet the Ameer's forces at any distance from Kandahar."

"SIMLA, AUGUST 27.—It is reported from Kandahar that Ayub and his army will march on 28th. Sartip Nur Mahomed with cavalry, is on the march forward. The principal chief of the Kotak Ghilzais has come to Kandahar."

THE Quetta correspondent of the Times is very clear in regard to the brightening prospects of the Ameer. Telegraphing yesterday, August 28, he says:—

"The Ameer has shown far more energy than was expected by friends or enemies, and, according to all appearances, will have little difficulty in regaining possession of Kandahar. After a brief hesitation, caused apparently by fear of treachery at Cabul, he decided on a bold course, and began by arresting Mahomed Jan and all other prominent partisans of the late dynasty. At the same time he sent a strong force of regular troops to Kelat-i-Geilzai, under his cousin Aziz Khan, and followed himself on the 11th with all the force he could collect, having first summoned the Ghilzai tribes to his aid. Kziz Khan reached Shahjui, forty miles from Kelat, some days back, and halted there. The Ameer should have caught him up by this time, and their united forces may be expected to reach Kelat in a day or two. Ayub, whose Herati and Candahari regiments have been encamped outside the city for some days was to have marched towards Kelat to-day. Whether he takes his Cabuli troops with him is uncertain, for they are notoriously untrustworthy, and it might be equally dangerous to take or leave them. A report has reached Quetta that they have been disarmed and dismissed; this is not beyond probability, but the rumour has no solid foundation that I can trace. All danger of a general rising of the Durani tribes in Ayub's favour has disappeared; with the exception of certain Barakzais of the Helmand, they appear to be unanimously holding aloof. I never believed that the feeling of the people for the family of Shere Ali was so strong as was generally supposed, but I was unprepared to find it so shallow and feeble as it has turned out. It is true that Ayub has done nothing in Kandahar to make himself popular; he has made Hashim Khan a stronger governor; he has squeezed the merchants—Afghans as well as Farsiwans, and has not even spared the priesthood, the guardian of the holy Shrine of the Prophet's Cloak having been recently imprisoned and fined. The Durani chiefs and horsemen flocked in to join his standard at first, hoping for pay, or, at least, promises of it, but they got neither. They were told that Ayub wanted none but regular troops, to pay whom all the available cash was required, and returned to their homes in dudgeon. The inferior priesthood and the mob who make up the fanatical section of the population had no fancy for fighting Abdur Rahman, but clamoured to be led against the English—an enterprise Ayub and his advisers are far too wise to attempt. He has thus disappointed every one, and has probably hardly more supporters than the Ameer had when we made over Candahar to him in April. Whatever may be the result of the approaching struggle, in which, according to all appearances, the Ameer can hardly fail to be victorious, one thing is certain, that the people of Candahar will more than ever look back with regret to the infidel masters whom they have lost."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times on the same date telegraphs:—

Reports have reached India that the Ameer has arrived at Ghazni, and a Lahore paper states that he is now near the army at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. The remaining items of news from Afghanistan are few. It is asserted, with more or less probability, that Ayub has disarmed and disbanded his Cabuli troops; that his force is much diminished, consisting only of eight regiments, each 400 strong; that the attempt to raise the Durani horse failed; that he is borrowing money and impressing carriage at Kandahar, and that he continues to despatch arms, money, and tents towards Herat. It is also said that there is a complete revulsion of popular feeling against Ayub. A report, requiring confirmation from Cabul, states that the Ameer has sent his family to Turkestan. He is said to be treating Mahomed Jan kindly, although he wisely considers that so popular a leader cannot be trusted with his liberty during the present crisis. Mian Gul, the Akhoond of Swat, who lately visited Cabul, has left for his home. Reports agree that he has been using his great spiritual influence on the Ameer's behalf, and that Abdur Rahman has shown his gratitude by presenting him with valuable gifts. There has, on the whole, been no important change in the Afghan situation during the past week, and the prospects of the future remain as uncertain as ever, though the chances appear to be somewhat in favour of the Ameer.

As we mentioned last week, the young Mian Gul must not be confused with his father old Akhund, who died some three years ago. The latter venerable sage and warriors exercised immense influence over the wild tribes on the northern frontier of the Punjab, between Cabul and Kashmir; and that influence was almost invariably used to excite hostility against the British power. At the most critical time, however, when Sher Ali was preaching jehad against us at Cabul, the old Akhund of Swat—prompted by some personal jealousy of the Amir—refused for a long time to give that movement the benefit of his blessing; and indeed remained more or less neutral up to the time of his death. Mian Gul has never possessed more than such remains of his father's power as might be secured to him by the prestige of his relationship to the saint.

AN incident is reported this week in the telegram of the Times Calcutta correspondent that ought to be seriously pondered by those people in England who are always crying out for restrictions on the power of the local English authorities in India. Such people will probably be startled by the declaration of the correspondent, that similar cases are believed to be of frequent occurrence, though seldom found out. The telegram runs as follows:—

"A case has lately been discovered of an offence which was believed to be of frequent occurrence, although it could seldom be traced—namely, plundering Government arsenals and smuggling arms and ammunition into the native States. The culprit is a man named Mahomed Ali, a general dealer at Mhow. He was arrested in a carriage on the Holkar State Railway, having in his possession 2,000 Martini-Henri ball cartridges bearing the Government mark, and which it is supposed had been stolen from the Mhow Arsenal for conveyance to Jaora. A search of the man's shop resulted in the discovery of 15,000 loaded and empty rifle and revolver cartridges, a quantity of powder and shot, and 25 rifles, all carefully concealed. The fact that such an extensive traffic in stolen goods should have been possible does not reflect much credit either on the police or on the arsenal and railway authorities.

By the same authority we are informed that the work of tabulating the result of the census held last February is now proceeding rapidly, and the figures for the whole country will soon be published. It is believed they will show a total population of a little over 250,000,000. It is to be regretted that these results were not available in time for the first edition of the Imperial Gazetteer, just published. It is, of course, obvious that the Gazetteer must forthwith be revised by the light of these new returns.

At the meeting of the Madras Legislative Council at Ootacamund last Monday, August 22, the Governor expressed fear of the stability of the Madras harbour works, and deprecated the passing of the Port Trust Bill until the work had been tested by the cyclone. He stated that lately there had been a subsidence of a portion of the southern pier and erosion of the beach, and the collection of silt within the harbour had caused anxiety. The Secretary of State was requested to instruct Mr. B. Parkes to come out immediately and remain until May. The opinion in Madras seems to be that the fears of the Government are exaggerated, and that the sea has done nothing more than was anticipated.

WE give elsewhere the list of the successful candidates in the recent competition for the Army Medical Department.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs, under date of August 28:—

The Indian Government has sent home a complete scheme of reorganisation of the Medical Department on the principle of unification of the British and Indian services. It is proposed that the latter should be permitted to die out, no new appointments being made, and that the medical officers appointed since 1865 should be amalgamated with the British establishment, which will supply Indian wants, and whence candidates for civil employment will be selected; the whole to be under Directors General for India. It is expected that some reduction in expenses will thus be attained. Brigade surgeons and surgeon majors who entered the service before 1860 are to cease civil employment at the age of 55.

THE executive committee of the Indian Medical Service Defence Fund will publish in a day or two a most interesting report on the conclusion—or at least the cessation for the present—of their public-spirited and highly successful labours. They have obtained redress for the more serious grievances under which the service has laboured, and they have secured full consideration of all disabilities. On one or two points the decision of the authorities hangs fire; and it is to watch these and to guard against any unforeseen encroachments on the privileges of the service, that the executive committee, whilst adjourning sine die, have resolved not altogether to dissolve their organisation. But, on the whole, the report now before us is of the nature of a Nunc Dimittis, issued under the happy circumstances of victory all along the line. We quote one paragraph:—

"The majority of the objects for which the fund was formed, have now been attained, and the service as a whole has greatly benefited from the changes effected during the past eighteen months, inasmuch that, with the exception of the senior surgeon major, the pecuniary prospects of every member of the service, from the surgeons general with Government to the youngest cadet at Netley, have been materially improved. Under these circumstances, at first, the executive contemplated a dissolution of the committee, believing that the existence of their organisation is to a certain extent inconsistent with the good feeling and confidence which ought to exist between a Government and its officers; many of their friends, however, have urged that it would be inopportune to dissolve altogether at a time when a scheme for the unification of the services is under consideration, as experience unfortunately demonstrates that the Indian Service has no official representative in this country. They have therefore decided to keep the fund together for the present, but in a passive form: no meetings will be held, and no publications issued, unless circumstances imperatively demand renewed action on their part. In other words, the machinery of their organisation will be maintained intact, but thrown out of gear for the present. With this view the executive have made arrangements with their secretary to hold himself at their disposal whenever required, and to maintain an office on a greatly reduced expenditure, to meet which the balance of the fund now in hand will be almost sufficient for another year.

THE renewed troubles in the Bhil country are, we fear, indications of a feeling of unrest in India not confined to the wild tribes of the jungle. A good description of the Bhils was once given by a Bengali undergraduate in a Calcutta University examination. Asked "What do you know of the Bhils?" he wrote as follows:—"When a Bhil meets you at night in the jungle, he sticks poisoned arrows into you, and flings your corpse into a ditch, by this you will always know a Bhil."

THE Indian Mirror shows how appointments are sometimes "worked up to." It says, "The rumour that Sir A. Lyall is to succeed Sir George Couper is beginning to shape itself into a kind of settled thing in the columns of the Pioneer."

THE Russian Government has given instructions for the collection of information—topographical, geographical, tribal, and political—about the tribes on both sides of the Hindu Kush.

THE Grand Shariff of Mecca is reported to have been in correspondence with the Nawáb of Baháwalpur. A famous Mullah of the holy city, named Muhammad Hassan, has visited the Nawáb.

WE regret to learn from the Times Calcutta correspondence this week, that there has been further outbreak of ill-feeling between Hindus and Mahomedans. The telegram is:—

"The tension of feeling which seems now to prevail between Hindus and Mahomedans in various parts of the country has received further illustration by the occurrence of riots between followers of the two religions at Mirzapore. There, as at Mooltan, the Hindus were the aggressors and the ostensible cause of the disturbance was the slaughtering of cows by Mussulmans. It does not appear that there was any wilful attempt to hurt the religious ideas of the Hindus, and the slaughtering took place at the usual spot outside the town, so that probably this was a mere excuse and the disturbance was due to a long-cherished feeling of dislike between the two parties. It was put down without difficulty or bloodshed. It is reported that certain pious Hindus of Benares are about to send a deputation to England to try and procure a prohibition of the slaughter of cows throughout India. Rajah Siva Pershad will head the deputation, and the Maharaja of Benares will bear the cost.

RAJA SIVA PERSHAD, C.S.I., is one of the most highly educated and enlightened Hindus of the North West Provinces. He has been long an inspector of schools in the Education Department of the North West; and for his services has been created successively a companion of the Star of India, and a Raja.

THE P. and O. Company's Steamer Assam will leave Southampton on Wednesday next for Calcutta, taking the Mediterranean mails.

DURING the course of the next month or two many sportsmen will be leaving England for India, some for a winter's sport, others for a more lengthened stay. We propose to devote a page occasionally to the record of any events of interest in connection with Indian sport; and shall be happy to open our correspondence columns to authenticated accounts of current sporting experiences. We shall also be glad to publish, for the edification of our sporting readers, any "wrinkles" that old shikaris may favour us with.

Apropos, a capital bag for Indian sporting use has just been invented by Mr. Malcom, the manager of Messrs. Woolgar and Co., of 40, Ludgate-hill, which is well adapted equally for a fishing bag or for a game bag. It is an improvement on the old "Freke Fishing Bag," invented by the same firm, and for many years in use by all mahseer fishermen, for whose needs its expanding properties were exactly suited. One division is waterproof and the other of canvas. The porous division can be let down for some distance, and then be readjusted by means of two rings, one at either corner, which are strung on to the sling of the bag, so as easily to take in a large mahseer. For India this division is made so that it can be removed and cleaned, whereby all unpleasant smell is obviated.

THE Ceylon Observer, in an editorial note, asks whether it is fair that the word "coffee" should be used in the name "date-coffee," that is applied in some advertisements to a product in no way connected with coffee in its origin. A planter writes on the same subject, to suggest that the cockchafers that live on the coffee roots should be dried, pulped, and reduced to a "coffee," that might be sold to the British public under the name of "Melolonthine coffee."

A REUTER'S telegram from Calcutta, dated August 26, gives the following quotations:—Piece goods quiet; 7lb. shirtings, 3r. 6a.; 8½lb. shirtings, 4r. 10a.; 40's Banner-mill twist, 4a. 8p.; jute, G.N. 1st marks, 28r.; saltpetre, 6r. 15a.; linseed, 4r. 4a.; rapeseed, 3r. 9a.; rice (Ballam) 2r. 1a.; Exchange on London, four months' bank bills, 1s. 8 3-16d.; Freights, 57s. 6d. to 70s. And from Bombay, on the same date:—Piece goods unchanged; 7lb. shirtings, 3r. 6a.; 8½lb. shirtings, 4r. 1a.; 40's mule twist, 9r. Cotton dull. Shipments of the week, 14,000 bales. Exchange on London, four months' bank bills, 1s. 8 3-16d. Freights, 37s. 6d. to 40s.

FIGURES lately published, and telegraphed from Calcutta, show that the exports from British India to adjoining foreign countries during 1880-81 were Rs.4,68,54,621, against Rs.4,29,28,923 in the previous year. The imports were Rs.4,67,94,871, against Rs.4,59,79,290. Upper Burma continues to head the list, although transactions with that country have fallen off considerably. Next comes Nepal, then Cabul, and then Cashmere, trade with all which countries shows a large increase both in exports and imports. Kandahar stands fifth, and shows a large decrease in transactions.

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending Aug. 9:—Rev. D. Macpherson, D.D., the Desai of Neriad, Mr. R. F. Gibbon, B.C.S., and Mr. H. H. Lucas, D.P.W.

THE GAOLS OF BENGAL.

Mr. A. S. LETHBRIDGE, M.D., the Inspector of Gaols, Bengal, has addressed the following letter to the editor of the Times:—

"Sir,—As public attention has recently been drawn to the excessive mortality in Bengal gaols in 1879, and as the subject was referred to in the House of Commons, I hope you will, by inserting this letter, give me an opportunity of stating certain facts in connection with this subject. The death-rate in the gaols of the different provinces for the years 1878-79 was as follows:—

	1878.	1879.	Average for two years.
Bombay	124 per 1,000	110 per 1,000	117 per 1,000
Punjab	109	103	106
Central Provinces	119	70	94
Madras	126	56	91
Bengal	69	94	81
Assam	61	98	79
N. W. Provinces	41	40	40

"Looking at these figures it is difficult to understand why Bengal should have been selected for special notice as regards its mortality. Bengal, the most unhealthy province in India, is here shown to have a death-rate in its gaols which compares favourably with the rate of mortality in four other provinces which are considered more healthy. Not the least curious part of the present agitation is the fact that it was begun by a Bombay paper. One would have imagined that it had quite enough to write about in the statistics of its own province. As a fact, in the whole history of Bengal gaols there has been no such mortality as that shown in the Bombay returns for these two years. In making these comparisons I do not for a moment mean to say that because the mortality of Bengal is lower than that of some other provinces, there should be no special inquiry into the, in my opinion, extraordinary mortality of 94 per 1,000 in 1879. My whole action in this matter shows that I have at all times courted the fullest inquiry into the subject, and I am not sure that the present prominence given to Bengal mortality is not due to my strongly expressed views on the subject in my report for 1879, and also to the Government resolution on that report. The average mortality for the sixteen years previous to 1878 was 58·7 per 1,000; in 1878 it rose to 69 per 1,000, and in 1879 to 94·8 per 1,000. In both these years there had been an unusually large mortality from cholera. In 1878 there were 215, and in 1879 341 deaths from this disease. The absence or prevalence of cholera has in past years made the mortality fluctuate between 40 per 1,000 and 107 per 1,000. If in 1879 there had been no cholera the mortality from other causes would still have been 76 per 1,000—a rate which in itself calls for special inquiry. In my report for 1879 I expressed an opinion to the effect that the mortality was chiefly due to the insufficiency of the diet scale recommended by the Prison Conference which met in January, 1877, and I quoted the rates of mortality in other provinces to show that some very general cause was operating to influence the health of prisoners prejudicially in so many provinces at the same time.

"The Prison Conference was composed of representatives from the gaol departments of all the provinces in India, and the result of its deliberations was given to the Government of India in the form of a report. Among other subjects which were considered, was the question of gaol dietary. As I was not a member of the Conference, I am unable to say how the Conference arrived at the idea that a dietary containing only 174 grains of nitrogen was sufficient for Bengali prisoners on hard labour. I assumed charge of the Gaol Department in December 1877, and was called upon by the Government of India in 1879 to give effect to the recommendations of the Prison Conference. The diet scale recommended by the Conference was introduced on March 1, 1879. The medical returns for 1879 were tabulated and brought under consideration in March 1880. On March 22, 1880, on my recommendation, the Bengal Government issued immediate orders increasing the diet. It has finally been decided to increase the amount of nitrogen in the diet from 174 grains to 249 grains for prisoners of Lower Bengal, and also to increase the diet of Behar prisoners from 208 to 288 grains of nitrogen.

"I am not aware that any facts have been brought forward to dispose of the view that the cause of increased mortality was an insufficient dietary. On the other hand, the use of a more liberal dietary in Bengal in 1880 and 1881 has resulted in a reduction in the average mortality to 63·5 in 1880, and judging from the returns already received, there will be a still further reduction in the current year.

"Much capital has been made out of the fact that in certain gaols there has been a mortality as high as 360 per 1,000. This death-rate has been moreover made to appear as the average death-rate of Bengal gaols, and one paper has gone the length of comparing the mortality of our gaols to the number of deaths in the Black Hole of Calcutta. In the first place, average mortality, when it is calculated on a small population, has really no meaning. Take, for instance, an extreme case. There were in 1879 only two political prisoners in Bengal; one of these, a man aged seventy-five, died during the year. Imagine the terrible embarrassment of the Government if a member of the House of Commons had got up and asked the Secretary of State whether it was true that the mortality among political prisoners in Bengal had been at the rate of 500 per 1,000. Take, again, the case of the Maldah Gaol, which in 1878 showed a death-rate of 74 per 1,000, and in 1879 a death-rate of 258 per 1,000. What were the facts as regards this case? Maldah is a very malarious district, and the people are as a rule in an unhealthy condition. In 1879 452 individuals were subjected to imprisonment in this gaol, giving a daily average population of 61·8 prisoners. Of the 452 individuals, 15 died, showing a mortality of 2·58 per 1,000 on the daily average population. Of the 452 individuals admitted into gaol, 74 were returned as being in indifferent health, and 11 in really bad health. Now, I would ask, can the average mortality shown in this small gaol have any practical value from a statistical point of view?

"With regard to the high rate of mortality in the gaols of Dinagepore and Baraset, which show 360 per 1,000 and 288 per 1,000 respectively, Lord Hartington has already explained in the House that these two gaols had, in consequence of the good accommodation in them, been selected for the confinement of invalid prisoners from other gaols. It was to be expected, therefore, that the mortality in these gaols would be very high.

"Ever since the Gaol Department was first organised, the gaols situated in what are known as the sub-Himalayan districts have been extremely unhealthy. Nor can we expect very great improvement in these gaols if the free population from which the convicts are taken continue to suffer from diseases of malarious origin to the extent that they do. Julpigoree, which is a small gaol, drawing its gaol population from the malarious Terrai district known as the Doovro, has, without exception, been the most unhealthy gaol in Bengal, and I regret to say that, in spite of all that can be done, it continues unhealthy. Within the last five years the site of the gaol has been changed four times. Changes and additions to diet and changes in water supply have all been tried without effect. A new gaol is now under construction, in which the sleeping barracks will be raised fourteen feet off the ground. This in a malarious country will, no doubt, prove very beneficial, but it can have little or no effect on constitutions undermined by malaria previous to admission to gaol. Since the central gaol system was introduced, it has become evident that, in the eight large gaols, with a total average population of 8,000 prisoners, where the men are worked harder at special industries, and the discipline is more strict, the general health has improved and is improving every year, whereas the returns of the thirty-eight district gaols, which contain about 7,000 to 8,000 prisoners, show that the death rate in them is increasing and is likely to increase. This extraordinary tendency to improvement in the one case and retrogression in the other is easily explained. Every healthy prisoner under forty-five years of age having a sentence of six months and more to serve has to be transferred from a district to a central gaol. All prisoners in bad health or those incapacitated for hard labour from age or disease are retained in the district gaols. This system has now been worked for five years, and the result is that a large proportion of the convicts in district gaols are weak and old men, who naturally would give a higher death rate, not only as compared with the prisoners of central gaols, but also as compared with the free population of the districts in which these gaols are situated. I have shown that it is unreasonable, in considering gaol mortality as a whole, to take the death rate of a few small gaols and to generalise on these figures as representing the state of the gaols of a province, but this is what has actually been done by Mr. O'Donnell in his questions in the House of Commons.

"There is only one other point I would like to refer to, and that is to the subject of whipping in Bengal gaols. The Government has been opposed to this form of punishment for minor offences, and I have myself written strongly on the subject. As soon as the returns for 1879 were tabulated, in March, 1880, and it was seen that the number of whippings were nearly double that of the previous year, orders were issued which have entirely checked the tendency to use whippings too frequently. For the information of those who have laid great stress on this particular point I would mention that there is no comparison between floggings as they are understood in English gaols and the whippings with the rattan adopted here. In the majority of cases the stripes did not exceed five in number, and there were very few above ten; 57,897 individual convicts passed through our gaols in 1879 who had to be subjected to discipline and labour; 51,435 offences against gaol rules, &c, were recorded—that is, about one offence to each individual brought under prison discipline. Of the 51,435 prisoners punished, 8,232 were whipped. In further considering the subject it ought to be remembered that in our gaols prisoners live in association, that the number of punishment cells is insufficient, and that the only other methods of punishment available were penal diet and fetters. With such limited means at his disposal for punishing prisoners, a superintendent was frequently placed in a position of considerable difficulty. He did not know what to do with cases in which prisoners had to be punished. Five stripes or more with the cane appeared to him an easy way out of the difficulty, and I have no doubt that this accounts for the increase in the number in 1879. There is no foundation whatever for the charges of deliberate cruelty which have been brought against superintendents. It is, perhaps, not known that the gaols of this province have visitors unconnected with the gaol department, who are required to inquire into the punishments used by superintendents. In 1879 more than 1,500 recorded visits were paid by visitors to the gaols of Bengal, and I am not aware of a single case in which any gaol officer was reported to have acted in a cruel manner as regards gaol punishments."

LABOURERS IN ASSAM.

THE following letter has been addressed to the Editor of the Times :—

"Sir,—In case any of your reader should be inclined to attach importance to the statements made by the member for Dungarvan to the Speaker last night, relative to the rate of mortality among imported labourers in the tea districts of Assam, and thus be led to infer that Assam is a particularly unhealthy country—no care being taken by the employers of the health of the coolies—I ask your permission to publish for general information the following extracts from the official memorandum of the Army Sanitary Commission on the report of the sanitary commissioner of Assam for 1879. Dr. De Renzy observes :—'It is quite a mistake to suppose that Assam is an unhealthy province. . . . I have seen a family of four purely European children who have lived for the last five years uninterruptedly in the plains of Assam, and who, when I last saw them, looked as ruddy and were as muscular, as well chested, and as well limbed, as full of fun and healthy vigour as any children of the same age in the healthiest part of England.' It is well known that children of European parents are the most susceptible of all subjects to so-called climatic influences. Dr. De Renzy describes the steps taken to improve the water supply of tea plantations, and the results deserve to be made widely known in India, as showing that obtaining good well water is a matter of no great difficulty. It appears that the circulation of his previous reports had called the attention of the tea planters to the subject, but there was difficulty in the work of well-sinking from want of the requisite skilled labour. The planters, however, were not to be beaten, and the following abstract from the report will show what they did, and the results :—'In many cases they set themselves to learn the business of well-sinking, and succeeded in making tolerably good wells of the common Indian type. In other cases they struck out a new plan altogether. They have used the large thirty-inch glazed sewer pipes (which are made at Calcutta) as a lining for the well, in lengths of about three feet; these are cemented together, and make a perfectly impervious tube from the surface of the ground to the depth of several feet below the permanent water level. The system has answered so well that a considerable trade in sewer pipes appears to have already sprung up.' It is hardly necessary to say that Mr. O'Donnell's assertion that engagements by coolies to proceed to the tea districts are 'compulsorily' made is entirely opposed to the facts of the case, and is as little to be relied on as his insinuation that the members of the Bengal Government are likely to be influenced by their 'interests' in tea.—Your obedient servant, ERNEST TYE, Secretary, Indian Tea Districts Association, St. Mary's Chambers, St. Mary Axe, Aug. 23."

THE INDIAN MAIL.

THE following letter has been addressed to the Editor of the Times :—

"Sir,—I observe in the interesting report of the Postmaster General which you published yesterday the following passage :—'With respect to foreign and colonial posts, an improvement has been made in the despatch of the night mail to Paris, the effect of which is to ensure an earlier and more regular delivery in that capital.' We are thankful for this, but there is one point to which I should like to call Mr. Fawcett's attention. It is that every Friday night's post from London to the Continent is an exception to the above improvement. In fact, Sir, the arrangements for the transmission of the Indian mail are a peril and a nuisance to every unfortunate traveller to and from the Continent to London, via Calais. It has often been my unhappy lot to leave London on Fridays by the night mail. On arriving at Dover, one finds the whole of the deck awning amidships laid out for the reception of mail bags. In addition to the usual hurry scurry for departure, the shooting of ill-used baggage down the long gangway to the deck, some hundreds of bags of mail matter are at the last moment brought down and piled in that part of the vessel which is most affected by people liable to nausea. Sometimes it is hardly possible to pass fore and aft, and I have often thought that in case of any accident this vast pile of bags in the middle of the deck would become a terribly serious impediment to passengers and seamen. So much for danger. The inconvenience is greater. You arrive at the end of the pier at Calais, and there, whatever the weather may be, you must wait until all the bags have been carried ashore, and packed into the Brindisi train, which starts first. I judge from my own observation when I say that on the average forty to fifty minutes are lost in the double transfer. I think I am correct in saying that the train is invariably late in leaving for Paris or Brussels, and, as a rule, 30 to 50 minutes late in arriving. In fact, if I am not mistaken, the whole Continental passenger service is thrown out of gear by the Brindisi mail. I have experienced similar inconvenience in travelling the other way. I do not think either the railway company or the postmaster general ought to be allowed to continue this vexatious and, as I here show, even dangerous arrangement. A special service ought long since to have been organised for the Indian mail. The postmaster general is making money and can well afford to pay the extra expense. If, after this, people continue to endure the inconvenience, or should suffer from some calamitous accident, as the result of these awkward arrangements, neither the Postmaster General nor the railway company can say that they sinned without knowledge.—I am, Sir, your faithful servant,

"Paris, Aug. 17."

THE ZENANA MISSION.

ON Monday a meeting was held in the Mayor's room, at the Leeds Town Hall, in connection with the Indian Female Normal School and Instruction Society, the object of which is to spread the gospel among the women of India by the establishment of normal schools, and by sending to India ladies trained as Zenana and medical missionaries. The Mayor (Ald. Tatham) presided. There was a large attendance, the audience being composed principally of ladies.

The MAYOR, in opening the proceedings, said the occasion that had brought them together was to show their interest in the Zenana or Indian Bible Mission. Those who had not studied the matter would be very little prepared for the state of degradation, slavery, and ignorance in which the women of India were kept. This position was not the outcome of Hinduism itself, and did not exist prior to the conquest of India by the Mahometans. Mahomet said a woman had no soul, and they all knew what was the abominable result of that style of teaching. In India the women were kept entirely ignorant. Girls at an early age were married, and when they were ten years of age they must be married, or by the unwritten law of the country they brought great reproach upon their families, and their families were prepared to make great sacrifices rather than endure that reproach. The consequence was that marriage became exceedingly costly, and it was said that any man with a large family of girls was absolutely ruined by the cost of finding husbands for those girls. When married a girl was kept in entire seclusion, with no means of improving her mind or getting information; and if she became a widow her lot was lamentable indeed. By some it was thought that a widow ought not to be allowed to live. She was regarded as being entirely unfitted to associate with her class. She was kept on low diet, her clothing was of the vilest description, and she was not allowed to lie on a bed but on the ground. The result was that widows tried any kind of expedient to relieve themselves from this state, and it was perhaps not to be wondered at that the suttee or burning of widows prevailed in former times. Although there was a very great work to be performed in improving the position of the women of India, there was a good prospect of success, because the women of India were beginning to understand the degradation of their position, and to desire instruction. We were responsible for the good government of India; and he believed that if we could elevate the women we should do more to promote the happiness of India than in any other way.

Miss BEILBY, a lady medical missionary from Lucknow, then addressed the meeting, and gave an interesting account of her work among women in India. She said the children of Hindu women were married when they were almost babies, and when eleven, twelve, or thirteen years of age they went to live with their mother-in-law, not as mistresses, but as almost the servant of the mother-in-law. One part of the house, which was called the zenana, was set apart for the women, and it was generally the worst part. With the exception of their husband, they were not seen by any man but their father and brothers, and when sick they were separated from the other members of the family. She described the difficulties with which she had to contend in consequence of the superstition of the people, and their dislike to have English people touching their food or anything they drank. There were 120 millions of women in India, and 40 millions were shut up in these zenanas, and could only be reached by zenana teaching missionaries or zenana medical missionaries. So strong was the prejudice in Upper India against a woman listening to a man, that women would not be considered respectable if they stood and listened to a man. In Upper India, therefore, they must have female agency. They wanted more workers—ladies who had given themselves to Christ, and who were willing to go and work for Him in India. They also wanted money. People in India gave liberally, and the fees received for medical assistance went to support the mission; but some ladies could not pay for the whole of their medical education, and so they tried to help those who were in that position, but who were willing to go out to India. Miss Beilby also stated that she had had an interview with the Queen, at Windsor Castle, with reference to the mission. Her Majesty asked her questions, and desired to know all about the work, and suggested one or two things that might possibly be done to relieve the sufferings of the women in India.

The Rev. A. R. CAVALIER (secretary of the mission) said he believed that if India was to be saved from infidelity and atheism and won to Christ at all, it must be by visiting the women at their own homes. There was, at the present time a society called the Theosophical Society of Great Britain and America. It was composed of atheists, and within the last two or three years it had established missionary agencies, and was sending out emissaries to India, Ceylon, and Burmah. Those emissaries told the Buddhist priests that the learned men of Europe and America had come to the conclusion that the Bible was false, and that Buddhism was the most moral as well as one of the most ancient of religions, and therefore that it had the greatest claim upon the people; that they had been sent out by the learned men of Europe and America to fraternise with the Buddhists, and to make Buddhism a religion which would convert the whole world. In the streets of Kandy these men actually received the worship which is given to the Buddhist priests; and so great was the effect of their abuse of God's Word that some copies of God's Word were taken by the heathen natives and kicked about the streets of Kandy. Some of the writings of Bradlaugh had been translated into the native languages and bound up closely resembling religious books. When infidelity was making so much effort to undo the work of the missionaries, they must lose no means whatever to secure the success of the Gospel. They wanted more lady missionaries, who could go to the houses of the women in India and tell them the glad tidings of salvation.

The Rev. Canon JACKSON said that by means of the Zenana Mission the women of India could be reached when no other Christian agency could possibly reach them. Whilst they were thus seeking to benefit the women of India, they should not forget that these women were the mothers of the children of India, and by taking Christian influences within the Zenana, they would not only be doing good to the mothers but to the little children. He hoped that the appeal in support of the mission would meet with a warm response.

The Rev. R. COLLINS (Vicar of St. Silas's), Mr. SYKES (Roundhay), and the Rev. E. G. INGHAM (Vicar of St. Matthew's) afterwards spoke in support of the object of the society. At the conclusion a collection was made in aid of the mission funds.

THE PESHAWUR TEA TRADE.

FROM a report on the Peshawur tea trade with Cabul and Central Asian countries it appears that from October, 1880, to January, 1881, 2,144 maunds of Indian tea and 7,904 maunds of China tea were exported from Peshawur. These figures include the whole of the tea exported over the frontier in the direction of Cabul and Bokhara. It has been ascertained that by far the greater proportion of the tea exported from Peshawur is consumed in Bokhara. There is a class of China tea known as "Kazaz," which has been from time to time imported to Bokhara from Russia. Persons who have long resided in Bokhara say that this tea is bought in Russia at Rs.40 per maund, and is sold in Bokhara at Rs.76 per maund. The road is closed to this trade, but these figures show how far Russian merchants can compete with the Indian trade. Black China tea is not drunk to any extent in Bokhara, but finds a market in Khokand. It sells in Peshawur at 6ans. per lb. Bokhara is the central mart. The Indian teas are exported thither, but for the most part are at once bought up by merchants from Samarkand, Tashkend, Khokand, and other outlying places, and are consumed in those countries. Of Indian teas, Lonka from Almore, Dera Doon, and Kangra sells at Rs.77 per maund. From the trade returns it appears that the price per maund in Peshawur is Rs.60. The merchants in Peshawur are of opinion that there is an increasing demand for Indian green teas. Some Indian black tea was sent by one merchant as an experiment to Bokhara, but the tea did not meet with approval. This may be due to the fact that the Indian black was the second and third quality, the heavy price of the first quality rendering its export unprofitable. The average journey to Bokhara takes from three to four months. Merchants bound for Bokhara do not seek for a market on the road. It entails trouble to unpack their goods; they start with the fixed intention of bringing back Bokhara silks and gold, and are sure of a certain profit. The route from Cabul runs by Bamian, Saighan, Doaba, Heibak, Hasrat, Sultan, Khulm, Balkh, Killefort, Karshi, to Bokhara. The market in Bokhara is most uncertain, and there is a singular want of concert among the exporting merchants. The market is frequently overstocked, and the smaller men come back with heavy losses. The consumption of tea in Cabul is insignificant, as compared with that of Bokhara, and all merchants connected with tea agree in saying that Cabul will never afford a large market for the sale of teas. A saying has almost passed into a proverb in Bokhara, that "a man drinks tea or dies," and it is clear that Bokhara and the neighbouring countries will always be a great and increasing market for teas.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

A. NEW EDITION OF ROGET'S THESAURUS.*

THE old "Thesaurus" of Dr. Roget is a work of reference that has been well known in the schools of India for more than twenty years past. The "Life of the Honourable Onocool Chunder Mookerjee," made famous by an amusing critique in the Saturday Review, was a delightful example of the misuse to which this excellent work may be put; for a careful analysis showed that each sentence in that wonderful biography had been created by substituting for each word of the original sentence (in ordinary English) the most unusual synonym that could be found for it in Roget. But the value of the work as an aid in English composition is very great indeed; and by natives of India it can be very usefully used much in the same way as that in which English schoolboys use the "Gradus" in Latin verse composition. The new edition, which has recently been published by the author's son, is a great improvement on the old one; for it is much enlarged, and has the inestimable advantage of a tremendous index with any number of cross-references.

*"Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases," classified and arranged so as to facilitate the expression of Ideas and assist in Literary Composition. By PETER MARK ROGET, M.D., F.R.S. New Edition, enlarged and improved, partly from the Author's Notes, and with a full Index, by JOHN LEWIS ROGET. London: Longmans, Green, & Co.

A PLANTER'S ORGAN.

WE have read with much pleasure the first number of a new monthly publication, started at Colombo in the planting interest. It is published at the office of the Ceylon Observer and consists chiefly of extracts judiciously selected from that paper and from the Indian Home and Colonial journals. The present preliminary issue the conductors say, cannot be taken as a fair specimen of what will follow, and it will be their endeavour to find a place in the pages of The Tropical Agriculturist for everything bearing on the practical work of a tropical planter. We get capital articles on the various details of coffee planting; also numerous paragraphs dealing with tea, cocoa, cinchona, sugar, cardamoms, cinnamon, and other tropical products. The magazine supplies a distinct want and ought to succeed.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE KHULNA-JESSORE RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE terms on which it was originally proposed that the Khulna-Jessor Railway be constructed, differed in an important particular from those finally agreed upon with Messrs. Rothschild. The financial member, in view of the advantage likely to be derived from the precedent, was very anxious that the line should be undertaken without a Government guarantee; and Messrs. Rothschild were willing to forego this condition. But they proposed, as a quid pro quo, a more favourable arrangement for the ultimate taking over of the line by the Government. This apartment was opposed by the Public Works Department, and the result was that Messrs. Rothschild fell back upon the guarantee of 4 per cent. for five years.

Not knowing what the alternative terms proposed by the concessionaires for the taking over of the line were, we can, of course, form no opinion as to which of the two arrangements would have been the more advantageous from a financial point of view. The gain of inaugurating a system of railways constructed by private capitalists without a guarantee would, however, have been very great, and the existing state of the money market presented a more than usually favourable opportunity for the purpose.—Englishman.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR'S "BILLETS-DOUX."

In a document recently published the Government of India, in the Department of Finance and Commerce, expresses a firm resolution to obtain certain requisites for the administration of this land, not from home through the Secretary of State, but in India. The Bengal Government has been ordered to call on the Bombay, Cawnpore, and Calcutta cotton mills for tenders for red tape—an article which, as everyone knows, is essential to good Government. Nor could the affairs of the country be duly and righteously administered in the absence of rulers; and these—round, flat, and parallel—are, says his excellency the Governor in Council, to be manufactured locally. But reading through the list, one soon comes to articles which it might be better to obtain neither through the Secretary of State nor through local firms; in fact, they might be dispensed with altogether. For instance, "envelope stands of fancy wood, with compartments of sizes;" which, the Department of Finance and Commerce sagaciously remarks, can be made in Calcutta and other towns. But who are the officials who cannot govern this God-granted country without envelope stands of fancy wood? Were collectors in the habit of sending valentines to the Board of Revenue, if Lieutenant Governors had, ex officio, to write billetts doux, if administration reports were in ballad form, then fancy envelope cases, dainty note paper, and pink-sealing wax, should certainly be procured at the expense of the State.

But his Honour a Lieutenant Governor never writes a billet doux—well, hardly ever; reports get prosy, and the Bengal Government might as well buy hair pins as fancy cases for envelopes.—Pioneer.

THE LIBERAL MINISTRY AND INDIA.

The present advisers of her Majesty, before stepping into office, had committed themselves to a certain line of domestic and foreign policy, as prompted at the time by dictates of duty not quite untainted with the animus of party spirit. This they have since tried for the sake of consistency, to carry out only so far as the circumstances of their altered position could permit of being done with safety. The course pursued by them would seem to be marked with the precaution which veteran politicians, such as the leaders of the present Government, seldom fail to put under requisition while in the possession of office so as to prolong its tenure. Sixteen months now passed must have sufficed to convince the general public that most of the liberal professions of the Liberal Party, made at the time of their attempts to snatch the reins of the Government from the hands of rivals, have been but partially and tardily tried to be carried out since the success of those attempts. All their official acts and proceedings would seem to be carefully hedged round with circumspection and carefulness begotten of a desire to preserve to themselves and their following the sweets of office as long as practicable. Hence the aspect of their accomplishments as ministers being so faint in colour and so poor of effect when contrasted with the brilliant prospect that had been held up to the public imagination before and at the time of the general elections, as the probable outcome of a liberal administration. Hence the disappointment now being felt by the subjects of the Crown in many parts of the empire, specially, the people of India. The Vernacular Press Act, so sturdily denounced by the Liberal party when in opposition as a measure of unwise public policy and calculated to cause unmerited and wanton heart-burning to millions of her Majesty's loyal subjects, still continues to disgrace the statute books; the extravagant expenditure for carrying on the administration, so often strongly condemned in and out of Parliament by Liberal statesmen of all ranks, is still in vogue; unequal and oppressive taxes remain in force as yet in spite of the urgent appeals and recommendations of the most respectable authorities for their modification and repeal. To be brief, instances could be multiplied ad infinitum to show that, as regards India, the Liberal party since coming into power has failed a long way to art up to its professions as declared when they formed her Majesty's Opposition, while in the case where any real attempts have been made to redeem their pledges the same would appear to be of the most paltry and halting character.—Bombay Chronicle.

BENGAL GAOLS.

THERE is no doubt that Dr. Lethbridge is entitled to public sympathy in regard to recent discussion condemnatory of gaol management in Bengal. He is the victim of the Prison Conference almost without any fault of his own. He was ordered to introduce a certain scale of diet into the gaols under his charge, and he did so, with the unhappy results which he has been the first to denounce. It is unfortunate for him that he has not yet informed the public of the means he adopted to secure his being immediately informed of the result on convict health of a marked diminution in their food supply. In his letter to the Times he states that the diet scale recommended by the Conference was introduced on March 1, 1879. The medical returns for 1879 were tabulated and brought under consideration in March 1880. We presume the medical returns include mortality returns, which we always understood were supplied oftener than once a year. It is scarcely credible that the inspector general is left in ignorance of the health condition of his gaols from year's end to year's end. It is to be regretted that the fact has been put in a form so liable to be misunderstood as the passage in the Times letter makes it. We do not for an instant believe that Dr. Lethbridge was unaware down to March, 1880, that in the previous year the gaol population was dying away at a rate of, as he puts it, "an extraordinary mortality," yet we are afraid this is what most readers of the Times will imagine. This is the more unfortunate as we have no doubt of the entire truth of Dr. Lethbridge's statement that he "courts the fullest inquiry." A chief point made by the inspector general, following Lord Hartington, is that the high mortality in Dinagepur and Baraset was caused by the transfer to these gaols of invalid prisoners. It does not seem to strike either of these gentlemen that if these prisoners had been left in other and less "commodious" and healthy gaols the mortality of the average would probably have been higher. The question is why there were so very many invalid prisoners in all the gaols, particularly when Sir Ashley Eden has put it on record that "the great sickness and mortality of the year cannot be attributed to the general state of public health," which was unquestionably good in 1879. Dr. Lethbridge also urges that mortality is always high in the sub-Himalayan districts. This is true, but explains only a small fraction of the general fatal sickness. Rajshahi, with a mortality of 177.4 per thousand in 1879, does not come under this denecence; neither does Singbhum with 212, nor Bogra with 262 in 1879, nor Balasur with 110.8, nor Mymensingh with 142.8 per thousand in 1880. We believe that Dr. Lethbridge would have been much better advised in holding by his short rations theory as a whole in those two years. He has done a public service in courageously proclaiming the real cause of the mortality. The manner in which he despatches the Prison Conference is an admirable bit of official sarcasm. Says the inspector general: "As I was not a member of the conference, I am unable to say how the conference arrived at the idea that a dietary containing only 174 grains of nitrogen was sufficient for Bengali prisoners on hard labour." Judged by its work, this august body deserves nothing better than to be dropped in this contemptuous fashion.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE MAKHUM RAILWAY.—The Assam railway referred to in Reuter's telegram is a line about eighty miles in length, to be constructed by the Assam Railway Trading Company (Limited), for the purpose of opening out and working the rich coalfields and timber resources of Makum. The line, which is to be metre gauge, will extend from the banks of the Brahmaputra at Debrogurh along the Government road towards Sadaya, terminating at the Talus Tea Estate. A branch line about twenty miles will extend to the Makum coalfields. The Government engages to give a subsidy of a lakh of rupees per annum if the revenue from the railway does not yield a revenue of five per cent. on the railway capital. This subsidy to remain current for twenty years. The Government have given the company a lease of the Makum coalfields estimated at thirty square miles for twenty years, renewable on favourable terms. The quantity of coal available is very large, and the quality according to the records of the Geological Department much superior to that of any other coal in India. The licence to cut and trade in timber gives the concessionaires a right to the Nabor and other forests in the vicinity of Makum. This concession is also current for twenty years.—Times of India.

TRANSIT DUES IN KOTAH.—Transit duties on all goods save opium and other intoxicating drugs have just been abolished in Kotah, Rajputana, by the Maharao of that State.—Ibid.

COFFEE IN BURMA.—The Government of British Burma is reported to be making an effort to put new life into the southern districts of the province by offering liberal terms to intending coffee planters.—Ibid.

THE C.D. ACT IN CALCUTTA.—The enforcement of the C. D. Act in Calcutta is to be restricted to those portions of the city frequented by soldiers and sailors.—Ibid.

BENGAL NON-REGULATION PROVINCES.—The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned a scheme for the gradual abolition of the grades of assistant commissioners in the non-regulation districts in Lower Bengal, and the appointment instead of additional joint magistrates and deputy magistrates. The scheme will be carried out as vacancies occur in the commission.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.—The following is an extract from the half-yearly report of the directors of the Dunbar Cotton Mill, Calcutta, dated June 30:—"The mill has given an out-turn of 9,20,647 lbs. for the six months, as against 8,52,300 lbs. for the corresponding period last year. This increase is mainly due to the working of rather longer hours by the electric light, which has been in use for the greater portion of the half-year, and has worked to our satisfaction. The lights in the Dunbar Mill were supplied by the Indian Electric Light Company, Calcutta.—Ibid.

KASHMIR.—The marriage of the second son of the Maharaji of Cashmere takes place at Jammu in October next.—Englishman.

MANIPUR.—A final decision has been arrived at in regard to the formation of the Manipur contingent. The scheme is to be abandoned.—Ibid.

MADRAS.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—Mr. Grant Duff is a man who would, in one respect, have taken the fancy of the late lamented Mr. John Gilpin, the citizen of "famous London town." Mr. Grant Duff has a "frugal mind." He has telegraphed for some of Mr. Adam's admirably selected horses, but has declined to pay the prices asked for them in a way that has surprised people.—Madras Mail.

MINING LEASES IN MYSOR.—It is officially announced to-day that the Maharaja has sanctioned the following rules for granting mining leases in Mysor. They do not apply to the Kolar concessionaires. Each lease is limited to a block not exceeding a square mile, and will be given for a term of thirty years, according to priority of application. The lessor has to make his own arrangements with the holders of lands in regard to entering on possession, and has to pay an annual assessment or quit rent in addition to an assessment of eight annas per acre on arable lands, and taxes of every description, and a royalty of 5 per cent. on the gross proceeds from all gold metallic ores, coal, and other substances of a merchantable nature, and 10 per cent. on the saleable value of precious stones; the lessee to search and mine for gold in the most effectual manner, without intermission. After the expiry of the first two years of the lease Government reserves the option of levying in lieu of royalty an assessment of five rupees per acre. The lessee to keep regular accounts, plans, and maps of the mines. The working to be open to the inspection of Government officers.

Government are authorised to recover arrears of rent by distraint and sale of property. In the event of a breach of covenant on the part of the lessee, Government to have the power to cancel the lease within six months. Any lessee not desiring to renew his lease is bound to re-deliver the land with all the appurtenances in good repair, with books, maps, and plans, free of any claim on account of buildings or other property left standing. Any arrangement for commuting the royalty by the present payment of a lump sum may be considered. No lease is to be granted until the applicant deposits a sum of Rs.1,000 as security for the proper fulfilment of the contract.—Bombay Gazette.

A MADRAS BARRISTER.—Mr. Cadwallader Waddy, of the Middle Temple, a member of the Madras bar, has been suspended, by resolution of the benchers of his inn, confirmed by the chief justice of Madras, from the privileges.—Ibid.

THE ROHILLAS IN THE HYDERABAD STATE.—A report was received from Palmoor, a village on the Mukhtul road, that a band of Rohillas were creating a disturbance in the place. A troop of the African Cavalry Guards, under Lieut. Maitland, left yesterday morning for Palmoor.—Deccan Times.

BOMBAY.

CHOLERA IN BERAR.—A correspondent writes from Akola, July 29: Cholera has made its appearance in the native hamlets, and fourteen fatal cases are reported. The disease still prevails at Khamgaum and Mulkapoor. There has been no rain for three days, which is most advantageous to the kharif plants. At Akola the death-rate by cholera is reported at 49 per cent., and at Khamgaum 35 per cent., the total cases attacked being 33 and 165 respectively to date.—Ibid.

THE REV. D. MACPHERSON.—We regret to state that the Rev. Duncan Macpherson, senior chaplain of the Scotch church in Bombay, died suddenly on Saturday morning of cholera. The funeral, which took place at Sewree Cemetery on Saturday afternoon, was very largely attended. Dr. Macpherson had twenty-one years' service, the greater part of which had been spent in Bombay.—Ibid.

A FRENCH COMPANY AT ADEN.—An official note informs us that news has been received from Aden that a Mr. Arnoux, styling himself "director of the France Ethioienne Company," has reached Aden, and announced his intention of leaving at once for Obokh with a party of about thirty persons, mostly Frenchmen, with their families. The object of the company is to open up communication with Shoa by a new route passing to the north of Lake Aussa, and entering Shoah from the north. Mr. Arnoux professes to have obtained concessions giving his company special rights to certain mines.—Ibid.

THE RAJPUTANA STATE RAILWAY.—It is notified in general orders that the Government of India have decided that all officers proceeding to or from Bombay on duty at the public expense, from or to all stations north of Cawnpore, including the Gwalior, Rohilkund, and Oudh commands, shall henceforth travel via the Rajputana State Railway. That route is also to be used by individuals and small parties in cases when proper arrangements can be made for their food, &c., during the journey without involving additional expense to the State. Troops requiring to be detained at Deolali, and invalids will continue to travel by the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways as heretofore.—Ibid.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR QUETTA.—The orders directing the 25th Regiment N.L.I., to be held in readiness to proceed at short notice to relieve the 8th Regiment N.I. in the Bolan have been countermanded, and this regiment will accordingly remain at Bombay until required to move to Bhuj next trooping season. We are informed from Allahabad that the 14th Sikhs, at Umballa, have been warned to relieve the 8th Regiment, N.I. should it be considered necessary to do so; but so long as everything remains quiet in the Pishin and beyond Chaman there is little likelihood of General Hume's division requiring reinforcements.—Ibid.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—The fourteenth annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Bombay Bank was held on Wednesday afternoon, under the presidency of Mr. James Thorburn. In moving the adoption of the report, the chairman stated that, in spite of money being even cheaper than it was last year, the average rate of interest on short loans on Government paper having been about 4½ per cent., as against 5½ per cent. the previous year, the earnings of the bank were nevertheless considerably larger, and nothing in the shape of bad debts had to be provided for. He congratulated the shareholders with some degree of confidence on the result which had enabled them to strengthen the reserve fund, which now stands at 22½ lakhs, by the addition of Rs.25,000. The chairman, after entering into other particulars regarding the prosperous state of the bank, observed that a sum of Rs.10,000 had been set aside to form the nucleus of a fund for the benefit of its worn out European and Natives employes. The report having been adopted, the Hon. J. N. Graham and Mr. Ahmedbhai Hubibbhai were reelected directors of the bank, and Messrs. H. R. Cormack and Mr. Edujee Nusserwanjee Setna were reelected auditors of the bank, Rs.750 being fixed as their remuneration for each audit. The thanks of the shareholders having been passed to the directors and officers of the bank for their management of its affairs, the meeting separated.—Ibid.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, AUG. 22.

GRANTS AND SUPPLIES TO AFGHAN AMEERS.

On the motion of Mr. Onslow, an address for return of the amount of money given by the Indian Government to the different Ameers of Afghanistan since the Ameership of Dost Mahomed (inclusive), also the number of guns, both large and small, and the amount of ammunition for the same period, was agreed to as an unopposed return.

Mr. ONSLOW asked the Secretary of State for India whether his Excellency the Viceroy had applied for sanction from the Home Government to give Abdur Rahman a further grant of money, arms, or ammunition to defend himself against Ayub Khan; and, if his Excellency had not so applied, whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to interfere in any way in the internal affairs of Afghanistan by assisting one candidate for the Ameership against another; or, whether it was the policy of her Majesty's Government to look on and leave the result of the present conflict to the survival of the fittest.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In reply to the hon. member's question, I have to say that although we have been in constant communication with the Viceroy of India on the subject of the state of affairs in Afghanistan, we have received no information whatever to the effect that Abdur Rahman Khan has made any application either for money, arms, or ammunition. So far as we are aware, it is not the intention of the Government of India to interfere in any way in the contest now proceeding between Abdur Rahman Khan and Ayub Khan. With reference to the return which the hon. member moved for as to the amount of money given by the Indian Government to various Ameers of Afghanistan, I find, on inquiry, that the information as to the money and arms supplied to former Ameers is not in the India-office, and we could not give it as an unopposed return without communicating with the Government of India on the subject.

Mr. E. STANHOPE asked whether any further papers relating to Afghanistan would be laid on the table.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: They are in preparation and will be laid on the table before the close of the session.

Mr. ONSLOW said he had understood from the noble lord that there would be no objection to produce the return. He had given notice last week in order that the noble lord might telegraph to the Government of India in case of necessity; and the House had agreed to the return. He should be sorry to do anything that could not be done regularly.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The matter is one that could hardly be disposed of satisfactorily by telegraph. If the hon. member would like to have a return of the sum of money and the arms given to the present Ameer, there will be no objection to its production.

The SPEAKER said that the motion for the return had been put from the chair on the understanding that it was an unopposed return. Being opposed, it must be cancelled by his authority.

Mr. ONSLOW explained that if he had not understood that it was an unopposed return he would not have moved it as he had done.

THE PERAK EXPEDITION.

Mr. CROPPER asked the Under Secretary for the Colonies whether the expenses incurred by the Indian Government in connection with the expedition against Perak in 1876 had been refunded; and whether any final settlement between the Imperial Government and the colony for the cost of military operations had been made, and, if so, would he state what proportion of their charges had been borne by this country and what by the colony.

Mr. COURTNEY: It was arranged that the expenses incurred by the Indian Government, the War-office, and the Admiralty should be repaid in three annual instalments of $180,000. The first instalment was paid in May last and was applied in liquidation of the Indian claim, leaving a small balance, which will be paid out of the next instalment on Dec. 31, or earlier if a proposed loan is launched. In the result, no part of the charge of the expedition will be borne by this country. (Hear, hear.)

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

Captain AYLMER (for Mr. Grantham) asked the Secretary for India whether, the Master of the Rolls having refused to allow the official liquidator of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company to accept the offer of her Majesty's Government to purchase the company's undertaking for sums amounting in the whole to £1,391,217 4s. 2d. on the conditions following—viz., that it should be divided between the company's ordinary stockholders and its officers, and the mortgagees of the undertaking, so that the stockholders should be repaid the whole of their capital with a premium of 6 per cent., and the officers receive a douceur of £12,000, while the mortgagees should accept in discharge of their securities three-fourths only of their capital, and should also forego two years' interest thereon—Her Majesty's Government will modify those conditions so as (without increasing the total amount to be paid by the Government) to give the mortgagees their principal and interest or to leave to the decision of the Court the mode of division among the parties interested of the sum offered by the Government for the undertaking; and, if not, on what ground did they refuse to modify their conditions as to division; and whether the Government would lay upon the table of the House a letter from the Right Hon. Edward Pleydell Bouverie, dated October 2, 1880, to the Secretary of State for India, Viscount Enfield's reply thereto, dated November 6, 1880, Mr. Livingstone Learmonth's letters to the Secretary of State for India in Council, dated respectively July 5, 1881, and August 5, 1881, and the replies (if any) which may have been given thereto.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The facts are as suggested by the question; but I may remark, in passing, that the "capital" referred to means the amount for which the mortgagees hold debentures, not the amount paid by them, which was 82 per cent. The Master of the Rolls declined to sanction the arrangement merely because a statutory majority of the mortgagees had not accepted the terms offered to them. I see no reason in the events which have recently occurred for modifying the conditions referred to in the question. The board of directors of the company made certain proposals which we accepted, and I have not received from the representatives of the company any further communications on the subject. There is no objection to the letters of the 2nd of October and the 6th of November, 1880, being given. The correspondence of 1881 is not yet complete, but may be given in a few days.

RUSSIAN ADVANCES IN ASIA.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the British Cabinet had addressed a remonstrance to Russia upon the fact that Askabad, which he stated a few weeks ago was the extreme limit of the Russian outposts, had been made the headquarters of the Russian commander, and occupied by a large force, Askabad being over 300 miles nearer British India than Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian, which was General Skobelev's headquarters a year ago; whether it was true that the Russian cavalry had recently been surveying the Kershef road, close to Meshed, the capital of Persian Khorassan, as the newest boundary; whether the British Government intended to protest against the violation of Persian territory by the Russian generals, and to insist upon the presence of a British officer on the Delimitation Commission for the Persian frontier; whether he had seen the statement of the correspondent of the République Française, in Central Asia—that "in a very short time the Tekkes themselves will furnish the White Czar with excellent cavalry. The main result is this. The road to Herat is broadly open, without the least fear of danger, without the least difficulty to encounter. There is nothing more than to march some 250 miles, and to say, 'J'y suis.' The Tekkes, the bravest people of Turkestan, have submitted. The road to Herat has behind it a good railroad to convey men and provisions. It is only an affair of a year or two, and amid admirable conditions of security, rest, and every kind of facility. What could Persia do against Russia? Russia is about to put her hands upon the keys which will open to her the gates of Afghanistan;" and whether he could state how much of the Russian railway from the Caspian towards Herat was already completed.

Sir C. DILKE feared that he could add very little to what had already been said about these matters. He had frequently stated that there was a Russian force at Askabad. With regard to the second branch of the question, he could only say that the Government had not heard of any crossing of the Persian frontier by Russian cavalry, and that they had no intention of protesting against a violation of territory of which they had not even heard. The question of the proposed presence of a British officer on the Delimitation Commission for the Persian frontier was under consideration. The fourth branch of the question consisted of a long quotation from a French newspaper, which he had not previously seen. The subject to which the fifth branch of the question referred had already been explained in the House of Commons. He could not give the House any fresh information on that subject.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT, being of opinion that the hon. baronet had not really answered his question, gave notice that he would draw attention to the insufficiency of the information of the Government on the points to which those questions referred.

FRONTIERS OF RUSSIA AND PERSIA.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT wished to ask the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether, in view of the negotiations going on between Russian and Persian officials, and of the interest which the Government had always shown in the question of the frontiers of Persia, the Government would not at once take steps to insist upon delimitation commissioners being appointed, that the Government might know what was going on.

Sir C. DILKE said he had already stated that there would be a delimitation commission.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON then rose to make his annual financial statement with regard to India. The noble Marquis said: No one, I am sure, can regret more than I do that I am under the necessity of making a statement with regard to the finances of India at so late a period of the session, when it will be quite impossible for it to receive so much attention as the subject deserves. The House is aware that, in consequence of the exigencies of the present session, more exciting topics, although, perhaps, not more interesting, have also had to be postponed to a very late period of the session, and I can assure the House that it is only in consequence of the exceptional circumstances of the present session, and not in any degree of any desire on my part, that the statement has been postponed to so unseasonable a moment. Sir, the lateness of the period at which I speak also warns me that I ought to make my statement as brief as I can. It is, I am afraid, impossible to make my statement very short, and all I can do is to endeavour to waste no time of the House by any preliminary observations, and to proceed as rapidly as I can to lay the facts and statements before the House. The statement deals, as usual, with the accounts and estimates of three years. In the first place there are the closed accounts of 1879-80, which are now no longer a matter of estimate or uncertainty. Then there is the regular or revised estimate, which was framed at the end of the financial year just closed, and of which a public statement was made for the year 1880-1; then there is the Budget estimate, or estimate framed for the year 1881-2. As to the year 1879-80, the accounts show that the estimated revenue was £64,562,000, and the estimated expenditure £65,917,000, showing a deficit of £1,355,000. This Budget was last year converted into a regular estimate, which showed a result of £67,615,000 revenue, and £67,285,000 expenditure, or a surplus of £329,515; and in the spring of this year, when this regular estimate was converted into a stated account, the result was—Revenue, £68,484,666; expenditure, £69,667,615; showing a deficit of £1,182,949. Thus the revenue increased by £3,922,000 over the Budget estimate presented in 1879, and by £869,000 over the regular estimate formed in the spring of last year. But, on the other hand, the expenditure increased by £3,750,000 over the Budget estimate, and by £2,382,000 over the regular estimate. The general result is that the regular estimate showed a net improvement of £1,685,000 over the Budget estimate; but that improvement, as shown by the accounts, was converted into a more unfavourable result by £1,513,000 than the regular estimate, although the net result was £172,000 better than when the Budget estimate of 1879 was formed. I stated last year that opium brought £1,900,000 in excess of the estimate formed when the Budget was framed, and that there was an additional receipt of £1,000,000 under the head of productive public works; while on the side of the expenditure there was a saving of £500,000 upon ordinary public works. I stated at the same time that there was an estimated increase of £2,532,000 on the charge for war and frontier railways. As a matter of comparison between the accounts and the regular estimate there is nothing remarkable on which I need detain the House, except to say that most sources of revenue showed a slight improvement with the exception of opium, which failed to reach the regular estimate by £148,000, and salt, which fell short by £53,000. On the expenditure side £1,568,000 more than was calculated in the regular estimate for war and frontier railways came on the charge of the year. But that, as I will show by-and-by, was a matter of very little importance, because charges very much in excess of that sum were incurred during that year and came into the accounts of the year subsequent. Before I proceed to state the figures for the years 1880-81 and 1881-82 it might be convenient that I should give some explanation on one point, which, if not borne in mind, might lead to some confusion and misconception—I refer to the Treasury contribution of £5,000,000 in aid of the war, which has been brought into the estimate of revenue. The House is aware of the terms upon which the contribution was made. The debt of £2,000,000 incurred to the Home Government by India in 1879 and remitted has been estimated as revenue, half a million was paid to India in the last financial year, half a million in the present financial year, another half a million will be paid next year, and so on, until the whole sum of £5,000,000 is made up. The House must bear in mind that the balance-sheet of the finance accounts contains two sets of figures, the first those of the revenue and expenditure of the year, the next those of the debt, deposit, and other transactions, the whole making up the account of the receipts and disbursements of the year. If this contribution made by this country to India had been unconnected with any special expenditure it would only have been right that this sum of £5,000,000 should never come into the accounts of revenue at all. It would have simply taken its place in the accounts of receipts and disbursements. But, in the special circumstances in which this contribution has been made, it is in reality as clearly a receipt in diminution of the war charge as if derived from the increased proceeds of railways and telegraphs, for which credit has been already taken. As the whole of the war expenditure has been or will be brought into the accounts and estimates of the year to which it relates as expenditure, it was necessary to determine how this contribution in aid of that expenditure should be brought to account as revenue. It was impossible to bring it to account as part of revenue received in the former years of which the accounts are now closed, and it would be extremely inconvenient to bring it to account as revenue of the year in which it was received. If that course had been adopted the accounts of the next four years would have been disturbed by the entry of £500,000 as revenue really received. The course, therefore, agreed upon between the Government of India and the Secretary of State in Council as the most convenient way of showing this sum as revenue was to show it as nearly as possible as part of the estimated cost of the war years, thus leaving the years that follow as nearly as possible unaffected by the war expenditure. For the purpose of estimate, therefore, the sum of £5,000,000 has been divided into two parts, £2,000,000, which is put down to revenue in the regular estimate of 1880-81, and £3,000,000, for which credit is taken in the present financial year. It is hoped and expected that before the accounts of 1880-81 are finally closed it will be possible to ascertain almost accurately the amount of the war charge that will come in in the present year. When this is ascertained that portion of the £5,000,000 will, as nearly as it can possibly be ascertained, be entered as part of the balance of the year closed. The House will therefore bear in mind in the figures I have to lay before it for 1880-81 and 1881-82 that the account of revenue has been increased by £2,000,000, owing to the Treasury contribution in 1880-81, and by £3,000,000 owing to the Treasury contribution for 1881-82. I now come to the regular estimate of 1880-81. I will state how the regular estimate of 1880-81 compares with the closed account of 1879-80. The accounts of 1879-80 show, as I have already said, a revenue of £68,484,666, and an expenditure of £69,667,615, showing a deficit of £1,183,000. For 1880-81 the regular estimate is £70,783,615, while the expenditure is £77,003,382, showing a deficit of £6,219,767. The revenue of 1880-81 is £2,299,000 larger than the revenue of the preceding year 1879-80, while the expenditure is £7,336,000 in excess. The whole result is that the year 1880-81 is £5,037,000 worse than 1879-80. I have said that the revenue of 1880-81 shows an increase of more than £2,000,000 over the preceding year, but if the House bears in mind the explanation I have given it will perceive that that increase is almost entirely due to the Treasury contribution of £2,000,000. The excess of the expenditure of the latter year is, as I have said, £7,336,000. Now, the budget estimate was framed in February, 1880, while the regular estimate was framed in March of the present year. The Budget estimate of revenue for 1880-81 is £66,746,000 or a surplus of £417,000. The regular estimate of revenue is £70,783,615, and of expenditure £77,003,382, which leaves a deficit of £6,219,767. The revenue as taken in the regular estimate is £4,037,000 in excess of that estimated in the Budget; but, on the other hand, the expenditure is £10,674,000 greater than was estimated in February, 1880. Of course, as I have already stated, the £4,000,000 improvement in the regular estimate is due to the Treasury contribution. I stated last year that besides £3,200,000 in respect of the war as an addition to the regular estimate of 1879-80, £3,500,000 must be added to the Budget estimate of 1880-81 for the same reason. But only £1,568,000 was shown in the accounts of 1879-80, leaving £5,132,000 to be added to the charge for 1880-81. As I have already said, only £1,568,000 of that sum was brought to account in the year 1879-80, leaving on the estimate stated to the House last year £5,132,000 to be added as a charge on 1880-81. The actual addition, after including the Treasury contribution of £2,000,000, is £7,166,000, which shows a more unfavourable result than the Budget estimate. Now I will state the principle sources of the difference between the regular and the Budget estimates. On the revenue side the chief source is, in the first place, opium, which shows a difference of £1,218,000. The Budget estimate was a high one—£7,250,000—but the regular estimate shows that the net revenue reached £8,468,000, or £1,218,000 more than could be estimated as a high Budget estimate. The other chief sources of difference are excise £309,000, and customs £351,000. On the other hand, there is a deficiency of £295,000 on the land revenue, which is mainly due to the fact that the census was taken in the spring of this year, as the officials were fully occupied, and considerable arrears had to be postponed to the present year; and there is also a deficiency of £491,000 in respect of salt, the result of taking the receipts of the previous year as a basis of the estimate, which receipts were not fully made good in the year under discussion. On the side of expenditure the difference is £466,000, arising partly from the premium on the 3½ per cent. loan, £156,000; £172,000 more from an alteration in the date of paying interest; £86,000 from the conversion of stock; and £52,000 from other sources. There is also a saving of £621,000 under the head of loss from exchange, owing to the fact that, in consequence of the pressure by the war on the resources of India, it was impossible to remit the whole sum due from India last year, so that there was a proportionate diminution of loss. On the other hand, on the other side of the account there is a deficiency of £7,166,000 in respect of the war and frontier railway; on the army ordinary charge, £136,000; on superannuation, £241,000; on ordinary public works, £279,000; State railways, £441,000; productive public works, £508, and an item of £206,000 in respect of provincial surpluses, an apparent increase on which I shall have something to say presently. I now come to the Budget estimate for 1881-2, and I find that, as compared with the regular estimate for the year 1880-1, the figures stand as follows:—The regular estimate for 1880-1 puts the revenue at £70,783,000, and the expenditure at £77,003,000. The Budget estimate of the year gives the revenue as £70,981,000, and the expenditure as £70,126,000; showing the revenue improved by £198,000, and the expenditure diminished by £6,877,000. The regular estimate of 1880-1 showed a deficit of £6,219,000, whereas we expect a surplus of £855,000. The whole result of the year 1881-2 shows an improvement of £7,075,000 on the regular estimate of 1880-1. On comparing this with the estimate for the previous year we find a diminution on war charges proper of £9,885,000, and on frontier railway charges, £1,409,000, or a total diminution of £11,295,000, and after deducting the diminution of the war charges the Budget estimate shows an apparently worse result than the regular estimate by £4,221,000. This is accounted for, in the first place, by the much lower estimate that has been taken of the opium revenue. That had been estimated at £2,000,000 less than the receipts of 1880-1, and I think perhaps I ought to give the House the figures to show the principle on which this great apparent under estimate has been made. Now, the net receipts for 1880-1—the highest point ever reached—were £8,468,000, but it is not considered safe or prudent to reckon on the continuance of these large receipts. During the ten years of 1858-9 to 1867-8, the average net income from opium was £5,629,000; from 1868-9 to 1877-8, the average was £6,500,000; in 1878-9 the receipts rose to £7,699,000; in 1879-80 to £8,251,000, and they culminated in 1880-1 with £8,468,000. I must mention that the fluctuation of this opium revenue has always been very great. Only thrice within the last nineteen years has the estimate been within half a million of the gross receipts; three times the actual receipts failed to reach the estimate by £1,200,000, and in the fifteen other years the receipts exceeded the estimates by the average sum of £1,000,000. It has frequently been inculcated on the Government of India by various Secretaries of State that a prudent estimate of this sort of revenue is to be taken, and the most recent despatch sent to them on this subject expresses a doubt as to the wisdom of very high estimates, and enjoins a more prudent course for the future. (Hear.) Now, this diminution of £2,000,000 on the opium revenue accounts for £2,000,000 out of the £4,000,000 I have already referred to. The next large item is one of £1,500,000 for famine insurance, so that we have now accounted for £3,500,000 of this sum, and leave £800,000 to be made up in other ways. I do not think that I need go into many details, but I will state to the House what are the chief sources both of improvement and of diminution, which are expected in this year's Budget, as compared with the regular estimates. In the first place, the chief sources of improvement are in the land revenue £687,000, which is partly due to the postponement of the census from the latter months of the past financial year to the early months of the present, and in the provincial balances, under which head there is an improvement of £797,000. On the other hand, the chief sources of diminution are—Customs £161,000 (and it has not been thought prudent to expect the recurrence of the large imports of 1880-81); telegraphs, £116,000; interest charges, £272,000; law and justice, £132,000 more, due to an increase of the establishment in Bombay; marine, £200,000, part of which is due to an increase of our forces in British Burma; loss by exchange, £510,000; miscellaneous, £103,000; ordinary public works, £401,000; army, £179,000; productive works, £105,000. The House will have observed that I have already referred to items of revenue and expenditure under the head of Provincial Surpluses and Provincial Deficits. It appears to me that some explanation on this subject ought to be given to the House. (Hear.) The system of provincial finance was commenced in the year 1870-71, and I will shortly state what effect these items of Provincial Surpluses and Provincial Deficits has upon the estimates of the present year. On the revenue side the revenue is stated to be increased by £709,000 under the head of Provincial and Local Deficits, and on the other hand the expenditure is stated to be diminished by £88,000 through the reduction of Provincial and Local Surpluses. There is, therefore, a net gain on these two items of £797,000. I think these items require some explanation. In the year 1870-71 the system of what is called Provincial Finance was introduced. Certain revenues, amounting to about £648,000, were made over for the Government of India to the local governments. Certain allotments were also made. Sums were allotted to them on the condition of their undertaking to provide for certain provincial and local services. The idea of the effect of that was that by giving to the provincial and local governments an interest in the careful collection of certain sources of revenue and in the expenditure of certain services, economy would result. They were given a balance of £200,000 to commence with, and they were authorised, within certain limits, to spend any increase over the balance which they were required to keep in the hands of the Government of India. From 1871-72 to 1875-76 the additional allotments amounted to about £5,000,000 annually. They were shown in the accounts as allotments for provincial services, and no explanation whatever of the expenditure by the provincial governments was given. But in the year 1876-77 the system was very considerably enlarged and extended. Additional revenues were placed under the control of the provincial and local governments, and the line "Allotments for Provincial Services" in the accounts were discontinued, but receipts and charges were shown in the general accounts under the various heads to which they belong. The Government of India really act as bankers to the provincial and local governments. The whole of the receipts and expenditure are included in the accounts and estimates. If the receipts of a local government have exceeded its expenditure, its balance is increased, and the amount by which it is increased, and to which the liability of the Government of India to the local government is increased, is shown in the accounts as a charge. If, on the other hand, the expenditure of the local government exceeds its receipts, its balance is diminished, and the liability of the Government of India to the local government is decreased, and the amount by which the liability is so decreased is shown on the side of revenue. The system has now obtained very considerable proportions. The revenues estimated to be received by the local governments in 1881-82 on their own account was £10,072,000; for certain specified local purposes, £2,751,000; from allotments for the central government, £4,287,000; and from other sources, £269,000; or a total local revenue for provincial and local governments of £17,380,900, or about one-fourth of the total gross revenues of India. I do not think I need trouble the House with the detailed sources of the revenue, but it may be interesting to the House to know the chief items of expenditure which have to be provided for out of this revenue of £17,380,900. The provincial Governments are expected to provide the following services:—Collection of land revenue, over £2,000,000; law and justice, £2,764,000; police, £284,000; education, £1,048,000; administration of minor departments, marine, educational, medical, &c., £1,832,000; and public works, £4,718,000. This system has worked, I believe, on the whole, in an extremely satisfactory manner. It is a step in the much needed direction of decentralisation. No doubt it is necessary that the richer provinces of India should pay more than their share before the general expenses of the general administration of government, and it may be even necessary that the richer provinces should assist in the development of the resources of the poorer ones; but no doubt the principle is a sound one that each local government should have an interest in the development of its own revenue, and in the economical expenditure of the services which it can itself control. A very glowing account of the results of this was recently given by Sir Ashley Eden, the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, who said:—

"That the system of decentralisation has been thoroughly successful in Bengal is sufficiently clear from the foregoing sketch. The revenues have rapidly increased, independently of any new taxation; useless expenditure has been curtailed; and funds have been made available for improvement under all branches of the administration. All grades of the service have shown the deepest interest in increasing the resources of Government, under the belief that the surplus revenue would be available for the good of the province. The three heads of improvable revenue made over to the management of the provincial Government, with an income of 165½ lakhs in 1876-7, will stand with an income of not less than 217½ lakhs in 1881-2. In the meanwhile, the Lieutenant Governor has been able to carry out numerous works of improvement on his own responsibility, many of which, under the previous system, would have been indefinitely postponed. Besides making a special contribution of 20 lakhs to the Imperial Treasury in time of need, he has been able during these five years to increase the staff of executive and judicial officers; to provide increased facilities for the administration of justice; to increase the grants for emigration; to make grants in aid of district communications, and of works of drainage, sanitation, and municipal improvements; to build school, colleges, and hospitals; to replace the huts, in which the public business was transacted or prisoners were confined by substantial masonry court-houses and gaols; to spend 20 lakhs on railways, which will bring in a large return; 5½ lakhs on tramways, three-quarters of a lakh on a steamer service, to improve communications with Assam, and two lakhs on a road to develop the trade with Thibet; to spend 11 lakhs in the first portion of a work which will develop the trade of Orissa and protect it from famine; and to spend 38½ lakhs on improving navigation, and providing a supply of pure water for the people; while 77½ lakhs have just been expended on great measures of material improvement, and the expenditure on ordinary public works has been increased from Rs.25,12,000, in 1877-8 to Rs.63,53,000, exclusive of expenditure on preliminary works of railway construction 1881-82; and while no legitimate outlay has been spared to strengthen every part of the administration, the five years' period, which opened with a credit balance of at least Rs.2,88,000 only, will close with a credit balance of at least Rs.14,46,000. When it is recollected that under the system which prevailed before 1871 every new charge required the sanction of the Imperial Government, that the decision of the demands of each province took no cognisance of the extent to which it had contributed to the Exchequer, that nothing was to be gained by economy, because money left unspent by any one Government was practically lost to it and only went to increase the amount to be scrambled for by all, some idea may be gained of the advantages which Bengal has reaped from the control of its own finances. There is no department of the service which has not felt the benefit of the financial independence conferred on the Government immediately responsible for its administration."

Well, Sir, that is Sir Ashley Eden's account of the working of this system in Bengal. I have not before me the results of the system in the other provinces. No doubt Bengal, being the most prosperous province, has profited more by this system than any other, but the same causes have brought about similar results in the other provinces. Indeed, I believe every Government is satisfied with the working of the system, and would be unwilling to revert to the former practice. I must add, however, that of course this system must tend to an increase—I believe a necessary increase—of expenditure. A very considerable part of the increase of £800,000 which I had to explain just now is due to expenditure undertaken by the local Governments; but if the system is to be a reality, and if it is to work as it was intended to work, it is absolutely necessary that when the provincial and local Governments have by economy increased their balances, they should be given the advantage of them, and should be allowed to extend them for the benefit of their province. There can be no doubt that this system of finance introduces confusion.

(Hear.) An increase in the revenue or a decrease in the expenditure of a provincial Government is neutralised in the general account by an apparent increase of expenditure under the head of contingent expenses. On the other hand, a decrease of revenue or an increase of expenditure is apparently balanced by an apparent increase of revenue under a separate heading. It is, no doubt, quite right that the provincial accounts in regard to the Government of India as regards their balances should be clearly and accurately stated; but I have very great doubt whether these headings should find their place in the general account of estimated expenditure and revenue. (Hear.) These accounts, in my opinion, should simply give an account of the revenue and expenses of what has been actually received or actually expended, either by the Government of India or by the local Government, and the relative position of the local Government to the Government of India with respect to balances should be made the subject of a separate account. I have to give to the House the chief figures with respect to the cost of the war in Afghanistan. The amounts as shown for each year are as follow:—In 1878-9, £2,976,000; in 1879-80, £6,416,000; in 1880-1, £5,590,000; total for three years, £14,982,000. I stated to the House last year that the estimate of the war expenditure was £18,184,000. The amount now shown in the regular estimates for these three years is—war charges, less receipts of all kinds, £15,861,000, and frontier railways, £4,465,000; or about £20,000,000. That is very nearly twice the amount estimated by Sir R. Strachey, in February, 1880, as the probable expenditure on the war. The estimate of expenditure for the close of 1880-1 was—war, £5,980,000; railways, £3,940,000; or a total of £9,920,000. The actual amount is over £20,000,000. To that amount is to be added for 1881-2 a charge in respect of the war of £2,300,000, and for railways, £880,000; giving altogether a total of £23,412,000. Deducting the amount paid by England, the net charge borne by India is £18,412,000. Well, that I believe to be an accurate account of the charge for war. I think I stated to the House last year that a committee had been appointed by the India-office to inquire into the cause of the mistake that had been made in the estimate of expenditure. That committee made a very careful inquiry, and has made a very full and careful report. I cannot enter into a discussion of that report now. It is enough to say the committee has recommended the adoption in India of the English system. That system was adopted last year by the Government of India, and under it, it is believed that the military expenditure for 1880-1 is known within a few days of the close of the year. Major Baring in his financial statement, which is before the House, says, the result of the change of system to which I have already alluded, is that the regular estimates for 1880-1 include not only sums outstanding in the years 1879-80, but also sums which, under the old system, would have figured in the account for the year 1881-2. The old system included in the account all payments made on vouchers before April 1, and in order to give time for audit the final closing of the account was delayed for six months. But during the progress of the war, as has unfortunately been discovered, these accounts had fallen very much into arrear, and, therefore, under the old practice—perhaps it would not be correct to say under the whole system—the accounts of the year did not include anything like the whole amount of the issues from the Treasury. Well, I have stated the war charge to be £23,000,000. I have endeavoured to show to the House how this amount has been dealt with by India. In the first place, if there had been no war charge and no construction of frontier railways, and, at the same time, provision of £1,500,000 had been made in each year for the relief of famine, there would have been in each of the years of the war the following surpluses:—In 1878-9 a surplus of £1,523,885, in 1879-80 of £3,521,515, in 1880-1 of £3,623,174, and in 1881-2 of £855,000 (hear), or a surplus during the four years of £9,523,574. Of course, the surpluses, amounting to nine millions and a half, have gone for payment of the war; the balances of the famine insurance, amounting to £4,035,309, have been appropriated to payment of the war. There were also contributions from the British Treasury amounting to £5,000,000 towards payment of the war, and there was taken from cash balances for the same purpose a sum of £4,513,470. It appears to me that that is an unsatisfactory financial statement. (Hear.) The House will remember that in 1878 the Government of India undertook to provide a surplus which would enable it to appropriate annually £1,500,000 for famine insurance purposes. The cost of the war in Afghanistan, as I have already stated, prevented the intentions of the Government being accomplished; but the present Government fully accept the liability which was undertaken in 1878, and we have resolved that during this year, as I have already stated, instead of trusting to surpluses, which are always liable to be diminished, either by an increase of expenditure or by a remission of taxation, an amount shall be provided for famine purposes. There is, therefore, included in the estimated expenditure for the present year a million and a half for famine insurance. In the absence of disturbing causes, a million and a half will be devoted in the first place to any charge for actual famine relief that arises during the year; and if nothing unforeseen occurs, and there should be no famine, any balance of that sum will be devoted to what is called protective works—that is, works which cannot be safely classed as works as to which a reasonable confidence can be felt that they will pay interest on the cost of their construction in a very few years. Therefore they cannot be safely included in the category of reproductive public works. The works that are first selected for commencement under the heading of protective public works comprise a canal in the Deccan, a railway in the Punjab, and other works in Madras and Bombay. The remainder of the famine insurance provision, £750,000, is to be devoted to the reduction of debt, for which purpose a body of commissioners have been nominated. It will be the duty of the commissioners to apply the money which the Government of India pays over to them in the manner which the Government directs, because, as we borrow annually for protective works, it may be advisable to retrieve the loss for that purpose and to make up the deficiency from the famine insurance fund. I am quite ready to admit that the functions of the commissioners, as at present arranged, are more of a formal than of a practical character. But, nevertheless, I think that the appointment of that body may be the foundation of considerable and perhaps salutary changes hereafter. The commissioners at present are, or will be, entirely official persons. Their functions are almost purely ministerial, but those conditions are not necessarily permanent conditions. It is possible that it may be found advisable to appoint as commissioners some one or more persons unconnected with the Government, and their functions may perhaps be further developed. I cannot speak positively, but the appointment of this commission may possibly become the foundation of a system under which some external supervision, if not control, will be introduced into the administration of the Government which has been up to the present time of a purely bureaucratic character. I return, however, to the subject of the famine insurance fund. The million and a half for provision against famine having, in consequence of the war, failed to be applied to the reduction of debt or to protective works, it was thought advisable to take advantage of the Treasury contribution made last year of five millions for effecting a reduction of debt at home. Notice was therefore given in November last year for the repayment in November of the present year of the Indian Four per Cent. Bonds to the extent of £4,487,000. But, as the whole of the Treasury contribution will not be paid for four years from now, it was necessary to raise money by the issue of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock. But the arrangements have been so made that the whole of the five millions of the Treasury contribution will be devoted to the payment of sterling debt, whether in the form of permanent debt or bonds, and the entire loan will be gradually discharged. India has paid or will pay out of revenue so many millions towards the cost of the war. England contributes five millions. These five millions will not go to reduce the amount which India will have to pay, but they will go to reduce the debt. The result will be that India will pay 13 millions out of revenue for the cost of the war, and England will pay five millions for the reduction of debt. No sooner had the famine insurance policy been announced by Sir J. Strachey than it was disturbed by the outbreak of the Afghan war. Sir J. Strachey reckoned in 1879 on an annual surplus of two millions. A million and a half was to go to famine insurance, and £500,000 it was thought prudent to set apart for contingencies. But for the war the hopes which he then formed would have been more than justified, because, after providing a million and a half for famine insurance, there would have been a surplus of about nine millions in four years. The surplus, however, went, the famine insurance has also gone, the indebtedness of India has also increased, and there has been a diminution of the balances by about four millions. But, considering the circumstances through which India has passed, it does not appear to me on the whole that her financial position is unsatisfactory. That I think is the opinion likewise of the financial world and the money market. During the last fifteen months it has been necessary to issue three loans for productive and other public works. In June of last year a loan of 313 lakhs was raised in India at the interest of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The price at which it was raised was 103 3-16. In January of the present year a loan of three and a half millions was raised in London at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and the price at which it was raised was £103 19s. 6d. In July, 1881, again a loan of 300 lakhs for public works was raised in India, and, although it was reduced to 4 per cent. interest, the price at which it was raised was 105 3-16, as against 103 3-16 last year. I will now give the House the figures of the public works expenditure. The amounts expended from borrowed money on productive public works have been these:—In 1879-80, £3,364,330; in 1880-81, £2,687,695; in 1881-2, the estimated expenditure is £2,608,000. That gives a total of £8,660,025, to which has to be added the expenditure on the East Indian Railway, or £1,646,248 in the same three years, making altogether £10,306,273. I will next state to the House what has been the revenue account for those public works during the same period. In 1879-80 the revenue was £8,446,704; in 1881 it was £9,027,018; in 1881-82 it was £9,380,000, making a total for the three years of £26,853,722. The expenditure was in 1879-80 £8,724,361; in 1880-1 it was £9,221,880; and 1881-2, £9,680,000, making together a total of £27,626,241. The entire deficit upon these public works for the three years is £772,519, comparing the expenditure with the revenue. They have failed by about £255,000 a year to pay the full interest on the capital outlay. Of course the House is aware that a very considerable number of these works have either been only recently constructed or are not yet fully reproductive, and others are not reproductive at all. It may be stated that the railways have now reached a turning point, and that they are likely to become a source of revenue to India. The East Indian Railway paid in 1880-1 8 per cent. on a capital of thirty-one millions. Other railways have paid in some years 7, 6, and 5 per cent., and some are not entirely completed. But notwithstanding this extremely favourable result as compared with a few years ago, when productive public works involved a charge of between two and three millions, the Government have not seen any reason to relax the limit of the public works expenditure on borrowed funds, which was recommended by a committee of the House and adopted by the late Government. Until a more certain estimate of the prospects of Indian finance and also of the results of the works themselves can be framed, we do not think it would be prudent to burden the revenues of India with a greater sum than two-and-a-half millions annually for expenditure of this character. But at the same time the House is aware that a capital expenditure of two and a half millions is not sufficient either to develop the resources of the country or to furnish the immunity which railways and canals are calculated to give from famine; and perhaps one of the most hopeful signs for the prosperity of India is that there at least appears to be some prospect of private capital entering the field to occupy some of the ground still vacant for enterprises of this kind. Hitherto it has been considered impossible to construct railways in India by private capital except with the aid of heavy and onerous guarantees. These enterprises were scarcely private enterprises, and the Government exercised a strict control over the capital account in order to prevent the finances of the country being unduly burdened. It was not yet possible for the Government to do all that was desired. A company has been recently formed at Calcutta which, although it has received some State assistance, has received it on terms very different indeed from those under which the old guarantee companies received it. The money was guaranteed for a very limited period—in fact, for four years, during which the line would be in course of construction. After the line is made other conditions will come into operation; and at the end of ninety-nine years the whole of the permanent works revert to the State, and the rolling-stock will be taken at a valuation. I think these terms contrast favourably with those connected with the old companies. I admit I have seen with some regret the delay which has occurred in closing some of the most hopeful of these proposals, but it is absolutely necessary that care should be exercised and that no undertakings that were not sound should be guaranteed. I think it would be a great misfortune to India if any other policy were pursued. I think from what I have said it will be seen that the Budget produced by the Government of India is of an eminently prudent character. I think the prudent course which has been adopted is amply justified by the facts of the case at the time the Budget was made. At that time the troops were still in Afghanistan; the retirement had not been completed for two or three months afterwards. Until the troops had returned behind the frontier it was impossible to say what further complications or difficulties might ensue, and it was necessary, I think, to take a prudent view of the financial condition of India. Then there was the uncertainty as to opium. I think the low estimate as to opium will be considerably exceeded. I think it will probably come up to the exceptional result of the past year. It was, I believe, wise on the part of the Government of India under these circumstances to postpone any reduction, or even any adjustment, of the opium revenues. There is one subject with which, I regret to say, we are unable to deal in the present year. I refer to the cotton duties. The total loss in 1878-79 was £170,000, and in 1880-1 it was £120,000. The loss on gray goods dealt with a few years ago was heavy. The loss on the goods specially dealt with was in 1878-9 £210,000, and in 1880-1 £320,000; and the estimated income derived from gray goods does not exceed £100,000 a year. I need not point out to the House that very considerable inconvenience is caused to trade by the inspection and examination which are necessary under the present system. Often the minute examination which was necessary was somewhat vexatious, but the interference with trade is very great. The result of the interference is shown by the figures. Before the remission, when all—I am speaking of gray goods—were equally taxed, the value of this class of goods was 95 per cent. of the whole of the goods. Since the remission, the value of the goods which are still liable to duty has fallen to 26 per cent. from 95 per cent. There can be no doubt as to the effect on native manufacture. It has, I believe, almost altogether disappeared. The natives manufactured coarser goods, and therefore they are exposed to the whole of the Lancashire manufacture. But the effect is that while protection has been withdrawn from native industry, a sort of protection has been given to one class of English goods against another. The coarser goods are now protected or stimulated by free admissions, while finer goods are still taxed. It seems to me absolutely impossible that this condition of things can be permitted to continue. (Hear.) I regret that it should have been thought necessary to continue it even for another year. It is a state of things unfair to the manufacturers and injurious to the Indian consumer. What has happened? The whole case has been changed by our system, and by the peculiarities of the tariff the Indian consumer is now forced or induced, not to take that class of English goods which he prefers, but that class which the English manufacturer is able, owing to the peculiarities of the tariff system, to supply to him most cheaply. Under this condition of things I believe many mills in Lancashire are actually standing still, because they are unable to produce with their existing machinery that class of goods which is now admitted free. They have been beaten out of the market by the coarser qualities. The loss that is borne by India is heavy, and I regret that another year must elapse before remedying such an anomalous condition of things. I am afraid that the existing tariff and the changes which have been made were extremely unpopular in India, and I am afraid that it would have been extremely inexpedient even to make this trifling reform—trifling in a pecuniary point of view—unaccompanied by any larger steps. It would have been supposed that it was done for the interest of England without consideration for the people of India. My opinion is that the state of things is still more unfortunate for people themselves than for the Lancashire manufacturers. I shall lose no opportunity of urging on the Government at all events next year to remedy this grievance. The net loss for the year 1881-2 on exchange will be about three millions. For the year 1880-1 it was £2,553,000, and for the year 1879-80 about two millions. In the three years the net loss was £8,542,000. To a great extent this loss is over-estimated, because it is taken as though the value of the rupee was 2s., whereas, as the House is aware, the rupee was 1s. 10½d. at the time when the estimated loss was put at two millions a year, or six millions for the three years. No doubt that is a very considerable and heavy loss. I will say a very few words upon the attitude which the Indian Government have assumed on the question of bi-metallicism; and on the conference recently held at Paris. I have stated what the loss is and I will not enter upon the scientific or theoretic aspects of the question, upon which there is the greatest divergence of opinion among the highest authorities; but the subject has a practical bearing upon the finances and economic condition of India. Great disturbance has arisen, and considerable loss has been inflicted upon India in consequence of this loss in exchange. I will say a word or two upon the general effect produced on the general trade of India. The immediate effect upon a country situated as India is would be that its exports would be stimulated and its imports restricted. It may be supposed, therefore, that in India the purchasing power is diminished and the selling power increased. The balance of these advantages and disadvantages may be nearly equal; and, at all events, it is not necessary to discuss what the effect upon India these different standards of value have. The inconvenience from which India suffers arises from a different cause. It arises from her having to pay very heavy duties to the Home Government, averaging for several years considerably more than six millions a year. The losses by exchange are not less than eleven millions. That is a serious matter for a country situated as India is, where any readjustment of taxation is a matter of great difficulty. The injury to India does not stop there—at the actual loss incurred. The injury is greatly increased by the uncertainty caused in every financial estimate and transaction. It is absolutely impossible for an Englishman to make an estimate upon which he can confidently rely as to the expenditure and revenue for the next year. His surplus is liable to be converted by causes over which he has absolutely no control into a deficit. Every financial operation, every project which the Government may form, either for a reduction of debt or for any change in the mode of making remittances home is liable to be disturbed. Shall debt incurred in India be discharged? Shall money be kept at home? Shall home remittances be made by the sale of balances in England, or shall debts incurred in England be repaid? All these questions are unsettled, and it is impossible that any Government can take a certain view with regard to any of them. It has always been the aim of every financier to endeavour to secure a more stable exchange. There appears, however, no possibility of establishing a modern tariff between England and India, and there seems to be no greater probability of a common standard. We can only hope that some similar agreement may be come to between this country and India to those which exist between the different countries of Europe. It is no wonder, therefore, that the Government of India feel a warm interest and a deep sympathy with all efforts to arrive at some common agreement, and at all attempts in the direction of fixing a settled ratio between the values of the two metals. Everything done to attain that result is a benefit to India. Holding these views, the Government of India think it their duty to do what they can to assist in the attainment of some agreement between the nations of Europe, and they sent delegates to the recent Paris conference with that object. The House is aware that the conference has adjourned, but it is hoped that on their reassembling some result may be arrived at. There are one or two other matters with which I should like to trouble the House, although they are not connected with finance. I said last year that the commission appointed to inquire into the organisation of the Indian army with a view to its reduction had reported. The Government of India have applied themselves vigorously to the task, and have already sent home some of their proposals. I regret to say it has been found impossible as yet to give any sanction to those proposals. Some of these proposals would require parliamentary sanction, and I need hardly remind the House that we have not this session had time to enter into that subject. Others of their proposals are intimately connected with the organisation of the army at home. They cannot be adopted without full communication with the military authorities at home and with my right hon. friend the Secretary of State for War. These proposals, which affect only the Indian army, might no doubt be dealt with without much difficulty. But we should do well not to adopt any changes in the organisation of the Indian army without full and careful consideration. There are other important subjects with regard to which recommendations have been made. I cannot give to the House any hope that the adoption of any of these recommendations will, as I trust may be the case as regards the army, lead to any immediate or probable reduction in expenditure. On the contrary, they are more likely to lead to an immediate, if not to a permanent, increase. There is the Famine Fund. The obligation of keeping the people of India alive has been accepted by the Government of India and the people of this country. Immense sums of money have already been spent with that object, and it is almost inevitable that in future years immense sums will have to be spent. Unorganised spending of money is sure to be wasteful, and it is therefore absolutely necessary that we should have a carefully considered system. With this object the commission have framed certain recommendations:—First, that those districts which are most liable to famine should have introduced into them either improvements in the agricultural system or improvements in the means of communication. Secondly, the great object of the Famine Commission is to devise measures under which the relief of famine, when it actually occurs, may be effected. With regard to the second of these objects something has already been done. The commission have recommended several principles upon which famine relief shall be conducted, and the secretary has proposed a code of instructions for the local governors. These instructions have been circulated to the local Governments, and if famine were unfortunately to occur again, this code, although no doubt subject to considerable modification, will form a basis upon which the Indian Government and the local Governments will be able to deal more satisfactorily with an outbreak of that kind than at the former time. The Government has proposed, and the proposal has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State in Council, to reconstitute the department which was, as I think, unfortunately given up a few years ago—I mean the Agricultural Department. (Hear, hear.) But we have recommended that the new department should be manned as far as possible by officials drafted from existing offices, and that it must not be definitely established until we are fully informed as to its duties. Now, without making any attempt to forecast the future, I think we may say that the revenue of the last three years has been more than sufficient to meet the ordinary expenses of the administration. It has, in fact, been large enough to provide a necessary insurance against famine. The opium revenue is, of course, a source of uncertainty and anxiety to the Government. The remaining sources of revenue, notwithstanding readjustments, have shown a sure if slow increase. I trust that there will be some room for a reduction in military expenditure. The growing administrative, educational, sanitary, and other similar wants of the Government may be met, I believe, from the increasing resources of those branches of the revenue to which I have referred under the head of provincial finance. My statement, I fear, has been an unusually dry one. (Hear, hear.) I have had no large reduction of expenditure to announce, and no reduction or even readjustment of taxation. I am decidedly disposed to take an extremely conservative view of Indian finance. As I have said, there may be some room for reduction in military expenditure, but the framework of the civil administration of India is of such a character that, if it is not to be weak, it is essential that it should be composed of the very best materials—(Hear, hear)—and if it is to be composed of the best materials they must, of course, be adequately paid for. There is much room for a further development of the resources of India, but, in the meantime, any increase or even readjustment of the taxes or burdens that rest upon the people must affect such vast masses of men and so largely influence public feeling and opinion that I cannot but think that any alteration of taxation, certainly that any increase of it, is only a work to be entered upon with great reserve and caution. In conclusion, I have to say that, if I am content to lay before the House a Budget which is simple and unambitious, I hope that it is not altogether an unsatisfactory one. (Cheers.)

Mr. STANHOPE expressed an earnest hope, after what the noble lord had said, that this was the last occasion they should have of the Indian Budget brought on in the last days of the session. In India it was very apt to be complained that little interest was taken in Indian affairs, but he could assure them that the smallness of the attendance of that day was not due to smallness of interest in the subject, but solely to the fact of the Budget being brought on in the last days of the session. Passing on to refer in detail to the statement of the noble marquis, and on the item of the opium revenue, he stated that the mode of estimating it announced by the noble lord was not only novel but wrong in principle. On the question of economy in the administration of affairs in India, this view had been repeatedly pressed on the Government of India; and it was the deliberate view of the House of Commons, and he believed of the country, a few years ago, that there should be some deliberate attempt to reduce the expenditure of the Indian Government in respect of its civil and military arrangements. He confessed he had hoped to hear from the noble marquis some more distinct assurance than they had heard on this subject. The noble marquis did say something about the army, but he did not draw from the speech they had heard any, very sanguine hope that anything was going to be done. He should welcome any attempt to reduce the expenditure of India, and so far as was consistent with the efficiency of the service, such attempt by the noble lord should have his cordial support. On the matter of the Debt Commission, he should like the noble lord to state how that Commission was going to work. The Commission would have to receive £50,000 a year for the purpose for which it was constituted, and that sum would be remitted to England to reduce the gold-tax. But if it should so happen that the state of the money market did not warrant the remission of the money what was the Commission going to do? It seemed to him absurd that the Commission should hold money in its hand while at the same time more money was being borrowed in India. He hoped the noble lord would give the House some information as to the manner in which the Commission was going to dispose of the money coming into its hands. Of course, he should approve of the general object of this Debt Commission, because it afforded the means of reducing the gold debt of India. The right hon. gentleman went on to suggest that it would be a great advantage if a committee was appointed to inquire into the manner in which remittances were made from India to this country, and to state that amongst many persons there was considerable anxiety as to the prospects of the season in Mysor. He trusted the noble marquis would be able to relieve that anxiety, because it would be most unfortunate if it so happened that the year of the restoration of native rule should be marked by another famine. The general result of the statement of the noble marquis showed that the finances of India were, upon the whole, in a prosperous condition, and he could not conclude without heartily thanking the noble marquis for the acknowledgment which he had made of the services of Sir John Strachey to the cause of Indian finance. (Cheers.)

Alderman FOWLER urged the importance of appointing a committee to inquire into the whole state of the finances of the country, and the general administration of Indian affairs. The great question to be considered in relation to Indian finance, is how to reduce the expenditure; and he suggested that some reduction might be made in the number of the native army. He moved that a select committee be appointed to inquire into the financial and general administration of the affairs in India.

Sir G. BALFOUR seconded the motion, and complained of what he considered the injustice of the revenue at present levied in Madras and Bombay. These two provinces provided fully a half of the whole revenue of the country, and yet the population of Madras was not one-fourth of the population of India.

Sir D. WEDDERBURN supported the amendment, and arguing that England stood towards India in the relation of an absentee Irish landlord to his tenants, advocated inquiry into the grievances of the native population.

Mr. ARNOLD thought the supporters of the amendment were unfortunate in making their proposal at a time when the House was under the influence of the very satisfactory statement of the Secretary of State. Its most conspicuous merit was passed over with undue bustle, because the noble lord was unwilling to glorify the policy of the Government of which he was a distinguished member. This financial statement was free from charges in regard to war, and afforded a gratifying illustration of the settled policy of Her Majesty's Government. It should be always remembered that, for the sake of placing British agents in the towns of Afghanistan, a policy afterwards repudiated by its authors, the tax-papers of Great Britain and Ireland and India had been made to pay a sum which, upon the smallest estimate, amounted to £15,860,000. The hon. member expressed approval of the arrangements by which the contribution of England towards the expenses of that war was at once brought into account, and pointed out that the policy of the famine fund had been ratified by both parties in the State. He had heard with pleasure the right hon. gentleman's remarks on the new department of Agriculture, and he looked forward with great hope to the progress of that department, agreeing as he did with the sentiment that the Governor-General who made one acre produce twelve bushels where before it produced ten, deserved to be considered a better ruler than the one who had annexed a province. The Government of India by this country was one of the most interesting pictures in the history of the world. He quite agreed with the opinion that the Government had been a source not only of benefit to ourselves, but also that it had been beneficial to India itself; but the difficulties of that Government must increase, because the natives of the country were advancing in knowledge, and he was sure the Government would not forget that difference, so that they would realise that they could only be successful by forbearance and a wise policy of economy.

Mr. O'DONNELL thought there would be no necessity for a famine fund if the people of India were allowed to establish a fund for themselves, but the agriculturist of India was treated as the agriculturist of Ireland was treated—the more he appeared to prosper the more was taken from him. He sincerely hoped that the opium revenue would be reduced by six millions, instead of two millions, and he agreed with those who desired the abolition of the salt revenue. He regretted the increase in the excise tax, which meant that the Government was multiplying the means for readily obtaining intoxicating drinks. The hon. member gave a terrible description of the condition of the Bengal gaols, in some of which, as admitted the other night by Lord Hartington, the death rate had

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON ON INDIAN FINANCE.

ALL readers of Lord Hartington's really admirable exposition of the present condition and future prospects of Indian Finance, will readily believe that no one was more sorry than the Secretary of State himself that its delivery should have been postponed to such a late period of the session. The subject, attractive only to a very small circle of experts, is positively repulsive to most English hearers at any time; and, speaking on August 22 to a wearied and dejected House that had sat since the beginning of the year, if Lord Hartington had spoken with the tongues of men and of angels, he could hardly hope to elicit one spark of interest or one gleam of animation from his jaded hearers. Mr. Stan. hope, on behalf of the Opposition, courteously allowed that the extraordinary circumstances of the session this year furnished Lord Hartington with a fair excuse, though they could not be accepted as altogether absolving the Government from blame in the matter. The Conservative ex-Under Secretary was well within his right when he pointed out that the much-abused Conservative Government, in deference to Indian opinion on this point, had, two years ago, devoted two days in May, at the height of the season, for the express purpose of allowing the most cantankerous of Oppositions to worry their Indian policy; whilst the Government of All the Virtues had relegated the Indian debate to the last days of the session last year with no excuse at all, and this year with no better excuse than the Irish Land Bill. It cannot be doubted that the effect on the natives of India of such a manifest postponement of their interests will be a very bad one—far worse, indeed, than on former similar occasions, for the exaggerated promises of the present Ministry when in opposition, and their unsparing denunciations of the late Ministry, had led the natives to believe that the accession of Mr. Gladstone to power would usher in an Indian millennium. We reproduce, in another column, some acute remarks of the Bombay Chronicle, an Anglo-

Gujarati paper, on this subject; which appear to us to illustrate the great impropriety of an English Opposition orator making political capital out of Indian questions—the poor Gujarati folk do not understand the quilllets and quiddities of our party rhetoric, they took all Mr. Gladstone's abuse of the Tory management of Indian affairs as so many pledges that the Liberals would reverse it all in favour of the native, and now they are correspondingly bitter at the deception they believe has been practised on them.

We think, however, that, apart from the unfortunate lateness of the season, Lord Hartington's speech will have an exceedingly good effect on our native fellow subjects; and, at any rate, it can hardly fail to shut the mouths of those pessimist croakers who, either from malice or from foolishness, are never tired of wringing their hands and weeping over the desperate state of India, as the natural result of the depravity of its English rulers. The Midlothian speeches gave a great impetus to the ill-conditioned feeling that seems to prompt these Jeremiads; whilst it may be freely allowed that the suspicions of mismanagement aroused by them received colour from the deplorable blunder of the Military Accounts Department last year. And the consequence of all this was that, at the time of the close of Lord Lytton's administration, the heathen raged furiously, and the people imagined a vain thing. All Sir John Strachey's great services to India, and in particular to Indian finance, were forgotten by the crowds of "irresponsible chatterers" who opened fire on the iniquities of the defunct régime. And yet it may confidently be affirmed that Lord Hartington's speech of last Monday, if it had been made at that time, would have stultified most of the fervid denunciations that were then hurled at Lord Lytton and Sir John Strachey. Much of it was devoted to a demonstration of the great benefits to India and Indian administration that have flowed from the great decentralisation scheme initiated by Sir Richard Temple and Sir John Strachey under Lord Mayo, and carried out by Sir John Strachey under Lord Lytton. In every important point of Indian finance Lord Hartington is wisely content to follow the policy of his predecessors; his endeavour is to improve and develop, not to reverse. In no point has he widely diverged from that policy, and his lordship's speech on Monday shows that he is far too generous to discredit a policy that he is not prepared to renounce. This is the true view to take of the duties and responsibilities of Indian rule, which will never again, we trust, be clouded by the mists and prejudices of English party spirit. It is the view that all would expect to commend itself to Lord Hartington, whose general fairness and freedom from party bias are everywhere acknowledged and applauded.

In common with most of those who possess any practical and direct acquaintance with Indian affairs, we are not surprised to find the Secretary of State compelled to take what he calls a "conservative" view of Indian finance—shrinking alike from reduction of expenditure, and from reduction, or even readjustment, of taxation. Imitation is the sincerest flattery; and no higher testimony to the general wisdom and rectitude of the financial management of the late Government could be adduced than is offered by the rest-and-be-thankful policy of the present administration. And herein, again, Lord Hartington's chief difficulties have arisen from the exaggerated language of his colleagues when in opposition; for it can hardly be doubted that much disappointment will be felt at the ridiculous collapse of all the demands for a great reduction of expenditure on the civil administration, that were so urgently pressed on the Conservative Government, and that were actually accepted and to some extent acted upon by that Government. The recommendations of retrenchment made by the Army Commission are still to hang fire; the recommendations of the Famine Commission are only carried out where they involve the creation of new appointments and additional expense. The great lesson of the recent financial history of India is one that may well be taken to heart by those statesmen in this country who are recognised as our Indian leaders; it is, the necessity of absolutely excluding party feeling from the consideration and decision of every Indian question.

GOLD IN CEYLON.

THE richest specimen of gold bearing quartz that has yet been discovered in Ceylon has been found on the Theberton estate in the Maskeliya district. In this quartz, the gold is said to be "plainly visible"; in the same reef a very rich limestone has also been discovered. It seems highly probably that the whole of the Maskeliya valley, and the other districts immediately adjacent to Adam's Peak, will be found to be highly auriferous. The rocks here are of high geological antiquity. There are frequent outcrops of quartz reefs; and since gold has been washed from time immemorial from the sands of the rivers that flow down from this elevated region to the lower ground on the west and south, the discovery that has been made in Maskeliya must be regarded as one of the highest importance.

Again, at Nuwara Eliya, Sir Samuel Baker has told us how very easily gold was found by some Californian sailors in 1854. Sir Samuel says of these sailors:—"Their first discovery of gold at Nuwara Eliya was on June 14, 1854, on the second day of their search in that locality. This was found in the 'Vale of Rubies.' I had advised them to make their first search in that spot for this season; that, as the precious stones had there settled in the largest numbers, from their superior gravity, it was natural to conclude that, if gold should exist, it would, from its gravity, be somewhere below the precious stones, or in their vicinity. From the facility with which it has been discovered, it is impossible to form an opinion as to the quantity or the extent to which it will eventually be developed."

The ancient Sinhalese literature of the island bears ample evidence to the finding of gold here from remote times. One author, quoted recently in the Ceylon Observer, says that he knew of no less than sixteen gold mines worked in his time, as well as sixty-four silver mines, and larger numbers of gem mines and pearl banks. A Kandyan correspondent of a Ceylon paper says that the natives find gold "sometimes in brilliant crystallised grains, but more generally in small irregular lumps or grains in veins of quartz or calspar." He adds that it is also obtained from beds of micaceous specular iron, in the form of spangles, in decomposing blende, and among iron pyrites. The ancient geographical nomenclature of the island goes to show that the precious metal is widely distributed. In the Seven Korles district alone there are at least six villages whose Sinhalese names connect them closely with gold-mining or gold washing, for instance, there is Ranwalagedara, "gold mine, or pit, house;" Rangama, "gold village;" Rangalepola, "gold-rock place," and so on.

The Maskeliya and surrounding districts of the Central Province of Ceylon have great advantages in their magnificent climate, their accessibility, the possession of a large and wealthy planting community, and all the appliances of civilisation which have already been attracted thither by the presence of such a community. We have little doubt that, now gold has been discovered in considerable quantities, measures for extracting it profitably will be set on foot without delay, and it may be that a few months will see as great a development of the mining industry in Ceylon as the last two or three years have seen in Southern India.

HOME NEWS.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—The military authorities have been for some time past considering the claims of a number of officers to receive the Victoria Cross, in recognition of the gallantry displayed by them whilst employed on active service in Afghanistan. Among those brought specially to notice are Major J. R. B. Atkinson, 1st Punjab Cavalry; Brevet Major H. Kilgour, Northumberland Fusiliers; Brevet Major S. Watson, Worcestershire Regiment; Capt. T. L. Bishop, 2nd Punjab Cavalry; Capt. S. D. Barrow, Bengal Staff Corps; Lieut. W. H. D. Cunningham, Gordon Highlanders; and Lieut. H. M. Troynam, East Lancashire Regiment.—Friday night's Gazette contains the following announcement, dated War-office, Aug. 24:—"The Queen having been graciously pleased, by Warrant under her Royal Sign Manual, bearing date Aug. 6, to direct that the decoration of the Victoria Cross shall be conferred on members of the Indian ecclesiastical establishments who may be qualified to receive the same, in accordance with the rules and ordinances made and ordained for the Government thereof, provided that it be established in any case that the person was serving under the orders of a general or other officer in command of troops in the field when he performed the act of bravery for which it is proposed to confer the decoration:—"Her Majesty has accordingly been pleased to signify her intention to confer the high distinction on the undermentioned gentleman, whose claim to the same has been submitted for her Majesty's approval on account of his conspicuous bravery in Afghanistan as recorded against his name—viz.:—"The Rev. J. W. Adams, Bengal Ecclesiastical Establishment, late Chaplain to the Cabul Field Force. During the action at Killa Kazi, on December 11, 1879, some men of the 9th Lancers having fallen with their horses into a wide and deep 'mullah' or ditch, and the enemy being close upon them, the Rev. J. W. Adams rushed into the water (which filled the ditch), dragged the horses from off the men upon whom they were lying, and extricated them, he being at the time under a heavy fire and up to his waist in water. At this time the Afghans were pressing on very rapidly, the leading men getting within a few yards of Mr. Adams, who, having let go his horse in order to render more effectual assistance, had eventually to escape on foot."

OBITUARY.—Major John Eckford, Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, died a few days ago at Netley, in his 46th year. Educated at Addiscombe, he passed an especially brilliant examination for his commission, gaining the Pollock medal, the sword of honour, many prizes for individual subjects, and scoring an exceptional number of marks. He went out to India towards the end of the mutiny, but only saw a little service. Thenceforward his career was civil. Employed at first on irrigation works, he, for the last fourteen years of his life, was in the Government Telegraph Department, in which he rendered excellent service.—Lieut. Gen. Goodricke Armstrong Fisher, of the Bengal Staff Corps, died on Tuesday at Hillersdon-house, Dover, at the age of 66. He entered the army in 1831, obtained a lieutenantancy in 1837, and was promoted to a captaincy in 1848. He served in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, commanded the outposts of Michnee and Shubkadir, on the Peshawur frontier, from February, 1853, to May, 1854, and was present in the action of Shah Moosah Kheyl, for which service he received a medal. He was also present at the Alumbagh at the relief of Lucknow in 1857, and was attached to the force under General Outram from November, 1857, until the taking of Lucknow in the following March. He became a colonel in 1866, major general in 1877, and lieutenant general in 1880.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY announce that, commencing with the departure of the screw steamer Rome, on Oct. 4, passengers will be embarked on board of the company's steamers at Gravesend instead of at Southampton as heretofore. Arrangements have been made with the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway Company for the despatch of a special train from the Liverpool-street Station of the Great Eastern Railway at eleven a.m. every Tuesday. Passengers will be conveyed from this station to Tilbury, and thence to the company's vessels in a commodious river steamer.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs.35,00,000 in Government Bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs.30,21,000; to Bombay, Rs.4,38,000; and to Madras, Rs.41,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 18. 7 13-16d., being the minimum posted, will receive about 48 per cent. Compared with last week, this price shows an improvement of 1-16d. The same amount will be offered for tender on Wednesday next.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the tendency of the Silver Market was favourable, owing to the advance in the figure at which the Indian Council drafts were allotted. In some quarters it was stated that bars had been purchased on a limited scale on Continental account at 51 7/8d., though the average quotation did not exceed 51 11-16d. per ounce. Even the lower price, however, marked an improvement of 1-16d. Mexican dollars were firmer in sympathy, the price being 50 7/8d. to 51d. per ounce. Rupee Four and a-Half per Cents, recovered 1/2, to 90 3/4 to 7/8, and the Eastern exchanges were telegraphed at better quotations, the rates from Bombay and Calcutta being 18. 8-16d. and

rs. 8 1-8d. to 3-16d. respectively. From Hong-Kong the figure was 3s. 8 3/4d., and from Shanghai 5s. 1 1/2d.—On Thursday there was a scarcity of bar silver, but a little business was done at 51 3/4d. per oz., and, owing to the existence of a demand for one or two quarters, and the continued absence of the arrival of anything larger than almost nominal sums, the market closed with a firm tendency. No business occurred in Mexican dollars, but the price was a shade harder at 50 3/4d. to 51d. The Indian and China exchanges were again unaltered. The rise of the last two or three days in Rupee Paper was maintained, but not improved upon to any material extent. The Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents. were quoted at 90 3/4 and 83 3/4, the Indian quotations being 109 1/2 and 100 3/4 respectively. On Friday increasing firmness was shown in the market for bar silver, some parcels having been taken on Continental account at 51 7/8d. per ounce. The Indian rates for telegraphic transfers have risen to rs. 7 15-16d., and the four months' quotations are firm at rs. 8 3-16d. The high level of money here has again begun to tell on the price of Indian Government Paper. The London quotations for Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents. were 89 1/2 to 90 and 82 3/4 to 83, the Indian rates being 109 1/2 and 100 respectively.—On Saturday, the bar silver brought by the West India steamer Para was sold at 51 7/8d., the market being still firm. The dollars which arrived by the same vessel have not yet been disposed of, but the market price was again quoted at 51d. per ounce. The India and China exchanges are firm, but unaltered, and prices of Rupee Paper are much the same as yesterday, although there is still a dull feeling both here and in India.

DRAFTS FOR INDIA.—The general officers commanding the 1st and 3rd Infantry Brigades at Aldershot have been ordered to cause the undermentioned detachments to be held in readiness to embark for India, via the Suez Canal—viz., Major Wray, Lieuts. Boisragon and Apthorp, one serjeant, one corporal, twelve boys and eighty-seven privates from the 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment to join the 1st Battalion. Major Bleazby, Lieuts. Fullerton, Richards, and Flood, two serjeants, two corporals, and 140 privates from the 1st Battalion West Surrey Regiment to join the 2nd Battalion.

THE AFGHAN MEDAL.—A proof copy of this medal, the issue of which has been deterred in consequence of alterations in the design suggested by the Queen, was, on Thursday, exhibited by Messrs. E. and E. Emanuel, at the Dockyard Gates, Portsmouth, and attracted considerable attention, as no previous copy had been seen. The obverse consists of a very fine profile likeness, in high relief, of the Queen, wearing the Imperial Crown as Empress of India, and surrounded with the words "Victoria Regina et Imperatrix." On the reverse of the medal is a representation of a picturesque squadron of Indian horse just emerging from a pass headed by an elephant carrying a mountain gun; while round the inner rim is inscribed the legend "Afghanistan, 1878-79-80." The riband has a green centre with purple edges. The full number of clasps is six, each bearing the name of one of the following engagements:—Ali Musjid, Peiwar Kotal, Char Asiab, Cabul, Ahmed Khel, and Kandahar. The medal is massive, and is of great artistic excellence.

THE WEARING OF DECORATIONS.—A letter in Allen's Indian Mail, subscribed "A Decorated General," reminds us of many references in our own columns to the question of officers wearing ribbons and decorations, or ribbons only when in mufti. What is called "etiquette" in such matters is sometimes false pride, false modesty, or want of moral courage. There is a strong aversion on the part of certain high functionaries who like to show their own ribbons appertaining to "Orders," and in consequence, through the leaders of fashion, they discountenance the practice as regards mere "companionships" and medals for actions and campaigns, as tending to an invasion of what are constructively assumed to be superior privileges, the real fact being that there is no "privilege" whatever, and that one man's medal or cross is as good as another's, and may correctly be worn whenever he may have a mind to do so.—Broad Arrow.

INDIA IN THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

BUSINESS has again been restricted consequent on the holidays. On Wednesday the only movement in Indian Railways was a decline of 1 in Great Indian Peninsula to 132 to 134. In Telegraphs, there was a rise of 1 in Eastern Extension (Five per Cent. Australian Subsidy), to 104 to 107; but there was a decline of 3/8 in Eastern, to 10 1/2 to 10 3/4. In Mines, Mysore advanced 1/8, to 1 1/2 to 1 3/4. Upper Assam Tea also rose 1/4, to 2 to 2 1/4.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that numerous cargoes of Burma rice have been sold, owing to a strong speculative demand, and quotations show 6d. to 9d. per cwt. recovery from the lowest point this month. The sugar market is firmer, the home trade having more confidence. Low brown descriptions meet with a better inquiry, and sellers of beet do not accept the rates current last week. Refined sugar also active. Coffee remains dull and unsettled, several of the sales effected being at 1s. to 2s. per cwt. lower rates. The bulk of the East India and Costa Rica by auction to-day had to be withdrawn. A parcel of cocoa from Colombo, the first import of any extent, was sold this week, and, proving of fine quality, realised very high quotations. A moderate amount of business has been done in tea, chiefly for export, at late prices. Indian growths have not in all cases supported their position. The black and white pepper markets are higher, and have still an improving tendency. About 3,000 bales Ceylon cinnamon will be offered at the quarterly sales on the 29th inst. Zanzibar cloves firm. Saltpetre is again higher.

COFFEE is very flat. 480 cases 683 bags East India went rather cheaper; medium to good medium grayish, 77s. to 84s.; bold, 90s. 6d. to 94s.; small in proportion; 45 casks 20 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon, small to low middling, 70s. to 81s.; middling to bold, 89s. 6d. to 104s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—White—active sale of Singapore on the spot up to 7 1/2d. and 7 9-16d. Black higher; Singapore sold at 5 1/2d. to a shade over, and Penang at 5 1/4d. per lb. on the spot. A large business done.

MANILLA HEMP higher, fair quoted 4 1/2d. per ton on the spot.

JUTE.—A strong market, with prices hardening. To-day about 8,000 bales were sold for arrival.

COTTON.—A quiet, but steady, market. The sales amount to 1,000 bales, including Western at 4 9-16d. to 4 3/4d.; Bengal at 4 3-16d. to 5 1-16d., and Sind at 4 3/4d. per lb.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—The market has been freely supplied ex recent arrivals, and a large business has passed. The general tendency of prices has favoured buyers, and a decline of 1d. to 2d. on medium to fine descriptions is quotable for the week. The auctions have comprised 10,700 packages.

COFFEE.—Plantation Ceylon more steady, and 82 casks, 44 bags sold at quite previous rates; also the greater part of 1,845 bags foreign at irregular to full prices for good qualities; Central American and Guatemala, 54s. to 66s.; Honduras, 67s. to 87s.; 57 half-barrels Mocha bought in at 112s. to 120s.; a few lots Jamaica sold at 63s. to 78s. per cwt.

BLACK PEPPER.—Further sales of Singapore at 5½d. White active; Singapore at 7½d.

JUTE.—The market continues firm, a rather large business being done for the week, at, in some cases, rather higher rates.

MANILLA HEMP has advanced. £45 10s. paid for f. r., at which there are buyers.

COTTON.—The market is quiet, without change in prices. The sales amount to 1,500 bales. Tinnevely, 5½d.; Western, 4 9-16d.; Cocanada, 4½d.; Bengal, 4½d. to 5d. For arrival, Bengal, August-September, Suez, 4½d. for fully good fair g.f.c. American, August-September delivery, 6½d.; November-December, 6 3-16d. for middling l.m.c.

reached 280 per thousand. He also called attention to the cruelties inflicted by flogging in the prison.

Mr. W. FOWLER said that, considering all that India had passed through during the last year, the Budget was a satisfactory one. There could be no doubt, however, that the Afghan war had spoiled the Budget, as, without the expenditure that that war involved, it would have been one of the most acceptable financial statements ever presented with regard to India. There were one or two matters which required investigation. If what he had heard was true, there was great waste in the Public Works Department. He had seen it stated that the cost of engineering was from 25 to 30 per cent. of the whole expenditure on public works, whereas in England it was not more than from 5 to 7 per cent. He was extremely glad to hear what the noble lord had said about the cotton duty. He thought it extremely hard that we should place such a high tax on Indian products, and at the same time prohibit them from placing a duty on cotton. In regard to the loans, he thought that the money should be raised in London rather than in Calcutta. By the present system, they sent money to Calcutta and brought it back again to pay the home charges. He did not believe there would be any difficulty in raising a silver loan in this country, and that a great saving would be effected for India, and very little trouble entailed on the officials. He thought the silver question was one well worthy of the careful attention of the Government and the House, and he should like to see another inquiry on the subject.

Mr. HOPWOOD asked a question as to the reapplication of the Contagious Diseases Acts in Bombay.

Mr. BALFOUR, referring to the proposed sequestration of £1,500,000 annually to meet the contingency of possible famines in India, and its division into two moieties of £750,000 each, one to be expended on the liquidation of public debt and the other to be appropriated towards the cost of public buildings, asked the Secretary for India whether this plan was not unsound from an economic and financial point of view. Was he not, by this policy, hampering future ministers in India by petrifying a certain system of finance and compelling an expenditure of public money which, for good or bad purposes, was not, at all events, the best possible outlay under the circumstances?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: So many questions have been put to me, and so many subjects have been raised in the course of this discussion, that the House will admit that within the reasonable limits of a reply I cannot deal with them all. Many of the topics have had no immediate connection with Indian finance, but have ranged over the whole subject of Indian administration. I do not deny that this may be a good opportunity for bringing forward such matters, but it is evident that, if one night's debate is inadequate for the discussion of Indian finance, it is still more impossible within the same compass to deal also with a much wider subject. (Hear.) The hon. member for Lincolnshire did, I must admit, confine himself almost exclusively to the subject of Indian finance; and the first point with which he dealt with was, I think, the possible reduction of expenditure. I must here point out that, as far as I have been able to observe, the late Government of India with the most sincere desire to effect further reductions of expenditure, succeeded in not much more than the postponement of certain items of expense. I do not deny that some little reductions were effected, but a careful examination of the accounts will show that the reductions made after the unsatisfactory state of the Indian finance was discovered were chiefly in those branches of expenditure that admitted of immediate reduction, such as public works, and were rather a postponement than a reduction of expenditure. I admitted that there was an increase in the expenditure of the present year of something like £800,000. Some of that increase results from such items as interest, loss on exchange, and other causes that are wholly beyond the control of the Government of India; but the great bulk of the increased expenditure is due to the larger expenditure of the provincial Governments. What has happened is this:—When the Indian Government was in considerable straits in consequence of the heavy war expenditure, strong pressure was put on the provincial Governments to economise their resources in every possible way; and the way in which they did so was chiefly by restricting their expenditure on public works, with the result that as soon as the pressure was relaxed it was necessary not only to return to the former scale of expenditure, but also to some extent to make up for the restriction by spending still more. (Hear.) I think the hon. member will be ready to admit that as long as the recommendations of the Army Commission are under consideration by the Government of India and by the Government at home, it will not be desirable that they should be made public; but I hope that before Parliament meets next year sufficient progress will have been made to render it possible for us to lay, at least, some of the recommendations of the Commission before the House. The hon. member also asked what are to be the duties of the Debt Commissioners, and this is connected with the question of the hon. member for Hertford. I have already stated that the duties at present assigned to the commissioners will be of an almost formal or ministerial character. The Government of India are to pay over to them annually, on behalf of the famine insurance fund, certain sums to be applied to the reduction of the debt, and the duty of the commissioners will be simply to certify that the money has been applied in the manner directed, unless the Government of India should publish their reasons to the contrary. In reply to the hon. member for Hertford, I have to say that no doubt the present intention of the Government is that £1,500,000 should be equally devoted between the reduction of the debt and making provision against famine. That was also generally the plan of Sir J. Strachey when he first initiated this policy, but nothing has been done which will bind the present Government to consider the proposed appropriation of the famine insurance fund as absolutely fixed and immutable. The hon. member for Lincolnshire asks a question as to the change which has been made in respect to the Council, announcing the minimum price in the sale of their bills. This practice has been so short a time in operation that it is impossible at present to say how far it may be successful, but as far as it has hitherto proceeded we have no reason to be dissatisfied with the success of the experiment. The hon. member adverted to a motion, of which he had given notice, of an inquiry by a Parliamentary committee into the mode of making the remittances from India. That, no doubt, is a subject as to which there might be some advantage in a Parliamentary inquiry, but it is one of an extremely limited scope, and I thought that if it were considered worth while to appoint a committee to inquire into the subject it might be desirable to extend the sphere of the inquiry to the system which ought to be adopted for raising money for productive works and for other purposes for the Government of India. The mode of making remittances has been fully discussed in monetary and commercial circles in the City, and I believe every suggestion on the subject has been brought to the knowledge of the Council of India as efficiently as it could be done by a parliamentary inquiry. The hon. member inquired whether I could give any assurance as to the condition of Mysor. On seeing the somewhat alarming telegram in The Times ten days or a fortnight ago, I at once telegraphed to India, inquiring whether there was any reason for alarm as to the harvest prospects in Mysor. I was told there was no danger at present, but that if the rains continued as they have done there was no fear whatever of scarcity. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member also made some inquiries as to the mode in which the statement of the war expenditure has been compiled, and he asked why one item which I gave, as to the Punjab Northern Railway, has been excluded from the account, whereas it was included in the first accounts. An expense of about £1,000,000 would, no doubt, have to be incurred under any circumstances, but the works were hurried forward more rapidly than was originally intended on account of the war. Consequently, in the first statement, that item was included, but it will not be brought to the charge of the war in the final accounts. As regards the receipts from the railways and telegraphs, they were so vague and uncertain that it was not deemed desirable to include them in the accounts presented to Parliament. The hon. member for the City of London urged reasons why, in his opinion, a parliamentary committee should be reappointed to inquire into Indian administration and Indian affairs. I think the hon. member asked me whether I believed that the committee which had been appointed at the instance of my right hon. friend the Postmaster-General had been a useless inquiry. Now, I am very far indeed from saying that that inquiry was a useless one. I believe, on the contrary, that a great amount of information was brought together by the inquiry of that committee, and that it has been the source from which hon. members desirous of informing themselves on Indian affairs have been able to obtain a very great deal of very good information upon various points. But bringing as witnesses so many gentlemen from India withdraws them for a considerable time from the discharge of their duties, and though I am quite willing to admit that the inquiry was a useful one, it does not follow that such inquiries could be profitably proceeded with at very short intervals. I do not think it is good for any Government, and I do not know why it is better for the Government of India than any other Government, that it should be constantly undergoing examination, and incur a very considerable amount of expense, and prevent the discharge of some of the ordinary duties of Government by bringing over so many high officials from India for the purpose of given information to a committee. When the hon. member went through the list of subjects on which he thought inquiry might be profitably instituted, I doubted very much whether a parliamentary inquiry would be the most efficient mode of obtaining information. He instanced the public gaols, on which I shall have to say a word in reply to the hon. member for Dungarvan. He also instanced the increase of drinking which had taken place in some parts of India. That was a matter also referred to by the hon. member for Dungarvan. I am sorry I was not informed that that subject would be brought before the House to night. I have not before me the report which contains information which would enable me to enter fully into that subject, and I do not recollect what has been the change in regard to licences. But certainly the change which has been made was made, not solely or mainly with a desire to increase the revenue, but to check illicit distillation, and elicit sales of spirits. The hon. member read some extracts from the report as to the instructions of the Government, but he was obliged to admit that those instructions were quite capable of a different and laudable construction. In the absence of the report I do not think the House will expect me to go more fully into this question, but I can assure the House that I believe the object of the Indian Government has been simply—not to increase drinking, far from it, but—to prevent the illicit distillation which prevails, and to introduce a system of legal licensed drinking, instead of unlicensed drinking. The hon. member suggested that a Committee of the House of Commons would inquire into the question of Army Organisation in India. Well, that subject has been very recently under the consideration of a commission composed of military authorities. Surely the hon. member may wait, at all events, until the Government of India consider the proposals of that commission, and until we have information, before he asks for the appointment of a committee to go into that question, into which I can scarcely believe a committee of this House is a body the best adapted to inquire. With reference to the system of appointing public servants, I have no doubt the introduction of the system of competition has been very advantageous to this country and to India. I have no doubt that some hardships may have accrued to servants of the Indian Government by reason of their being no longer able to obtain an appointment for their sons or other relations by means of nomination. The hon. member for Kincardineshire referred to the changes which have taken place in the salt duty. The reason of the changes was not so much an increase of duty as an equalisation of duties. He showed as, no doubt, has been the case, that the changes have been accompanied by a very considerable increase in the revenue from salt. But I must point out that the changes have, to a certain extent, diminished the revenue. Nevertheless, upon the whole there has been a considerable increase of revenue, not so much on account of an increase of duty as of an increased consumption of salt. In Madras there has been a slight diminution of revenue. I agree that whenever the time arrives for the Government of India to take into consideration the readjustment of taxation, the salt duty is one of the earliest subjects that ought to claim their attention. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member for Haddington Burghs referred to some instances in which he said the people of India considered that the pledges of the party now in office have not been fully carried out, and I think he mentioned as one of them the repeal of the Vernacular Press Act. He appeared to be under the impression that the Government of India have only undertaken to consider the representations of the Secretary of State in regard to that Act. On the contrary, the assurances of the Government of India are most explicit that they will propose and carry out the repeal of that Act. They have indicated that some revision of the law with regard to prosecutions for libel generally may be necessary; but they have distinctly informed us that they intend to repeal the Vernacular Press Act, and thereby, at all events, to get rid of that invidious distinction between the English and the native Press in India which constituted one of the greatest objections to that Act. The hon. member also thought that the instructions of the Secretary of State were not carried out in respect to the appointment of natives. I should be most happy if my hon. friend would bring to my notice any case that he knows of in which those instructions have failed to be carried out. All I can say is that the rule is that no European, except covenanted civil servants or military officers, should be appointed to any office of over Rs.200 a month without distinct sanction from home, and stating the grounds on which that appointment is made. The object is that in all appointments of this kind, either covenanted civil servants of the Government of India or officer of the Army, or natives, should be appointed, and that no appointments should be made of uncovenanted Europeans without the strict sanction of the Government at home. My hon. friend also alluded to a motion of which he had given notice for the appointment of a commission to make inquiry within a limited area and into certain subjects. That is certainly a proposition of a somewhat different character from a general inquiry by a select committee of this House. But it seems to me that there are a great many difficulties in the way of such an inquiry as was suggested by my hon. friend. Of whom is this local commission to inquire locally to consist? Is it to consist of officials or non-officials? If of officials, I fear it is only too certain that it would be represented to be a one-sided and useless inquiry. If, on the other hand, it is to consist of non-official persons, where are those persons to be found possessing sufficient knowledge of India to make them competent to inquire into such subjects? Are they to be experts or inexperienced persons? If they are to be experts, I fear that experts are in general persons who are very strongly imbued with preconceived ideas, and that an inquiry of non-official experts would be as one-sided an inquiry even as one made by officials of the Government. And if it is to be an inquiry by inexperienced persons, I fear that it could not be satisfactory. But there appears to be even a greater and wider objection than these. It is difficult to conceive how the responsible Government of India is to be maintained if an irresponsible body is to be appointed practically to inquire into their administration. It is a very different thing to have an inquiry into the conduct of the Government here by a Parliamentary Committee. The work of governing this country is shared between the executive Government and Parliament; and it is perfectly in the power of Parliament to inquire into the conduct of the executive Government as often and in whatever way it likes. But the Government of India is wholly vested in the Governor General and his council and the executive officers; and it is difficult to see how their responsibility could be maintained if an irresponsible body were appointed which would really be a higher authority than they. The hon. member for Haddington and the hon. member for Dungarvan adverted to the desire entertained in various parts of India for an extension of the permanent settlement. That is so large and wide a subject for inquiry that it is absolutely impossible to go into it at this hour of the night. It would be impossible in a few sentences to give anything like an adequate explanation of the views of the Government of India upon that question, and I think that, although it is well worthy of consideration, I could not enter into it at all satisfactorily now. The hon. member for Salford has inquired also as to the Factory Act. That Act has been passed, and the Government of Bombay has asked for the services of an inspector of factories to assist in putting it into operation. The hon. member for Dungarvan has referred to a great variety of other matters, among others, to the subject on which he recently asked some questions of me as to the management of the gaols in Bengal, but I entirely agree with what was said by the hon. member for the City of London, that the hon. member for Dungarvan was perfectly justified in calling attention to the subject, and that the thanks of the House are due to him for doing so. (Hear, hear.) But I somewhat regret that he should have singled out for attack the management of the gaols in Bengal. I have very little doubt that there is room for improvement in the management of the gaols of Bengal. Still, the management of those gaols, both in respect to mortality and corporal punishment—the two subjects specially referred to by him—do not compare unfavourably, on the whole, with the management of the gaols in the other provinces, and if the object of the hon. member be to improve the gaol administration in India I cannot understand why he signalled out Bengal from the other provinces, when I think I have shown by the answers I gave to his questions that the authorities in Bengal have devoted a considerable and even an exceptional attention to the subject, and when the result of their administration, as I have said, does not compare unfavourably with that of the other provinces. (Hear, hear.) The course adopted by the hon. member is hardly calculated to stimulate increased activity and the desire to remedy the defects of administration in those who thus find themselves marked out in this House for special animadversion and attack. The hon. member threw some doubt as to the accuracy of the answers which I have given him on this subject, but I must remind him that every charge which he has brought against the prison authorities in Bengal has been founded upon the information which has been very carefully compiled and honestly published by the very officials against whom those charges are brought. (Hear, hear.) Those authorities have neither concealed nor passed over any of the unfortunate circumstances connected with the mortality in the Bengal prisons to which he refers, and they have set forth clearly the remedies which they adopted to put an end to it. It is not possible for me at this hour of the evening to go to any length into this subject, but I may state that the Governor of the gaol at Bengal attributes the exceptional mortality in that prison in 1878 and 1879 first to the fact that cholera was prevalent at the time, and second, that the prisoners had been reduced in condition by privation before they entered the gaol. The scale of diet had been drawn up by persons experienced in the management of gaols, and it was not until inquiry was made into the causes of the mortality that it was deemed necessary to alter it. With regard to the alleged excessive corporal punishment inflicted in the gaols the amount of such punishment has been greatly reduced of late. I must remind the hon. member, however, that the prison authorities had no power of themselves to remit corporal punishment, and it was only when the matter was brought under the notice of the higher authorities that the amount of such punishment could be reduced. With regard to the working of the Contagious Diseases Acts in India an inquiry into the subject is now being held, and until the result of that inquiry is before me I cannot express either approval or disapproval of the action of the Government of Bengal in the matter. I am aware that I have not replied to many of the questions that have been put to me, but at this hour of the night it is impossible that I can go into the subjects they touch upon. I therefore trust that the House will now go into committee, and will pass the necessary resolutions. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Alderman Fowler's amendment was then, by leave, withdrawn, and the House having resolved itself into Committee of Supply,

The Marquis of HARTINGTON moved the adoption of a series of resolutions embodying the statements made in his opening address.

Mr. A. O'CONNOR contended that it was not just that the people of India who were unrepresented in Parliament should be compelled to pay £213,000 for the salaries of officials who administered the affairs of India from England. He also complained of the off hand manner in which Indian affairs were disposed of by the House of Commons.

Mr. O'DONNELL informed the noble lord that next session he should, if no steps were taken, bring before the House certain abominations with which the noble lord had not dealt.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON, in reply, said, as to the charge on India for the home administration, the administration was taken over from the East India Company, and the expenses of the officials had always been charged to the people of India. Reference had been made to the Indian Museum; that had been transferred to South Kensington, and a considerable saving to the Indian revenue would be the result.

The resolutions were then agreed to.

The resolution relating to the East India revenue accounts was reported and agreed to.

THE NIZAM.

Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Secretary of State for India whether, according to ordinary custom, he would grant further papers in connection with the Nizam, the Berars, and debt, in continuation of the papers previously granted—viz., return 418 of 1854, No. 234 of 1859, No. 338 of 1867, and No. 29 of 1867-8; and whether the very confidential papers to which reference had been made would be communicated to the Ministers of the Nizam, in order that any allegations contained therein might be met and dealt with in an open and fair manner.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that in 1878 it was decided by the Government, after long consideration, not to reopen at present the question of Berar. It was added that if, on the Nizam's attaining his majority and undertaking the government of his State, he should desire to bring the whole of the treaty arrangements between the two Governments under general revision, the British Government would take his request into consideration. That intimation was given on the understanding that it would not prejudice the discretion of the Government of the day with regard to any question about the Nizam. The Hyderabad Government accepted that decision. Under these circumstances it would not be for the public interest to publish the papers asked for. There was no intention on the part of her Majesty's Government to make such a suggestion as was contained in the latter part of the question of his hon. and gallant friend. With respect to a communication he had received from his hon. friend the member for Carlisle, who wished to know whether the Government would lay on the table papers on the same subject, the answer that he had just given would suffice.

THE MYSOR STATE RAILWAY.—The Bangalore correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, writing on July 10, says:—"The line has been laid to within four miles of Mysor. Some little difficulty is found with the building of the bridge over the Cauvery at Seringapatam, but this will soon be overcome. The executive engineer, Mr. H. W. Clift has been ordered to survey the country in the Tumkur direction, as the Government proposes to lay a line to that city also. Another of the engineers, Mr. Rigg, has been transferred to Burma. Some improvements have been made along the line already opened. A refreshment room has been opened at Closepett, and the various station-houses have been, or will be shortly, improved. Col. Le Mesurier, the engineer in chief, is indefatigable at his work, and is solely owing to his energy that the Mysor State Railway up to date has been so successfully planned and worked. The carriages are very nice ones, and are much more comfortable than the Madras railways. The disputes and quarrels which are constantly occurring between Europeans and natives on the latter railway will be here avoided, as there are special carriages attached to every train, solely for the use of Europeans. On the whole, it is the general opinion that in a year or two the Mysor State Railway will be thoroughly finished and put on a secure basis, which will ensure its future success."

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour. Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For FULSUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

tion and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopædia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fair to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

SHORT GRAND PIANOS,
SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD
OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided,
thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

AN AGREEABLE SUBSTITUTE FOR COD-LIVER OIL.

A CONCENTRATED NUTRITIOUS DIGESTIVE FOOD.

VERY DESIRABLE AS A RESTORATIVE WHEN THE SYSTEM HAS BECOME REDUCED BY WASTING DISEASES.

Kepler Malt is free from Alcohol, and one tablespoonful contains more nutritive and digestive value than one pint of the strongest Beer, Ale, Porter, or any alcoholic or fermented Extract of Malt.

Ziemssen's Cyclopædia of Medicine says:—"Malt Extract is preferable to Cod-liver Oil, being more palatable and more easily digested."

The Lancet says:—"Kepler Malt Extract is very good and may be used with confidence."

"The Kepler Malt Extract is reliable, and is manufactured in such a careful manner as to ensure the preservation of its valuable constituents."

The Medical Times and Gazette says:—"The Kepler Malt Extract is deserving special commendation. Dr. W. Roberts, of Manchester, places it first on the list of Malt Extracts he had found reliable, and containing a proper amount of Diastase, and possessing the property of digestive starchy foods."

THE KEPLER COD-LIVER OIL WITH MALT EXTRACT

(CONTAINS 50 PER CENT. MALT EXTRACT).

"The taste of the oil is agreeably disguised. Its nutritive powers are greatly increased, and it is rendered easy of digestion."—British Medical Journal.

The Lancet says:—"The Kepler Cod-liver Oil with Malt Extract has hardly any of the taste of the oil. Many could take it easily who cannot take the oil."

Supplied by all respectable chemists. Agents wanted in every part of the world.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPT. 5, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 16; Madras and Allahabad, August 14; Calcutta, August 13.

THE official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 2 shows that the want of more rain continued to be felt during the week under report in several districts of the Madras Presidency and of the Mysor State, as well as in parts of the Nizam's territories and of the Bombay Deccan; but towards the end of the week showers fell in Mysor. In other parts of the Peninsula prospects are good, though in some places, particularly in the Central Provinces and in Baroda, constant rain is retarding the completion of kharif sowings. Good rain has also again fallen throughout the Central India and Rajputana States, and a break in the wet weather would now be beneficial in parts. In the Punjab the weather is seasonable, and agricultural prospects are satisfactory. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh and in Bengal good and general rain has benefited the crops, and prospects have, in consequence, much improved; but in a few places more rain still seems needed, while in some of the eastern and southern districts of Bengal the crops have been damaged by floods. In Assam and British Burma prospects continue generally satisfactory. On the whole, so far as there has been any change during the week, the reports show an improvement. With the exception of parts of Southern India, the season is now generally favourable for the crops throughout the country.

THE Times telegram, however, of September 4, gives us the glad news that all cause for serious anxiety regarding the crops in Mysor is now at an end. We learn that plentiful rain has fallen in Mysor, and the harvest prospects are much improved. The crops everywhere are in fair condition, except in the Shimoga and Chittledroog districts, where more rain is wanted.

WE regret to observe, from a Lahore telegram in the Bombay Gazette, dated August 15, that cholera was very prevalent there. The telegram was:—

"Cholera is bad in the native city; thirty cases daily, half fatal. It has also attacked the gaol and the lunatic asylum."

TELEGRAMS of yesterday's date from the correspondents of the Times at Quetta and Lahore, show an important and rather unexpected change in the position of affairs in Afghanistan. Ayub has suddenly announced his intention of deferring his advance against Abdur Rahman, in order that he may be able at once to head a holy war against the English, and jihad has already been proclaimed. The correspondents, who are naturally inclined to take a very optimistic view of the situation, believe that this proclamation is merely a dodge, by which Ayub hopes to attract men, money, and arms wherewith to strengthen himself at Herat.

WE sincerely trust that this view may prove to be a correct one; and, in that case, we shall probably soon hear of Ayub's retreat in the direction of Herat—when Lord Ripon will doubtless thank God that he is rid of a knave. But it is still on the cards that Ayub's bragging proclamation may turn out to be more than mere brutum fulmen. Of course, we know that Ayub's threats, if really meant, are sheer folly. But it is by no means so certain that he feels them to be so; and it is very certain that large numbers of Afghans—and, for that matter, of Indians too—would not agree with our estimate of the ridiculous disparity between the combatants. They remember Maiwand; they have all heard full accounts (and probably exaggerated accounts) of our Transvaal doings; they have all witnessed our retirement from Kandahar, and have smiled at our protestations that we executed that strategical movement out of our su-perabundant magnanimity. The Times correspondents show good reason for hoping, at least, that these are not the considerations which have produced the change in Ayub's plans; still, it should be remembered that it will be exactly, on some such occasion as the present that we shall first find out what it is we have lost in flinging away our much-scoffed-at "prestige" in Asia. Of course the lack of our ancient prestige will not affect the ultimate result, whenever the emergency may arise; for we shall win back that prestige in the old style, with British blood and Indian treasure.

"We have authentic news from Kandahar to August 31. On the afternoon of that day Ayub suddenly shifted his camp from a place a mile or two outside the city on the Cabul road to ground close under the walls, recalled his cavalry from Khel-i-Akhund, and issued a proclamation that he had abandoned his intention of fighting the Ameer and was about to turn his arms against the English. To this end he invited all persons having in their possession weapons belonging to the Government to consider them their own, on condition of joining his standard at once. It may be assumed that this is merely a somewhat clumsy plan to get hold of as many rifles as possible and send them to Herat, where he continues to despatch as much cash as he can lay hands on. When the Ameer gets within dangerous distance Ayub may be expected to fall back on the Helmand, if not to march straight to Herat, which is not improbable, as he is now being menaced from the north. The fact is the Ameer is too strong for him, and he prefers keeping his small force, now supplied with new arms, tents, and artillery, intact to risking all on a battle in which odds would be against him. No doubt he is right. With a little money in his exchequer and plenty of munitions of war, he may succeed in holding Herat almost indefinitely, and as long as he does so a revolution at Cabul may always place the throne at his feet. In the meantime he is trying to come to terms with the Ameer. About ten days ago Shams-ud-din Khan, ex-deputy governor, was, at his own suggestion, it is said, liberated from confinement and sent with a letter or message to meet Abdur Rahman. It is not known where the latter is, but as he was at Ghazni on the 18th ult. he should have reached Kelat-i-Ghilzai some days ago. Reports of the numbers and good equipment of the troops and levies with him and of his generosity to the tribes along the road have preceded him, and, contrasted with the poverty of Ayub and his feeble army, have given a deathblow to his popularity. All is quiet along our border and on the road to Kandahar, whence exports are freely coming, though merchants are wisely delaying to send goods there till affairs are more settled. Colonel St. John has returned to Quetta and goes on furlough to England at the end of October. His successor is unknown."

"Messenger who left Kandahar on the 30th reports Ayub still there with his army, and believes he has no intention of advancing beyond Khel-i-Akhund."

THE Lahore correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on Sunday, September 4, gives an account of the situation in Southern Afghanistan much the same as that sent us from Quetta:—

"My telegraphic news from Simla and Quetta, received up to eight o'clock this evening, shows conclusively that Ayub's popularity in Southern Afghanistan has almost, if not wholly, disappeared, for the present at least. His system of forced loans and requisition of arms has borne its natural fruit, and the tales of the Ameer's fair dealing and even generosity which have already reached Kandahar have, says one of my correspondents, still more embittered the popular feeling against Ayub. Not only does the Ameer appear to be well supplied with money, but his forces are believed to be very fairly equipped. They must number at least 7,000 or 8,000 men, or nearly twice as many as Ayub's followers. It is fully expected that as soon as this army reaches Kelat-i-Ghilzai, if it has not done so already, Ayub will make preparations for a retreat towards Fara. Meanwhile he is drawing in his advanced posts at Khel-i-Akhund, a village about thirty-five miles from Kandahar on the Cabul road, where they have been stationed for nearly a month past; he has also been despatching to Fara and Herat all the money and stores he has been able to lay his hands on—indeed, ever since the middle of last month Ayub's energies have been more fully occupied in securing his path of retreat than in trying to ensure success. The very fact that he has proclaimed a holy war against the English shows that he has little hope of being able to oppose the Ameer. The proclamation has had no effect, and the road all the way between Kandahar and the British frontier is reported perfectly safe and quiet. His last expedient has been to despatch Shams-ud-din with proposals of peace to the Ameer. Shams-ud-din was the Ameer's deputy-governor at Kandahar; it was he who, in reply to similar proposals before the battle of Karez, replied that as the Ameer's servant he would treat for peace only at Herat."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times gives a clear and interesting account of the state of affairs in Northern Afghanistan. Telegraphing yesterday, Sept. 4, he says:—

"News from Afghanistan during the past week has been chiefly confined to accounts, more or less trustworthy, of the Ameer's preparations and of his march. He ought now to be at or near Khelat-i-Ghilzai, while Ayub appears to have made little if any forward progress from Kandahar, and would now seem to be waiting an attack outside that city. The news of a decisive battle may reach us any day, or the present state of uncertainty may be protracted for some weeks longer. From Northern Afghanistan it is reported that Asmatulla Khan, the Ghilzai chief whose name was so often heard during our occupation of the Khyber, is taking advantage of the crisis to raid and plunder near Bara-khel. Another report, however, says Asmatulla has, at the Ameer's request, undertaken the charge of the road, and that under his guardianship the road is open, but not safe from Cabul to Jellalabad. Mir Butcha is said to be stirring up disturbances in Kohistan. An up country paper publishes a rumour that the Ameer has summoned his cousin Ishak Khan to follow him from Turkestan to Kelat-i-Ghilzai, but this is improbable. The Ameer's envoy is still at Simla, notwithstanding rumours to the contrary. I believe he has not yet asked for anything, nor made any complaint regarding the British policy at Kandahar or elsewhere. Apparently Abdur Rahman fully realises the situation and sees that the Indian Government is determined to leave him to his own resources. According to Kandahar advices, dated August 31, Ayub was still collecting the revenue and sending money to Herat, while professing his intention of waging a holy war. The feeling of the country is said to be rapidly turning against him."

FOLLOWING closely on the renewal of disturbances in the Bhil country we hear of unrest at the other end of Northern India, among the Sonthals of Bengal. A telegram from Calcutta in to-day's Times states that "some uneasiness is said to be again manifesting itself among the Sonthals, and measures are being taken by which a large force of police can be thrown into the district if required."

WE are glad to observe that the mercantile community of Bengal, both European and native, is alive to the importance of extending the railway communications with Assam and Cachar. Sir Ashley Eden is able, as usual, to show that he has not only realised the importance of the subject, but has already taken vigorous action in the matter. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times says:—

"Last Monday a large and influential deputation, representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the Calcutta Trades Association, and the British Indian Association, waited on the Lieutenant Governor for the purpose of urging the importance of an early extension of the railway system towards Assam and Cachar. The memorial pointed out that the best line would be one starting from Naraingunge, where it would connect with the Eastern Bengal Railway at Goalanda by steam ferry, and running through Dacca and Mymensing to Gowhaty, with a branch to Cachar and Sylhet. It was urged that the work would be of the greatest advantage to the tea districts, both as regards a means of supplying abundant and cheap food and labour and as giving increased facilities for conveying their produce to Calcutta. It is, moreover, proposed that the line should pass extensive coal-fields which have hitherto not been utilised owing to the want of means of access. Sir Ashley Eden stated in reply that he was fully alive to the importance of the subject, and that the line from Dacca to Mymensing would be immediately undertaken as a provincial public work, unless the Central Bengal Railway Company at once decided to avail themselves of their option to have it reserved to them."

WHEN the arrangements made by the Government of India with Messrs. Baring Brothers and Messrs. Rothschild in regard to the Central Bengal Railway were first published in this country we were reluctantly compelled to criticise them unfavourably. We considered that Major Baring had not secured for the Government as good terms as the state of the money market would warrant the expectation of, and that he had shown himself too anxious to make things comfortable for "private enterprise." Yesterday's telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times show that the Indian press and Indian public opinion take exactly the same view of the transaction that we did—except that the blame for it is thrown on "the India-office," the recognised whipping-boy in Indian official circles for all the sins of the Indian Government. The telegrams runs thus:—

"The correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Government of India on the subject of the Central Bengal Railway has been published in the official Gazette and has not been very favourably criticised as it is thought that the India-office, in their eagerness to secure Messrs. Rothschild's co-operation, deliberately disregarded the advice of the Indian Government, and showed some carelessness about the interests of the Indian public."

It is reported that Lieut. Col. White, military secretary to Lord Ripon, will shortly resign his appointment and return to England in order to take command of the 2nd Battalion Gordon Highlanders, about to return from active service at the Cape.

OUR readers will remember that a most discreditable attack was made some time back on Sir Richard Meade in the columns of a London publication, which obtained notoriety by being made the subject of a question in the House of Commons. One of the statements made in that attack is effectually disposed of in yesterday's telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

"Some attention appears to have been attracted in England by an allegation in the London Statesman for July that a message was conveyed to Sir Salar Jung in 1877 threatening him with deportation, and that he undoubtedly believed this to be intended. I am in a position to state that Sir Salar Jung has informed the Resident at Hyderabad that neither directly nor indirectly did he receive from the Residency any threat of deportation, and he has authorised the publication of this statement."

MR. JUSTICE WEST, of Bombay, has published an important minute on the bill to amend the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act. Mr. West takes a grave view of the situation, and considers that a decided measure is required to restore the credit of the ryots. The result of making the ryots irresponsible has been to destroy their credit; and in the present state of their finances, Mr. West says, a single bad season will bring them to ruin.

SOME interesting figures from the results of the census are telegraphed by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

"The completed totals of the census for all India which was taken in February have now been published. They are as follow:—Bengal, 68,829,920; Assam, 4,815,157; Madras, 30,839,181; Bombay, 20,920,119; Sind, 2,404,934; North West Provinces, 33,445,111; Oudh, 11,407,625; Punjab, 22,647,542; Central Provinces, 11,505,149; Berar, 2,670,982; Burma, 3,707,646; Mysor, 4,186,399; Coorg, 178,233; Ajmere, 453,075; Baroda, 2,154,469; Travancore, 2,401,158; and Cochin, 600,278. The grand total for all India is 252,541,210, of whom, approximately, 123,211,327 are males and 118,166,371 females. But the details as to sex are not absolutely trustworthy, as they are absent for Rajputana, a portion of Hyderabad, and independent Sikkim. The increase since the last census appears to be 12,788,565. The provinces showing the greatest increases are:—Burma, 35 per cent.; the Central Provinces, 25; Berar, 20; and Assam, 19 per cent. The only provinces showing a decrease are Mysor 17, and Madras 2 per cent. Mr. Plowden, the census commissioner, claims for the census the credit of being the largest work of the kind ever undertaken in any country."

THE importation of machinery for gold mining is beginning to tell upon the trade returns of the Madras Presidency. In the three months April, May, and June this year the machinery imported into Madras was valued at Rs. 3,30,265, or more than five times as much as in the corresponding months last year.

THE enterprise of the Calcutta tea syndicate is likely to be richly rewarded. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs that:—

"The Calcutta Tea Syndicate, which was established last year for the purpose of opening up the Australian and American markets to Indian tea, have published a report, which shows that their operations have been attended with great success. The amount of last season's Indian tea exported to Australia was 621,128lb., against 86,628lb. in the previous year. The report states that there appears to be no difficulty in the way of disposing of a very much larger amount of Indian tea in the Melbourne market, and that over 90,000lb. of this season's crop have been already despatched. The agent of the syndicate in America reports that the prospects of opening up trade with that country look most promising, and he has telegraphed for 1,000 half-chests of tea for New York and Chicago.

COLONEL LAURIE, whose excellent work on "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma" was published last year, is about to issue another volume on Burma entitled "Ashé Pyee: the Superior Country," setting forth the great attractions of Burma to British Enterprise and Commerce. The work will be issued by W. H. Allen and Co.

THE Athenæum of August 27 devotes seven columns to an admirably exhaustive review of Mr. Hunter's "Imperial Gazetteer of India," the Times has given it two notices—one of three columns on May 26, and one of two columns on August 27. These reviews, with the long and scholarly notice in the Academy of July 2, signed by Mr. Clements R. Markham, C.B., are sufficient to show the appreciation of Mr. Hunter's great work that has been evinced by the London press.

WE regret to have to record this week the loss of one of those Indian civilians who, distinguished by their great deeds in a time now almost forgotten, have handed down to the Civil Service of the present day the glorious traditions of that bygone time as the best possible incentive to high emprise. To our junior civilians the subject of this notice will be known only by repute, or in the pages of Kaye's "Indian Worthies" and Edwardes's "Year on the Punjab Frontier," but many seniors will remember him as a revered leader. Mr. Arthur Herbert Cocks, C.B., late B.C.S., died in London on the 29th of August. He was one of Sir Henry Lawrence's leading assistants in the Lahore Residency, and one for whom Sir Henry and Lord Lawrence, and, indeed, all with whom he had acted, had an affectionate regard. A warm-hearted, energetic, able, and single-minded official, he won in an unusual degree the esteem and confidence of natives. He was a typical Anglo-Indian of the old Haileybury school, a valuable officer, whether employed in office work, or moving through a district studying native character and introducing reforms, or on active service with an army. He was political officer to Lord Gough at the battle of Guzerat, and received a severe wound in a hand-to-hand encounter with a Sikh sowar, one of a party of cavalry who threatened to attack Gough and his small escort. For his services on this occasion and during the campaign Mr. Cocks received the Punjab War Medal and a Civil Companionship of the Bath. He entered the Civil Service in 1837 and retired in 1863. During the Mutiny he played a useful, though not prominent, part. Prior to the annexation of the Punjab he was employed under Sir C. Napier in Sind, with Mr. (now Sir Charles) Wingfield and Mr. Riddell, both of his own service.

WE have also to deplore the loss of a distinguished English orientalist, in the premature death of Professor Dowson. Habitues of the Asiatic Society will remember his coming there in the olden time as Mr. Edwin Norris's assistant; and under such teaching he became known at an early age for his facile acquirement of languages. He was a recognised and very successful coach for the Haileybury youth in those days. At a later period he was selected by Mr. Edward Thomas for the editorship of Elliot's "Muhammadan Historians" of India; and his name will undoubtedly be mainly remembered in connection with this work, which he performed in such a way as fully to justify Mr. Thomas's choice.

THE Times of India gives the following obituary for the week ending August 16:—Lieutenant the Hon. R. B. Hamilton, Rifle Brigade; the Raja of Palghaut.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS FUND.

THE promulgation of the new Indian army pensions has caused quite a stir among the officers interested in them, and certainly there would be much reason for satisfaction with the scale, which has been liberally increased, were not the good effect it will undoubtedly produce almost entirely nullified by the provision that "furlough service for these pensions will continue to be governed by the furlough regulations under which each officer may be serving." The fact, therefore, remains that the old penalties on account of leave are to be continued, and it is to be feared that the object which the Government have in view will in consequence not be attained. Despite a perhaps natural official reticence on the serious condition of our native Indian Army, it is really no secret that very many regiments are dangerously inefficient, the cause being that there is an extraordinary want of captains and subalterns whose way is blocked by the immense plethora of field officers, all doing their utmost to serve on their turn, officers would most gladly retire, have hitherto being ridiculously small in per annum which is obtained after thirty-eight years who entered the Staff Corps before September 12, 1800. some additional inducement were necessary to, as it were, co. officers to remain on to the end, we have these leave penalties which, under the rules of 1854 and 1868, really give men no alternative. It must be premised that for the annuity due after thirty-eight years all authorised leave counts as service, but for the earlier pensions there come in the limitations which are so serious a grievance. Thus Government, wishing very rightly to get officers to retire earlier so that promotion to regimental command may once more enter into the practical expectations of every officer, have offered the very fair pension of £783 after thirty-two years' service, and did this really mean what it appears to do on the face of it few people would be disposed to deny that the sum in question represents the fairly discounted value of the claim to £1,125 per annum after another six years of service, but the fatal blot is that in thirty-two years only four years' leave or furlough can be counted for pension, and anything in excess of this limit must be made good. It is, we believe, a fact that there is scarcely a single officer concerned who during thirty-two years' service has not had more than four years' leave, and it is therefore impossible for them to retire on the pension offered until they have wiped off the balance standing against them. Thus, if one has had six years' leave he must stay on for two years more and complete his thirty-fourth year in the service before he is entitled to the pension of thirty-two. And here the obvious consideration arises that he is now two years nearer to his claim for the £1,125 per annum, and though he would have been disposed to forego that and take £783 rather than serve six more years, it is a very different matter now that he is within four years of it. Having got so far he will make a strenuous effort to hang on to the end, and thus the position will remain exactly the same as it is at present. So great is the block in promotion consequent on this state of things that at the end of last year—to take a few instances—the second in command of the 4th Bengal Cavalry had held that position for seventeen years; the officer commanding the 9th Bengal Cavalry had held that position for seventeen years, while the commandant of the 18th Bengal Cavalry, who had been in that position for five years already, can retain it for thirteen years longer. We are promised regulations for limiting the tenure of command, but this, though it will promote the efficiency of the regiments, will flood the country with field officers doing "general duty"—in other words, nothing—and how costly this will be may be judged from the fact that the twenty-six field officers doing "general duty" in the Bengal Presidency during the last year were costing the taxpayers of India close upon three lakhs of rupees per annum, and this, mark you, pending the maturity of their claims to the highest pensions. It cannot be too much regretted that Government have not adopted the recommendation of the Simla Army Commission—that all authorised leave should count for pension; and it is to be hoped that an alteration may still be made so that we may be spared the spectacle of hundreds of field officers drawing full pay of £1,500 to £2,000 a year from the Indian taxpayers in order to make good years of leave which competent authority granted them, doing without dash and energy the work of younger men, and finally saddling the Exchequer with the heavy burden of annuities of £1,125.—Morning Post.

THE GAOLS OF BENGAL.

MR. FRANK HUGH O'DONNELL has forwarded to the Editor of the Times the following letter, in reply to the communication of Mr. A. S. Lethbridge, M.D., the Inspector of Gaols, Bengal, published in our columns last week:—

"Sir,—Dr. Lethbridge, Inspector of Gaols in Bengal during the starvation year of 1879, may claim a certain indulgence in his endeavours to explain satisfactorily the facts of that year, but when he asserts in his letter to you that I 'took the death-rate of a few small gaols and generalised on these figures as representing the state of the gaols of a province,' he makes an accusation against my good faith which exceeds the limits of indulgence. I generalised from no small group of gaols. I quoted none but official statistics, for which I can give page and paragraph. It is not the case that I rested my charges on a group of 'sub-Himalayan' gaols where unhealthy conditions usually exist. Rajshahi Gaol, with its mortality of 17 per cent., is in no sub-Himalayan district, nor is Singbhum, with its mortality of 21 per cent., nor is Bogra, with its mortality of 26 per cent. Neither is it the case that the state of the general public health in any way accounted for the fearful death rate within the gaols. On the contrary, Sir Ashley Eden expressly states that 'the great sickness and mortality of the year cannot be attributed to the general state of the public health,' which, as the Calcutta Englishman remarks, was unquestionably good in 1879.

"Dr. Lethbridge considers that I have done the gaol authorities grievous wrong, inasmuch as I have refused to be satisfied with their conduct in putting a stop to the starvation of the year 1879 as soon as 'the medical returns for 1879 were tabulated and brought under consideration in March, 1880.' But, sir, every leading organ of Indian and Anglo-Indian opinion is equally dissatisfied. The Calcutta Englishman, commenting upon Dr. Lethbridge's letter to you, which he published in the Press of India a month ago, observes that 'it is scarcely credible that the inspector general is left in ignorance of the health condition of his gaols from year's end to year's end.' We do not for an instant believe that Dr. Lethbridge was unaware down to March, 1880, that in the previous year the gaol population was dying away at a rate, as he puts it, of an extraordinary mortality. The Bombay Gazette, also, commenting upon Dr. Lethbridge's letter to you, refers with just severity to the admission that 'the frightful increase of mortality was allowed to go on from month to month unchecked, until, forsooth, the close of the official year allowed the results for twelve months to be tabulated.' The 1,600 deaths of men and women in the Bengal gaols in 1879, at least 1,200 of which were due to preventable causes, did not occur in a rush at the close of the official year. They began with the introduction of the starvation diet in March, 1879. They went on from month to month through the whole ghastly twelve down to March 1880, and we have it admitted by Dr. Lethbridge himself in his letter to you, in which he impugns my proceedings so hardily, that only 'on the 22nd of March, 1880, on my recommendation, the Bengal Government issued immediate orders increasing the diet.' Is, then, Dr. Lethbridge an inspector-general who does not inspect?

"I am happy to acknowledge that the administration report for 1880 shows a marked improvement upon the terrible figures of the preceding year. As a leading Bengal journal says, 'There are only three gaols in which the death-rate exceeded 150 per 1,000, as against eleven gaols in 1879. In only one gaol was the mortality above 200 per 1,000, as against seven gaols with that terrible death-roll in 1879.' Though these statistics of 'improvement' would still be fearful anywhere else, perhaps they are eminently creditable under the circumstances. But, sir, it would be to leave a very incomplete impression of the facts of the situation if I were not to add that much of the excessive mortality which extended into the year 1880-81 was due to the dreadful circumstance that numbers of the wretched convicts were reduced to such a condition by the starvation of the previous year that even better food came too late to save them. The administration report for the year 1880-81 itself admits that 'the deficient diet scale of the previous year injured the constitutions of a large number of the prisoners, who, although they were kept alive during the healthy months, had not the constitutional stamina to resist cold or the climatic influences of the unhealthy season. The power of assimilation being impaired or lost, extra diet to them was useless.' It is not an organ of outside opinion; it is no journal of Bombay or Madras; but a Bengal newspaper, whose office Dr. Lethbridge can visit every day he pleases at Calcutta, which observes upon 'this state of things in the gaols of Bengal,' that 'that silent throng of 17,000 convicts, bound by the strict discipline of prison life to obey in all things without a murmur, melting away by one of the most cruel of deaths, was a matter to rouse the pity of the most blunted humanity.' Sir, that feeling of the commonest humanity, which will, perhaps, not altogether denied even to an Irish Nationalist, has been my sole motive for calling the attention of Parliament and the public to the facts which were brought to my knowledge. Surely the wise and just administration of the countless millions of our unrepresented fellow subjects in India ought to be above and beyond all party considerations.

"In his remarks upon flogging in the year 1879, Dr. Lethbridge seems to forget that I did not merely complain of the enormous number of floggings, 8,232, inflicted in that year. What constitutes the peculiarly revolting character of those punishments is, that they were nearly double the number, 4,789, inflicted in 1878, and nearly four times the number, 2,370, inflicted in such an average year as 1876—that is to say, while the miserable convicts were rendered sick unto death with want of food and unable to do their tale of penal work, they were being flogged for the short work caused by their weakness and emaciation, and flogged far beyond the proportion, of course, of years of average diet. This, too, went on from month to month, though it was only 'at the close of the official year' that the department deigned to take official notice of the hideous circumstance.

"Trusting to your fairness to allow this explanation of my position to appear in reply to the charges of the department, I would conclude with a very brief reply to another of your correspondents, who, writing in the Times of Wednesday last on behalf of the tea planters of Assam, takes occasion to throw doubts upon the grounds of my plea for protection for the coolie immigrants by quoting certain testimony to the general salubrity of Assam. Well, I shall not go into that matter now, but if the general healthiness of Assam be as described by the secretary of the tea planters, that only heightens the significance of the exceptional mortality among the coolies on the Assam plantations, which Lord Hartington has admitted, and which the Pioneer, assuredly not an authority unfriendly to the tea planters, sum up in these words:—'For three years the average mortality among the immigrants ranges from ten to eleven per cent. In the first two years the rate probably exceeds twelve per cent.' In other words, Sir, out of every hundred coolies indentured for three years' labour in Assam tea gardens from thirty to thirty-six never see their homes again. Tea enterprise in Assam deserves encouragement, and I hope will be encouraged, but it will hardly sweeten our morning cup of Assam tea to know that hardly two in three of the poor labourers who cultivate the tea gardens survive their three years' term under present conditions. I have the honour to remain, your obedient servant, "August 27.

TRICKS OF THE HORSE TRADE.

CAPTAIN G. W. COCKBURN, late of the 42nd (Black Watch), has written a spirited pamphlet, in which he forcibly exposes the tricks of the horse trade, especially in regard to the numerous deceptions practised on the inexperienced and the unwary at auctions. He has invented a new system, which he believes will be a great boon to bona fide buyers and sellers of horses; and to ensure that a full and fair trial shall be given to the principles he sets forth, he has entered into an arrangement with Messrs. Mercer and Co., of 6, Park-lane, Piccadilly, the proprietors of the "Park-lane Horse Mart," under which he will act as auctioneer at the mart, and put his system into rigorous practice there. Captain Cockburn's system has much to recommend it in the interests of the general public, as opposed to those of professional horse copers. He thus explains its chief points:—

"1. That the names of the owners of all horses for sale, either by auction or on commission, shall be shown in the auction catalogues, or in the description to be hung in the stall of each horse, and that no horses, the owners of which are ashamed of owning them, or have reasons for hiding their previous histories, shall be admitted into the yard for sale; their being already plenty of places for such horses to be sent to, and it being my opinion that a bona fide buyer of a horse has as much reason and right to know its previous history as the hirer of a servant has.

"2. That the name and address of the buyer shall always be given to the seller, that he may know what has become of the horse, and be able to ascertain that he has received the full price paid for it, and where not objected to in writing by either party, shall be published in some one newspaper, after each auction.

"3. That a descriptive roll in the form given below, giving price and all possible particulars of each horse, and signed by the owner as correct, according to the best of his belief, but with a bar to its being acted on as a warranty, or an excuse of returning the horse after purchase, be posted in the stall of each horse in the yard, and given with the horse to the buyer.

"4. That though no hitting or hustling horses in the yard will be allowed under any pretence whatever, and no groom or other person be allowed in any way to strike, abuse, or ill-treat the horses therein, yet any one wishing to try a horse, either in harness or saddle, and willing to pay ten shillings for the privilege of doing so, and to take all risks of injuring the horse whilst trying him, shall be allowed to do so, a responsible person being sent with him to see that nothing more than a fair trial is made of what the horse is warranted to be (say, for instance, "quiet to ride and drive"), which will be infinitely better both for the horse and buyer than having it hustled about and bullied in the yard and frightened into fits with cracking of whips, &c., the use of which in this yard will be prohibited.

"5. All horses standing in the yard over three days will be occasionally exercised in the park, under careful supervision, at the risk of the owner unless he should object to this in writing when entering his horse.

"6. That all horses put up for auction at the sales be put up without reserve, or at an upset price, for a set fee of 10s., and that in the event of the owner or any friend or representative of his buying the horse in for him, no difference be made in the amount of commission to be charged, and that no mock auctioneering, or running up to concealed reserve by the auctioneer be permitted or practised."

A HISTORY OF THE AFGHAN WAR.*

MR. HENSMAN, the special correspondent of the Pioneer, enjoys unique advantages as a chronicler of the Afghan campaigns of General Roberts. He was the only non-combatant correspondent allowed to accompany the force; and, as this circumstance has often been cited as an instance of the favouritism of the Government of India towards the semi-official journal at Allahabad, we will quote Mr. Hensman's own explanation of it:—

"The Government of India had notified that 'non-combatant correspondents' would not be allowed to join the force, the history of whose achievements was to be left to regimental officers, who might in their spare hours supply information, carefully visé, to such newspapers as chose to accept it. So carelessly was this strange order issued that Sir Frederick Roberts never received official intimation of its existence, and he welcomed me at Ali Kheyl on the eve of his departure for Kushi as, I am sure, he would have welcomed any other correspondent who had chosen to cross the frontier and push on without escort and with their own baggage animals."

Sir Frederick Roberts says of the history now published—"Nothing could be more accurate or graphic." And again he writes:—"I thought your description of the fight at Charasia was one that any soldier might have been proud of writing; but your recent letters are, if possible, even better." Laudatus a laudato, Mr. Hensman well deserves the high praise he has received from General Roberts. His descriptions of the military movements are as spirited as they are accurate, whilst his comments on the progress of the war are lucid and highly readable. He gives carefully executed maps to illustrate all the chief engagements, which enable the reader to follow the story and to understand the operations described. His book, as the independent and perfectly trustworthy narrative of an eyewitness, will undoubtedly take rank along with the official despatches as the standard material for the history of the war. We regret the absence of an index, which would have rendered it more useful for reference; but this is a small mechanical defect that can readily be amended in a later edition.

There are some points of especial interest in Mr. Hensman's account of the various developments of our Afghan policy. We need hardly say that it fully demonstrates the malicious untruthfulness of the accusations that were brought against the humanity of the British arms in Afghanistan by some irresponsible critics of the Radical party last year. There are, again, some pages which will be read with a feeling of sadness at the change that has come over the spirit of our dream since the "scuttling" policy has come into vogue; as an instance of this, we will quote Mr. Hensman's description of the assurances and pledges given by Mr. Griffin to the Afghan Sirdars in March and April of last year:—

"It had also been found that, during three generations, the Durani sovereigns of Cabul had been unable, or unwilling, to carry out treaty obligations with India, and it had now been decided that their power should be curtailed and certain subdivisions made of Afghanistan. While the British Government had no desire to annex the country, they were resolved that Kandahar and Herat must henceforth no longer appertain to the sovereign of Afghanistan. They would be separate and distinct, and the future ruler of Cabul would have to look upon them as removed from his jurisdiction. It had also been determined that the army of occupation should remain in Afghanistan until a new ruler had been appointed strong enough to accept and carry out the obligations to be imposed upon him, and such a ruler would have to be found. He must be strong enough to ensure the protection of such Afghans as were the friends of the British, in order that, when the army withdrew, there might not be a risk of such men suffering for their fidelity to us. Our friends must be the friends of any ruler placed in power, and he must be prepared to protect them."

This reads oddly to-day, just when we are receiving telegraphic information from Quetta that the ruler of Kandahar is proclaiming "jihad against the English!"

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In page 833 of your paper of yesterday's date the true cause of the mortality in the prisons of the Bengal Province is explained. A prison conference or committee was held, and this irresponsible committee recommended a reduction of diet and prescribed a scale of rations insufficient to support life, and the Government of India decreed its adoption. The new dietary was introduced on March 1, 1879, and one year's experience displayed so terrible a mortality that the Bengal Government, without waiting for another committee, issued immediate orders for increasing the diet. For one whole year the prisoners in Bengal had been slowly starving on rations 174-249s only, and in Behar 208-288s only, of the quantity required for health. Now, who is responsible for this wanton and ignorant destruction of human life? Lord Dalhousie, Governor General, some thirty years ago pointed out that boards and committees in India are mischievous. In England they do little mischief, for they have little power; but in India they may kill more people than a Tartar conqueror. Irresponsible individuals ought not to be allowed to ride their hobbies to the destruction of hundreds of poor souls who are not permitted to supplement their starvation diet with the charitable contributions of the benevolent.—Your obedient servant,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Would you be surprised to find that the "girl of the period" of the present day is no worse than her sisters of former times, if we are to believe the testimony of the Calcutta Gazette of June 11, 1818, which contains the following?—

"APOLOGY FOR THE FAIR.

"Unstain'd by vice, the lovely Eve
Nor cloathes nor vesture wore;
'Twas Sin first whispered her to weave Th' accusing robes she wore.

"Hence do our fair, who virtue love,
This badge of sin detest;
Their purity they boldly prove By going quite undrest."

THE FRACAS IN THE TOWN-HALL, CALCUTTA.—It is not often that a stirring event occurs to vary the monotony of our hot-weather existence, or that the mild Hindu of Bengal is aroused sufficiently to engage in a sanguinary conflict with trained forces; nevertheless, yesterday, the 18th July, 1881, will be memorable in the history of the metropolis, as the date upon which the "1881 Census-office" was assaulted and captured by the Calcutta Reserve Police after a spirited resistance by the garrison, about 70 men and 150 there or thereabouts. The scene of the conflict was the lower floor of the Town-hall, used as a portion of the Census-office. On Monday last, one of the assistants, a Bengali abstractor of Section B of the Census-office, wanted to go up to the second story of the building, when a native constable on duty seized him by the scruff of his neck and dragged him back, giving him, it is said, abuse at the same time. The assistant's fellow abstractors, being indignant at this usage of one of their number, interfered, and took the man and the constable to the superintendent of census, Section B. Whilst a report was being made to that officer, the constable's demeanour and tone of voice seem to have been sufficiently provoking to have threatened a breach of the peace, to prevent which he was ordered out of the office; but he refused to leave, stating that he was the constable posted at the door, and was forcibly ejected. In the meantime his brother constables—eight or ten in number—on hearing a noise and suspecting that something was up, came on the scene, headed by the custodian of the Town-hall and a corporal of police, to render assistance to their comrade. An affray was imminent, but was avoided for the time being by the influence of the several superintendents of the office. At two o'clock in the afternoon another skirmish took place. A clerk of census, Section B, went to the Town-hall latrine, and, having apparently "crossed the frontier," was attacked by the police sentry, beaten, it is said, seized, and taken into the police quarter under the Town-hall. When the census superintendents heard what had transpired, one of them, Babu Hurry Mohun Sen, accompanied by Moulvi Nurul Huq as orderly officer, proceeded to the camp of the opposing forces, negotiated the release of the prisoner, and took measures to provide against a recurrence. Great indignation is said, however, to have been felt in the census castle at the treatment by the police of their prisoner, which led to an open declaration of war yesterday. Between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning of yesterday a clerk of census, Section A, had occasion to go into the Town-hall compound to one of the out-buildings, and, like his comrade of Section B, was seized, beaten, and carried off. On this coming to the knowledge of the garrison, the whole started up shouting to be led out against their foes. All the endeavours of Supervisor Moulvi Nurul Huq to quiet his army were futile, but the police, hearing the row and suspecting the nature of it, rushed to arms (bamboos) and advanced on the Census-office. The actual hostilities now commenced. Three assaults were made, but gallantly repulsed by the Babus, who bombarded their assailants with marble door weights, stools, benches, and legs of benches, placing three of them hors de combat. Strategy was resorted to, and the fourth assault with fresh troops was successful. An eyewitness at the Government printing office states that when the police carried the place the din inside was terrible—the clashing of sticks, yells, groans, &c. The garrison were routed and surrendered, losing three of their number—one with a broken skull, another wounded in the head in a lesser degree, and the third almost bereft of his nasal organ. In the victorious army we said that three were hors de combat—one lost a portion of his ear, a second his forefinger, and the third was smitten on the head. The commissioner, deputy commissioner of police, and numerous other police officers arrived subsequently to discharge their duties in the case; but we were present at the same time, and seldom if ever have we seen a crowd so excited, agitated as it was with suppressed wrath, and it required but a word of encouragement to have caused a fresh outbreak with serious results. That this did not occur is mainly due to the exertions of the several superintendents and supervisors—one of the latter, Moulvi Nurul Huq, got thrashed by both sides and lost some currency notes and silver in the bargain—for one Babu very excitedly exclaimed to us, "Would to God I had been present; I would have led my countrymen and destroyed our oppressors," and he was forthwith suppressed by his friends. The battle, or rather assault, must have been pretty general, for we found projectiles in the shape of broken furniture, bricks, and lumps of marble plentifully strewn all over the compound, in some degree corroborating the statement made to us by one of the defenders to the effect that the missiles "in the air, Sir, were like flies." So the Census-office fell, but with its fall records of the census have been destroyed or lost. Office furniture, Town-hall lamp shades, and oil painting frames smashed, the last only slightly fortunately, and it now remains to be seen who will be made responsible for the whole occurrence.—Englishman.

BENGAL IN 1880.

THE Indian Administration Reports are very little known in this country, and almost inaccessible to British readers, but the mass of interesting matter which they contain furnishes year by year an excellent picture of the development and material progress of our great eastern dependency. A review of the whole series would form a complete panoramic survey of the numerous provinces which go to make up the somewhat incongruous whole termed India, but would demand far too much space in these columns. We, therefore, content ourselves with a glance at the report which deals with Bengal, the most important province, and one numbering little less than 70,000,000 inhabitants. The affairs of this huge province are detailed in the report in close on 600 closely printed pages, supplemented by more than 200 pages of numerous and elaborate—almost too elaborate—statistical tables. Indeed the only regrettable feature of the report is one common to most Indian official documents, a tendency to overdo the dry statistical part of the information and to neglect the examination, analyses, and explanations without which figures are so often unmeaning, if not actually misleading. The first noteworthy fact one comes across is the great increase of mortality and sickness in the gaols during the official year 1879-80. This was higher than in any of the preceding sixteen years, notwithstanding that the average daily gaol population had been lowered by better harvests and a return of comparative prosperity. The chief cause assigned for this mortality is the experimental adoption of a reduced diet scale, a state of affairs which suggests grave neglect during the conduct of such an experiment, and to which Mr. O'Donnell has done well to draw attention in the House of Commons.

Turning to the material condition of the people at large, it is gratifying to observe that it was generally very prosperous. In parts of the Dacca division, however, which were affected by the floods, there was some distress during the early part of the year, and in the Orissa division the non-agricultural classes suffered from the high prices of food grains. In Behar, where famine was so disastrous a few years since, there are clear signs of amelioration, encouraged by a plentiful rainfall. Education, trade, railways, and canals appear to be producing their natural effects, and hopes are entertained that the Rent Commission will result in giving the peasants what they most need—security of tenure and protection against undue enhancement. The Tirhoot and Gya lines are already paying a considerable net profit to Government over and above the charge for interest on the capital outlay. The manufacture of sugar is making rapid strides in Shahabad and Gya, and in other parts of Behar the prices obtainable for agricultural produce of various kinds have so much increased that Government has found it necessary to offer an enhanced price for crude opium. The increase in the excise receipts is another sure proof of the augmented spending power of the people. In Bengal generally the prosperity of the peasantry is rapidly increasing. The increased consumption of piece goods and the rise in the revenue from excise leave no doubt of this. The traffic on the Northern Bengal State Railway is expanding month by month, and at times during the year it was reported that the rolling-stock was unequal to the extraordinary demand made upon it for the jute traffic. The tobacco farm of Messrs. Begg, Dunlop, and Co., at Poosa, turned out about 130,000lb. of manufactured leaf during the year, and they have now begun the manufacture of cigars. The total area under tea cultivation during 1879 increased, but the outturn was comparatively short, owing to unfavourable weather, being 6,000,000lbs., as against 8,000,000lbs. during the previous year. For cinchona the season was very favourable for planting operations, and nearly twice as many young succiruba trees were planted as last year. At Mongpoo the factory manager has succeeded in preparing pure sulphate, undistinguishable in appearance from that manufactured by the best European makers. The manufacture of the febrifuge is progressing favourably and the public demand for it is increasing.

The total import and export trade of the year in both merchandise and treasure was over five and a-half crores of rupees (roughly, £5,000,000), but it still fell short of the trade of 1877-78 by nearly eleven crores. There was a large increase in the import of the inferior kinds of cotton goods, following on the exemption of such goods from duty since March, 1879, while imports of cotton goods of all sorts increased by one and three-quarter million sterling. In treasure there was a decided increase of about £20,000, affording evidence of the increased ability of the people to invest their earnings in jewellery and ornaments; and an increase of about a million sterling took place in silver, due to a large importation from China for the payment of shipments of cotton and opium. The development of the export trade in hides and skins, particularly with the United States, has been most marked within the last year or two, the cause being doubtless the opening up of communication with new districts in the interior by the extension of the railways in Behar and Northern Bengal. In the import trade the increase in piece goods is the most noteworthy feature, the expansion being accounted for by the present prosperity of the people, combined with the recent development of roads, canals, and railways. The remission of duty on certain classes of cotton goods is said to have led to sacrifices being made by the Government of India with no corresponding advantage, the effect being that the local manufacturers have not been ousted from the market, but that Lancashire has been driven to manufacture a new class of goods, which merely ousts another class of Lancashire goods falling under the dutiable standard.

On the general subject of village sanitation, the policy of the Government is to endeavour gradually to bring the people to a sense of the evils induced by the neglect of cleanliness and sanitary rules. The Sanitary Commissioner has now a large staff of officers at his disposal, and these, with the assistance of all classes of Government officials, endeavour to induce the villagers to adopt simple measures of drainage and the like, which may often be all that is required to check an outbreak of disease. But the time is yet far distant when sanitary reform can be enforced in Bengal villages by legislative enactment. Education shows an increase both in the numbers of schools and pupils. The rapid extension of primary education in recent years, due to the general adoption of the system of payment by results, has made such large demands upon the time of the inspecting officers as to necessitate assistant inspectors of schools in several divisions, with the special object of aiding the inspectors in their control of secondary instruction. These officers have done excellent work and are proving of great use to the department. Omitting those schools which read for no departmental standard and lie outside the Government system, organised instruction showed an increase in round numbers of 6,000 schools and 100,000 pupils—a gratifying proof of the silent but steady progress towards moral and material development of this important province.—Times.

THE PROGRESS OF GEOGRAPHY IN ASIA DURING THE LAST FIFTY YEARS.

In the geographical section of the British Association on Friday, the proceedings opened with a paper by Sir R. Temple on the above subject. The author described the physical geography of the country, pointed out those portions which had been explored and partly explored, and after a reference to some of the discoveries made in recent years, said geographers from most of the European nations had laboured for a common end; the efforts of the Governments, of societies, and of individuals had been combined, and the results had been on the whole commensurate with the cost in money and resources, and with the wear and tear in human life and strength. The great share borne by England and Russia was only proportionate to the magnitude of their stake in Asia. Other European nations had also earned a title to geographical fame. Still, it must be admitted that the greater part of Asia had not yet been touched by scientific operations on a complete scale. In the whole of Asia, only India, Ceylon, Cyprus, Western Palestine, Caucasus, the Caspian basin, part of Western Siberia, and part of Japan, also many points in the Asiatic coast line had been subjected to trigonometrical observation, and even in the professionally surveyed territories many defects and imperfections were acknowledged to remain. The southern coasts of Asia had been surveyed in sufficient detail for geographical purposes. Yet, according to the demands of a growing traffic and of maritime resort these surveys need frequently to be amplified in detail. The ordinary surveys by the Indian Navy were good in their day, and reflected honour on Moresby, Ross, and others, still the Government had ordered a new survey to be made for nautical purposes. A fresh survey might have to be made one day for the whole of the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. The British Admiralty were making yearly additions to the surveys of the Chinese coasts. There were at present unexplored parts of the Himalayas, of Afghanistan, and Beloochistan; of Arabia nearly the whole of the Kuen Lun region, north of Thibet, in the very heart of Asia. Further, among the principal geographical problems awaiting solution were the connexion of the Thibetan San Po with the Indian Brahmapootra, the existence of mountains connecting the Kuen Lun range eastwards with the Chinese ranges, the sources and upper sources of the Irrawaddy, Salween, Meking, and Hoang Ho, the disposition of the mountains between the Ladakh passes and the Hindu Kush, or Indian Caucasus, north of Cabul, near to the culminating region of the entire continent.

Dr. Sclater said their knowledge of Afghanistan and Kandahar, though much increased by the late expedition, was still very incomplete. They had nothing to do with politics, but as geographers and civilisers they might express their regret that Kandahar had been abandoned. It was to him and many others, apart from all political questions, a most miserable thing that, after we had planted the foot of civilisation in Southern Afghanistan, it should be given back to barbarism. Half a million had been spent upon the railway there, of which Sir Richard Temple was the real author and builder, and which many of them had fondly looked forward to as the way in which civilisation should be carried into the country. He was told that the railway was being broken up and the materials used for building houses. He should like to ask Sir Richard, if that was the case, whether the present Government had so far abandoned the policy of the late Government that they had actually let the railway be pulled to pieces. He had always looked upon Kandahar as being the real gate of India. They knew that some day or other, perhaps 100 years hence, they would go to India by railway. The railway from London to Constantinople they might look upon as complete, and there was no doubt Kandahar must ultimately be the gate of the railway to India.

Capt. Gill, R.E., said their knowledge of Thibet had been very imperfect. Until the last few years it had been supposed that Thibet consisted of one large kingdom. It was, however, broken up into a number of States, and the priests had the whole country pretty much under their power. It was due more to them than to the Chinese that our entry into Thibet was so difficult. They possessed all the land and the money, and traded a great deal, and they opposed the entry of foreigners because they thought they would lose their trade together with their religious influence.

Mr. T. Saunders observed that one of the great objects of English statesmen should be to remove the political obstructions which stood in the way. On the plains of Thibet was grown the finest wool that could be produced, the sheep being highly developed, and, he believed, if we could send emissaries across the Himalayas to the great flock owners of Thibet and Mongolia and let them know that at certain fixed stations they could find a ready market for their produce, nothing more would be necessary to establish, not only commercial, but also political interests. The revival of the prosperity of these regions meant increased trade with us, and he wanted to know whether the proceedings of the statesmen of this country would blot us out from the enjoyment of the fruits of this forthcoming great revival from the civilisation of Persia and Turkey.

Sir Richard Temple, replying to various questions, said that was a non-political meeting, and if they desired to know his views on the retention of Kandahar, they must refer to his speeches on the subject. As regarded the exact state of the railway from the Indus to the foot of the Bolan Pass, it was in good working order, and sufficiently complete for military and commercial traffic. To the best of his knowledge it was worked, and was at least as complete as it was the day he quitted the Government of Bombay. Further onwards the works, he understood, had been suspended, but in justice to the present authorities he must say that the statements as to the materials being used for all manner of purposes by the natives must be exaggerations. The railway stores that were carted into the hills had been carted back again and returned to India, where they were no doubt utilised for the many new lines which were being constructed there. As to the survey being completed in Nepal, it was simply a political question; it was peace or war. In considering the question of surveys or geographical explorations, the Government of the day had to consider not only that, but also the question of fighting. The Nepal people believed a survey would be followed by the loss of their political independence; therefore they would object to surveys so long as they were prepared to maintain their independence.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE DEFENCE FUND.—It appears from the report for the present year of the Executive Committee of this association, that since the establishment of the society last year the following objects have been fully or partially secured:—viz., the equalisation of the relative army rank of the Indian Medical Service with the Army Medical Department, and the extension of the new grade of brigade surgeon to the Indian services, an improved scale of pensions, the abolition of examination for promotion to surgeon major, the abolition or modification of the system known as unemployed pay for junior officers, honorary rank on retirement after 20 years' service, and honorary promotion to deputy-surgeon-general of all officers appointed Q.H.P., or Q.H.S. The committee are of opinion that on these points the Government have granted as much as could be reasonably expected, but at the same time they assert that Indian medical officers compelled prematurely to retire on the score of health are still less liberally treated than officers of the Army Medical Department under similar circumstances, and to this point they have again directed the attention of the Secretary of State in their recent letter. The result has been that the majority of the objects for which the fund was formed have been attained, and the service as a whole has greatly benefited from the changes effected during the past eighteen months, inasmuch that, with the exception of the senior surgeon major, the pecuniary prospects of every member of the service, from the surgeon general with Government, to the youngest cadet at Netley, have been materially improved. In these circumstances the executive at first contemplated a dissolution of the committee, believing that the existence of their organization was to a certain extent, inconsistent with the good feeling and confidence which ought to exist between the Government and its officers, but eventually decided to keep the fund together for the present in a passive form, on the ground that the Indian service has no official representative in this country.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs. 19,87,000; and Bombay, Rs. 15,13,000, the average rate in each case being 1s. 7-875d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7-875d. will receive about 23 per cent. The bills have again been sold, and apparently with greater ease, for the applications were fully four times as high as the amount offered. Next week Rs. 35,00,000 more are to be tendered for.

THE OPIUM TRADE IN CHINA.—The trade reports of the Consuls in China have been published, and they show that the import of foreign opium into China was larger in 1879 (the year to which the reports refer) than it ever was before, 82,927 piculs (picul = 133 1-3 lb.) being the quantity passed at the Custom-houses of the treaty ports. This is 11,435 piculs in excess of the imports of the preceding year. "Almost the only opium imported," the general report says, "Is of Indian origin, but it is worthy of notice that the import of Persian opium has increased tenfold in the last six years, the returns of 1873 showing an import of 558 piculs, while those of 1879 show an import of 5,300 piculs. There is no doubt that the use of Persian opium has become more popular in China of late years, but the total import of this species of opium, as compared with the total import of Indian opium, does not lead to the conclusion that the latter is in any danger at present of losing its markets in China." The Persian opium is used for the purpose of mixing with other opiums; it is not smoked alone.

THE EASTERN EXCHANGES AND THE SILVER MARKET.—On Wednesday the market both for bar silver and Mexican dollars was very quiet, and prices were unaltered, with a very small supply. The Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were rather weaker at 1s. 7-875d. to 1s. 7-13-16d., but no advices were received from China. In India, the Four per Cent. Rupee Paper was a little higher, at 100, but the London quotations were steady, at 82-3/4 for the Four per Cent. and 89-3/4 for the Four-and-a-Half per Cent. In the latter case a fair business was done, ex the interest due September 15, at 90-3/4. On Thursday the market was a little easier the arrivals per Gassendi from the River Plate and the Galicia from Chili having been sold at 51-3/4d. per ounce. The combined consignments did not exceed £48,000 or £50,000, and were secured for India. Nothing was done in Mexican dollars, and in the absence of supplies the price was quite nominal. The Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were again weak, but the Hongkong rate was steady at 3s. 9d. Rupee Paper was firmer. Here the closing prices were 89-3/4 to 90, and 82-3/4 to 82-3/4, the Indian rates being 109-3/4 to 109-3/4 and 100-3/4 respectively. On Friday a moderate amount of bar silver was purchased for India and the Continent at 51-3/4d. per ounce, the market being fairly steady at that figure. As compared with Thursday's prices, Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents. improved 3/4, to 89-3/4 to 90-3/4. The Eastern exchanges were telegraphed as follows:—Bombay and Calcutta, 1s. 8-1-16d.; and Hong Kong, 3s. 9d. On Saturday business in silver was inactive, the price of bars and Mexican dollars being stationary, at 51-3/4d. to 51-3/4d. respectively. The exchanges from India and Hong Kong were telegraphed at previous quotations, no rate being received from Shanghai.

Chatterjee has passed the L.R.C.S. and L.M. examinations at Glasgow. Mr. J. K. Kanga has passed the Netley examination of the Indian Medical Service candidates. OBITUARY.—Lieut. Col. Richard George Kennedy, of the Bengal Staff Corps, and formerly of the 18th Hussars, whose sad death by drowning, when suffering apparently from a slight attack of sunstroke, has been the subject of a coroner's inquest at Edenbridge, was the second son of Dr. Evory Kennedy, of Bengard Castle, County Dublin. He was wounded in the Bhotan expedition, at the storming of the Dewangari stockade, and afterwards served as aide de camp to Lord Napier of Magdala in the Abyssinian war. On the break out of the war in Afghanistan he was appointed Quartermaster to the advance brigade in the Kuram field force, and was present at the storming of the Peiwar Kotal. After the Cabul massacre, he was advanced to the post of Quartermaster-General to the force under Sir Frederick Roberts, and in that capacity was present at the battle of Char-Asiab, and at the engagement round Sherpur. In the march from Cabul to Kandahar he performed the duties of guide and pathfinder to the army, traversing the whole route three times over, and for the most part selecting the camping-grounds. He was also present at the final battle at Kandahar. Colonel Kennedy was twice promoted for his services in the Afghan campaign, and had received the Afghan medal with four clasps, and the bronze star, besides the Abyssinian and Bhotan medals.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The vessels of this company will, after this month, cease to depart from Southampton, and will go from Gravesend. The first steamer which will go from the new port of departure will be the Rome. Arrangements have been entered into with the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway for the despatch of special trains to convey passengers to Tilbury from London, and by river steamers to place them on board the outgoing vessels; the whole cost by this conveyance from London to the ships being 3s. 6d. first-class and 2s. 6d. second. Incoming passengers will have the like advantages of being conveyed from the vessels to shore and to London at the same fares. The South Eastern Company has no waterside accommodation, so that it cannot compete for this traffic with the London, Tilbury, and Southend line.

THE 66TH (BERKSHIRE) REGIMENT.—We learn that it is proposed to place a memorial in Reading to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 66th (Berkshire) Regiment who fell during the campaign in Afghanistan last year. Messrs. Cox and Co., of Craig's-court, have consented to receive any subscriptions from officers formerly in the regiment, or other friends who may wish to join in the movement. Lieut. Col. Ready, the president of the committee who are carrying out the object, writing from Parkhurst Barracks, Isle of Wight, invites suggestions from subscribers.

A COMMERCIAL FEDERATION FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

THE great question that is to form one of the staples of discussion in the autumn campaign of "Parliament out of session" now before us, is this:—Ought the commercial system of the United Kingdom, in its dealings with foreign nations, to be rigidly limited by a fanatical and onesided notion of the meaning of free trade, in deference to the teachings of doctrinaires, to whom the very words "free trade" are a sort of blessed and inspired Mesopotamia, full of saving grace and truth? It is evident that, in the controversies about to be raised on this issue, the British public will, during the present recess, be deluged with floods of political economy and of the outpourings of science falsely so called. With empirics on the one side, and doctrinaires on the other, we shall have a dreary time of it. The old dispute as to whether theory or experience is the best guide in such matters will be fought out à outrance; and we trust the end will be that the British public will in time find out the shallowness of the pretensions of both doctrinaires and empirics, and will be guided by common sense rather than by the fear of being thought unscientific. The theorists who support an unconditional system of free trade will, of course, endeavour to fix on the advocates of "fair trade" the charge of ignoring the truth of the general principles on which free trade is based. Thus it will be said, "If an attempt be made to set on foot an agitation against free trade, it must be, and it will be, reasoned down." Of course it will, if by "free trade" be here meant the broad principle that free trade is a very good thing in itself, the benefits of which are most far-reaching, inasmuch as they are extended to the whole body of consumers. "Fair trade" accepts this principle most fully, but refuses to be, therefore, blind to all possible modifications in its practical application. The laws of political economy, like those of every other science, are absolutely true and rigidly exact in every case; provided that, informing the law, every possible factor in the problem has been known and duly allowed for, and that the conclusions have been arrived at by correct logical process. Given the accuracy and the completeness of the premisses, and a rightly-constructed syllogism, we may be quite sure of the truth of our conclusion. But who, in such complex problems as those of political economy, will dare say he has discovered and provided for the action of every possible perturbing element? And yet this is what is virtually assumed by those fanatical free traders who turn up their eyes in holy horror at the suggestions (1) that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and (2) that the present state of our national industries, after considerably more than a quarter of a century of free-trade fetish-worship, is not such as to make one feel perfectly sure that our interpretation of free trade is absolutely and necessarily the right one.

But while this great question is being fought out we should be glad to see our political leaders on both sides take up seriously the proposals, that have often been brought forward in a more or less desultory fashion, for a thorough-going adoption of free trade throughout the vast and diversified area of the British Empire. This is a scheme on which politicians of all shades of opinion—fair traders, free traders, and even protectionists—might well unite their energies, for it is not out of harmony with the best aspirations of any. Protectionists will remember that British commercial prosperity cannot be adequately measured merely by the exports and imports of Great Britain and Ireland, for the surplus wealth of all the colonies and all the dependencies is to a very large extent brought back again to the mother country; that there are few families, whether in England or in Scotland, or in Ireland, that have not at least one member interested in the prosperity of one or more of the colonies; and, lastly, that free trade between the various English-speaking and English-ruled communities throughout the world could not but render more feasible and more effective any measures to relieve English industries from the unfair competition of foreign protected manufacturers. To the fair trader, the last-mentioned consideration ought to prove irresistible; for whilst a commercial federation such as that we have indicated would be self-contained and independent of the rest of the world, the advantages it could offer as a return for favourable tariffs would be so immense as to be certain of breaking down all opposition. And lastly, the free trader would find, in such a federation, the fulfilment of all his aspirations throughout a portion of the commercial world considerable in itself, yearly increasing in relative importance, and sufficiently extended to prove beyond doubt the advantages of universal free trade, and sufficiently powerful to render very likely the universal imitation of its system.

The proposals for such a federation have another advantage in addition to that derived from the probability of no active hostility being aroused by them in this country. They are eminently practical, which is more than can be confidently predicated of any rival commercial system. It is true that we should have to negotiate, for their adoption, with some of the local colonial Administrations; but whilst recent experience shows us how futile such negotiations often are with foreign countries, such as France, there can be little doubt of their result with our kindred in Australia, in Canada, at the Cape, and elsewhere.

The advantages that must accrue from such a system both to the mother country and to the dependencies are so obvious that they will probably be disputed by no one.

The Athenæum, in a recent review of Mr. Hunter's "Imperial Gazetteer of India," has well illustrated this point in regard to India. Our contemporary says:—

"If any one looks with the eye of a capitalist through Dr. Hunter's volumes, it is at once perceived that India offers for employment the largest and cheapest market of highly skilled manufacturing labour, as well as agricultural, in the whole world—the hire of male manufacturing labour in India being, on the whole, that of female factory labour in this country. England, on the other hand, possesses the most abundant and cheapest capital in the world. It is clear, therefore, that when English capital is once fully applied to the use of Indian labour, and India becomes the English manufactory for our whole Eastern markets, not only the problem of the government of India, but that of supporting the comparative prosperity of the United Kingdom in the present crushing commercial competition with the rest of Europe and the United States of America, will be rendered appreciably less onerous."

Arguments, supported by facts such as these, cannot be lightly dismissed as "quackery;" they demand, and must receive, the full consideration that a prima facie view of the case clearly shows they deserve.

GAOLS IN BENGAL.

We published last week the letter addressed to the Times by the Inspector General of Gaols in Bengal in reply to the absurd charges that had been brought against his department by Mr. F. H. O'Donnell, M.P. Seven weeks ago, when those charges were first published here, we examined them in our leading columns, and showed them to be groundless, even on the incomplete and ex parte evidence that had been adduced by Mr. O'Donnell and his friends. We imagine that Dr. Lethbridge's letter, supported by the full and complete evidence now available, has settled the question in the minds of all impartial inquirers; but we are sorry to observe that Mr. O'Donnell has returned to the attack in a letter to the Times, which we reproduce elsewhere. Mr. O'Donnell's latest indictment is so vague—consisting, as it does, mainly of criticism on minor points of Dr. Lethbridge's argument—that it is best answered by a brief re-statement of the actual facts of the case.

The facts are simply these:—A committee of experts, acting under the orders of the Government of India, recommended the adoption of a certain scale of gaol diet. The committee had no official connection whatever with the Government of Bengal, and Dr. Lethbridge was not consulted in its deliberations. The Government of Bengal was bound to give some trial to the recommendations of the Government of India's committee, though Dr. Lethbridge himself from the first disapproved of them. The recommended scale of diet was accordingly introduced into the Bengal gaols during the financial year 1879-80. Thereafter—Dr. Lethbridge said propter hoc, but the Government of India's committee said only post hoc—occurred a gaol mortality which Dr. Lethbridge considered excessive. The reader should here note, par parenthèse—and the point is, of course, a most important one—that the Bengal rate of mortality, even when at its worst, was far lower than those of Bombay, the Punjab, and Assam!—and was far lower than the rates, for the previous year, of Bombay, Madras, the Punjab, and the Central Provinces! However, Dr. Lethbridge was altogether and rightly dissatisfied with it; and for the following year he induced Sir Ashley Eden to fly in the face of the Government of India's committee and to order a return to a more liberal scale of gaol diet. The rate of mortality rapidly fell to two-thirds of that at which it stood in 1879, and has subsequently fallen still lower.

These are the facts, unquestionable and indeed unquestioned, on the strength of which Mr. F. H. O'Donnell dares to blame Dr. Lethbridge for the excessive mortality of 1879! The absurdity of the charge is so patent that it is difficult to find an excuse for it; but we suspect an excuse may possibly be found in the ignorance of the honourable gentleman in regard to the limits of the jurisdictions of the Governments of India and of Bengal respectively. The allusions in his letter show that Mr. O'Donnell has a somewhat unsafe guide for his touches of local colour. He quotes "a Bengal newspaper, whose office Dr. Lethbridge can visit every day he pleases at Calcutta," for an expression of local horror at the gaol rate of mortality. We should like to ask whether the quotation—which he states to be from a paper, "not an organ of outside opinion," "no journal of Bombay or Madras, but a Bengal newspaper," &c.—is really taken from a Calcutta journal of repute, or whether it is nothing more than the usual carplings of a native print, notorious for its anxiety to seize every opportunity of railing against the English authorities.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

COFFEE.—At auction 76 casks 5 tierces 21 barrels and bags Plantation Ceylon sold at yesterday's rates, low middling to middling grayish, at 79s. 6d. to 84s. 6d.; good middling, at 91s. to 95s.; bold, 105s.; and 250 bags Central American, at 53s. to 56s. for ordinary.
 SAGO.—Already 410 bags good small grain sold at 16s. to 16s. 6d.

Flour 6d. lower, part of 567 bags Borneo selling at 14s. Of 1,520 bags pearl sago, part sold—medium, 15s. 9d.; seed, 17s. per cwt.; and a small quantity of flake at 1½d. to 2¼d. per lb.

RICE.—Less doing. A cargo of 1,500 tons Rangoon, September-October, sold at 9s. per cwt. open charter.

COTTON.—The market is steady, with only a small business doing. Sales about 1,500 bales, including Bengal at 5d. and Scinde at 4¾d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely, July-September. Suez, 5 5-16d. for fully good fair g.f.c.; Western Madras, July-August, Suez, 4 11-16d. for fully good fair g.f.c.; forward delivery, American, September, 7d.; October-November, 6½d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THURSDAY EVENING.

TEA.—Messrs. Layton and Co. state that 2,007 packages offered at public auction on day of sale, sold "without reserve" as under—1,433 half chests of Congou, at 5½d. to 6½d. per lb.; 574 ditto Souchong in mats, 7d. to 1s. 0½d. per lb. At the unprotected auction to-day common Congou sold down to 5½d. and in the present demoralised condition of the tea trade, conducted as it is said mainly on borrowed capital, and consequently with but little regard for the regulation of supply to demand, it seems probable enough that prices may go even lower.

COFFEE.—Of 287 casks 79 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon about two-thirds sold at easier rates; small, 73s. 6d. to 75s. 6d.; low middling to middling, 82s. to 88s. 6d.; good to fine middling, 90s. to 96s.; rather bold to bold, 99s. to 107s. 9 cases 790 barrels and bags East India in small lots partly sold; low to good medium, 73s. 6d. to 88s. 1,958 bags foreign about half sold; Guatemala, ordinary mixed to fine ordinary greenish, 54s. to 65s.; washed Rio, 73s. to 76s. 26 casks 481 barrels 956 bags Jamaica brought about previous value for the small part sold; good to fine ordinary, 52s. 6d. to 57s. 6d.; greenish, 65s. 6d. to 68s. per cwt.

RICE.—There is less inquiry. A coast cargo of Rangoon sold at 8s. 3¼d. per cwt.

INDIGO.—Messrs. Layton and Co., under date August 31, state that during the past month the market for East India indigo has been extremely quiet, notwithstanding the bad reports received by telegram of excessive rains, chiefly in the North West Provinces. The latest estimate of the crop totals 115,000 maunds against 135,000 maunds last year.

MANILLA HEMP.—A good business, including fair on the spot at £46 to £48 10s. per ton.

JUTE is without quotable change. Sales to-day about 5,000 bales, to arrive.

COTTON.—A quiet and unchanged market. Sales about 1,200 bales, including Tinnevely at 5¾d., Sind at 4¾d., Bengal at 5d. to 5¾d., and West India at 7d. per lb. Forward delivery, American, September, 7 1-32d. to 7 1-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—With renewed pressure to sell, prices have again given away, except for the finest qualities; but towards the close the tone was firmer with more inquiry, and the drop appears to have brought buyers into the market, the auctions have comprised 10,700 packages.

COFFEE.—Prices again rather lower for plantation Ceylon, the middling qualities being 1s. to 1s. 6d. cheaper than last week; 337 casks 20 tierces 196 barrels and bags were sold by auction to-day—middling to good middling at 84s. to 92s., fine middling to bold at 96s. to 109s. per cwt.

SUGAR.—There was a better demand than expected at the public sales. Of West India 800 casks sold, making 2,972 casks since last Friday; 529 bags Mauritius brown syrups sold at 18s. to 18s. 6d.; 4,082 bags Bengal, at 20s. for Accra; and Gupattah part of 712 baskets 5,197 bags, at 27s. to 28s. for good and fine grainy. Native brought in 13s. 6d. to 16s.; 873 bags Madras Jagghery, 1,020 bags Egyptian, and 543 hhds. Porto Rico were all bought in.

RICE.—The London Brokers' Association Circular reports a rather quieter market during the week, and only a small business done on the spot at unchanged prices, but large transactions in cargoes to arrive; distant shipment at full rates, coast cargoes at 1½d. per cwt. decline from the highest point. To-day one of 2,000 tons Moulmein sold at 8s. 3d. for the Continent.

SALTPETRE.—Further business done in Bengal at 24s. for fine.

JUTE quiet but steady. About 3,000 bales sold to-day, principally for arrival.

COTTON.—There is a fair general demand at full prices. Sales about 2,000 bales, including Bengal at 4¾d. to 5d. and Sind at 4¾d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely, August-October, Suez, 5 5-16d. for fully good fair g.f.c.; Bengal, August-September, Suez, 4¾d. for good f.g.f.c.; forward delivery, American, September-October, 6½d.; November-February, 6 5-16d. to 6¾d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY
 Royal Horse Guards.
 Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physio—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 6s. "Athenaeum," June 25, 1881. "Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere 'Handbook to Canada,' an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers over the greater portion of our North-American possessions. The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive, and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North-West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

It is a creditable and useful, and we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S GUIDE. No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d. "Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the Field for such help as is afforded by its pages."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPT. 12, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 23; Madras and Allahabad, August 21; Calcutta, August 20.

THE official report of the state of the weather and the prospects of the crops for the week ending August 9 states that rain has been very general and copious during the week, and in some parts of the country, where the fall had hitherto been deficient, agricultural prospects have materially improved. This is particularly the case in the Mysor State and in several districts of the Madras Presidency; but in portions of the latter more rain is still required, and in the Mysor district the change for the better is not so marked as it is elsewhere in the State. In a few places in the Deccan, and in the Southern Mahratta country also, the weather continues to be too dry; and in many districts of Bengal, especially to the north east and east, the transplantation of the late rice be facilitated by further rainfall. On the other hand, a break in the rains would be beneficial in the Central Provinces and in some of the central districts of the North Western Provinces and Oudh. Elsewhere in the provinces last mentioned, as also in the Punjab, Rajputana, the Central India States, Berar, Assam, and British Burma, prospects are favourable, the only exceptions being the Marwar State of Rajputana, where, however, the showers are said to have been sufficient for the autumn harvest, and the Allahabad district, in which the crops are so far satisfactory, but need more rain.

THE Bombay Gazette of the 23rd ult. says:—"The rainfall continues fairly abundant and well distributed throughout the Presidency, and the general agricultural prospects are excellent. In Bombay we have had 67 inches, as compared with 47 up to the same date last year."

WE are glad to learn from a Calcutta telegram to the Times, dated yesterday, that "rain is general in Mysor and prospects are fair throughout the State. There is a marked improvement in the Chittaldrug district, but more rain is wanted in Shimoga."

DURING the week preceding the departure of the mail we regret to observe that cholera caused 21 deaths in Bombay, 241 in the Kandesh district, 172 in the Sholapur district, 169 in the Ahmednagar district, 22 in Puna and the Haveli taluka, 46 in Baroda, 74 in Surat, 10 in Ahmedabad, 4 in Kalyan and Bassein, and 3 in Ankleswar. Cholera is also very bad in Lahore.

IN Afghanistan, the Ameer and his rival are probably at this moment face to face—unless the decisive action has already taken place—at some point between Kandahar and Robat, a distance of twenty miles. During the week the situation—or at least our knowledge of it—has distinctly changed; for it is now admitted that the warlike tribesmen of the Durani clans are flocking in large numbers to the standard of Ayub Khan. The reason assigned for this by the Times correspondent is, a proclamation of the Ameer, in which he endeavoured to rally round himself the Ghilzais by appealing to their hatred of the Duranis. This may or may not be a sufficient explanation; but the fact remains—and it is for us a most serious one. It means guerre à outrance between the leading factions of the Kabul and Kandahar Afghans. It postpones indefinitely the pacification of the unhappy country which our retirement from Kandahar has forced into this internecine warfare. And, worse for us, it postpones indefinitely the pacification of our north west frontier. The demon of masterly inactivity has sown the wind, and we, alas, must reap the whirlwind.

THE correspondent of the Times telegraphs from the Khojak Pass, under date of Sept. 11:—

"The Ameer reached Kelat on the 1st inst. and left again on the 4th, having previously dismissed Sirdar Gholam Mohairddin and rejected Ayub's proposals. He is said to have reached Robat, twenty miles from Kandahar, on the 8th, and may, therefore, have come into collision with Ayub already. His army is in every way superior to Ayub's regular force, even supposing that the Kabuli regiments which the latter has been unable to disarm remain faithful to him. But within the last few days Ayub has had a stroke of good fortune. My recent telegrams have described how completely he failed to obtain the support he expected from the Duranis. An unlucky, though, perhaps, unavoidable, move of the Ameer's has entirely changed this. I have frequently adverted to the intense animosity existing between the Ghilzais and the Duranis as one of the most important factors in Afghan politics, more important, indeed, than fanaticism and patriotism, of which so much is said, but which are to a great extent spurious. Of the sincerity of the intertribal hatred there can be no doubt, and this passion the Ameer has called into play as an antidote to the feeling in favour of Shere Ali's family, which was certainly strong among the northern tribes, and was probably increased by Ayub's victory on July 26. To induce the Ghilzais to adhere to him he represented this as a defeat of the Ghilzais by the Duranis, through which the rightful Ghilzai supremacy over Kandahar had been lost, and invited them to aid him in regaining it. The appeal has been most successful. Not only are the Ghilzais refraining from rebellion, but they continue to join the Ameer's army in large numbers; so that he has a very considerable irregular force with him in addition to his drilled troops. Unfortunately, the news soon sped to Kandahar, and has done more for Ayub than ever he could do for himself. The Duranis, who had hitherto held aloof from him, and were rather inclined, by reports of the Ameer's clemency and generosity, to join his party, have now experienced one of those sudden revulsions of feeling so common among this fickle people, and have rallied round Ayub in very large numbers, prepared not so much to resist Abdur Rahman as to defend their homes against the despised and hated Ghilzais. I doubt whether anything they can do will counterbalance the Ameer's superiority; but a new element has been introduced into the strife which may lead to deplorable consequences, and if the Ameer wins a battle under the walls of Kandahar he will have hard work to save the city from his own followers."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on the same date, refers briefly to the information given in the Khojak telegram, and gives some interesting particulars of the proposals said to have been made to the Ameer by Ayub. As usual, these proposals include one for an attack on the English; this is the penalty we pay—as it has all along been clear we should have to pay—for our "scuttling" policy. The Calcutta telegram is as follows:—

"The rival claimants to the Afghan throne must now be very near one another, as the Ameer left Kelat-i-Ghilzai on the 4th inst., and arrived at Robat on the 8th inst.; but no news of any engagement has yet reached India. Ayub has released Shams-ud-din and sent him to the Ameer, and a report, not yet confirmed, has been received at Simla that he made him the bearer of a message, in which, after alluding to his own insignificance and to Abdur Rahman's greatness, and undertaking not to fight unless attacked, he went on to propose the following division of the country:—Cabul to be given to Yakoob, Kandahar to another chief, Kuram to a third, Turkestan to the Ameer, and Ayub himself to retain Herat. This division effected, all the chiefs were to unite in driving the English out of Chaman and Pishin. The report does not go on to say what the Ameer's reply was. Abdur Rahman appears to be successful in inducing the Ghilzais to join him, and in stirring them up against the Duranis, who are taking Ayub's part. No clear information has been received as to the strength of the two armies. Ayub is said to have about 4,000 men, while the Ameer has probably not less than 5,000 regular troops. The Kandahar people are stated to be much alarmed, expecting the fall of the city and its plunder by the Ameer's troops. This week may possibly show whether their fears are well founded."

AN earlier telegram to the Times from Quetta, dated September 7, stated:—

"The Ameer has arrived at Kelat and has answered Ayub's proposals, and, in consequence, a sirdar of high rank, with several priests, has been sent from Kandahar to the Ameer's camp. Ayub is said to intend standing a siege."

THE official telegrams briefly confirm some of the points mentioned by the correspondents of the Times. One, dated Sept. 7, ran thus:—

"Reports from Kandahar, dated 3rd, say messengers arrive

th S the 2nd from Kelat-i-Ghilzai with news that Ameer is here. Shams-ud-din had arrived there from Kandahar. Shams-ud-din had, by Ameer's orders, summoned Sirdar Ghulam Mohiuddin, son of Kohndil Khan, who had started from Kandahar accordingly. Ayub still holds road half way to Kelat-i-Ghilzai, where Ameer is strengthening fortifications."

In another telegram from the Viceroy to the India-office, dated Sept. 10, we read:—

"St. John reports from Khojak to-day that Ameer, having refused to entertain Ayub's overtures, left Kelat on 4th and reached Robat 8th."

THE Civil and Military Gazette, of Lahore, writing on August 19, announced that "Government intends to have a strict blockade of the Zakha and Kuka Khels next cold weather, consequent on the recent attack on the 9th Bengal Cavalry, the cutting off the Jumrud water supply, and the recent attack on Sungee village, near Peshawur." But such is now our prestige in the Khyber Pass, that the enterprising gentlemen of the Zakha Khel are by no means inclined quietly to await our blockade! The Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta yesterday, Sept. 11:—

"News from Peshawur states that another frontier raid has occurred. This is the fifth. The offenders on this occasion are a tribe known as the Zakha Khels. They attempted to drive off some cattle belonging to the Massa Khels from a village within our border, but, owing to the recent distribution of arms and ammunition among the villagers, they were not successful. The villagers collected and followed and attacked the raiders, killing two of them and wounding two. The cattle were recovered. The Zakha Khels are said to have assembled in great force and to be awaiting an opportunity for another attack. The only other item of frontier news is that the Waziris have surrendered Massak, one of the principal ringleaders in the raids they made three years ago."

"OUR present rulers are all "so good and mild" that the heathen Chinese is inclined to make hay while the sun shines, with the view of protecting his home cultivation of opium against the detestable competition of the superior and less deleterious Indian drug. Free trade, pure and unadulterated, is not appreciated in China, any more than it is in France, America, and the rest of the world outside the Cobden Club. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing yesterday, says:—

"A Chinese gentleman named Mah Taotai, private secretary of Li Hung Chang, the Viceroy of the province of Chali, has arrived at Simla on a kind of semi-diplomatic mission. His object is not to make any definite proposals, as that can only be done through the British Foreign-office, but merely to pick up information about opium, with a view, it is supposed, of suggesting a new treaty to the British Government. He remains until the end of the week."

THE Bombay Gazette recently published an important paper by the Hon. Mr. Justice West on the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act and the bill for its amendment, which is being considered by the Supreme Legislative Council, and is following this up with a series of papers from the pen of Mr. W. Wedderburn, C.S., on "Agricultural Banks for India."

ONE of the best regiments in the service, the 15th Sikhs, is reported to be "ably officered at the present moment by two subalterns, who hold every appointment in the regiment. If the State wanted to utilise this corps for service it would be impossible under the present circumstances."

ANOTHER of Mr. O'Donnell's horror-mongering bubbles has been pricked, and has gone the way of his "Bengal Gaols" sensational nonsense. We learn from the Calcutta telegram in to-day's Times that an official inquiry has been held regarding the truth of an allegation lately made in Parliament that an organised system exists of decoying young women from Europe to Bombay for immoral purposes. The result proves the statements to that effect to have no foundation whatever.

THE Secretary of State for War has given instructions for the sum of four thousand five hundred pounds to be placed to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council, to be expended in meeting the claims of the non-commissioned officers and men of those corps now serving in India who did duty during the recent campaign in Zululand, and who are entitled, in accordance with the recent decision of the War-office, to an allowance of one pound per man as compensation for extra wear and tear of uniform on service.

THE Government of India has it in contemplation to re-establish the office of Naval Adviser, lately held by Admiral Bythsea, V.C. The new official would hold the rank of Director General of Marine.

HER MAJESTY has been graciously pleased to confer the honour of knighthood on that clever and most deservedly popular officer, Dr. G. M. Birdwood, of the India-office and the South Kensington Museum. Never were spurs more worthily won than by Sir George Birdwood. Of his numerous writings on Indian subjects it may be truly said, nihil quod tetigit non ornavit. In regard to Indian art he has long been acknowledged as an expert of the highest authority; whilst his graceful and facile pen has been freely used both to guide and inform English taste in this direction, and also to guard the art manufactures of India from threatened deterioration. His Indian career, that had promised to be one of the highest distinction, and had already been singularly useful and many-sided, was cut short in 1869 by permanently broken health—most unfortunately, both for India and for himself, as it then appeared, sed dis aliter visum. His return to England has enabled him to render services of priceless value to the cause of Indian industrial art, and the recognition of those services that has now been made by her Gracious Majesty the Queen rightly follows on the Companionship of the Star of India that was conferred on the occasion of the Imperial proclamation of January 1, 1877, and the ribbon of the Legion d'Honneur that Sir George Birdwood earned by his international art work for the Paris Exhibition. The whole Indian Service, civil as well as military, will be gratified by the distinction accorded to one of their worthiest representatives.

It has been recently decided by the Government of India on the recommendation of the Bengal Government, that covenanted civilians in the Lower Provinces shall in future be called on to elect between the executive and judicial branches of the service after they have been in the country nine years, instead of as hitherto between the tenth and twelfth years of their service.

THE Home Government, we understand, has consented, on the representation of the Government of India, to reduce the contribution paid by India to meet the expenses of the Persian Embassy from £12,000 to £10,000 per annum.

In case the Indian Government should carry out the reduction of their establishment by one European cavalry regiment, it will not lead to a disbandment of any cavalry corps; it may, however, necessitate a reduction in the numbers of several cavalry regiments now in England whose turn for foreign service is remote.

THE reduction of the Indian Establishment by a cavalry regiment will disturb the financial arrangements of the War-office so much that it is reported the Indian authorities have been requested to defer the measure till the beginning of the next financial year.

THE Hindu Patriot notes that, "at the last meeting of the Asiatic Society, Dr. Rajendralala Mitra exhibited MS. in the Bengali character of the Bhatti-kavya, 478 years old, and in commenting on it gave an interesting account of the history of the work. Though the work is a well-known one, and read by every Sanscrit student to the extent at least of three or four cantos as a text-book in grammar, very little seems to have been hitherto known of its authorship, and, in the absence of authentic history, a great many stories have been engrafted on it. The learned doctor exposed the fallacy of these stories, and proved by diverse quotations from different MSS. that the specific name of the work was Ravanabadha, and not Bhatti-kavya; that its author's name was Bhatti, 'the teacherling,' and not Bhartrahari, as supposed by some; that the author was a private person, and not a king, not a prime minister, as supposed by others; that his father's name was Sridha Swami; and that he flourished in the middle of the fourth century at Balbhipur, in Guzerat, during the reign of Sridhara Sen, of the Balabhi dynasty. Dr. Mitra also read a long paper on the temple of Vaidyanath at Deoghur. According to his researches, the largest temple there cannot be more than four hundred years old. That temple, it seems, was built by one of the Rajahs of Gidhour."

THE International Geographical Congress and Exhibition was opened at Venice on the 1st inst., and will continue until the 22nd inst. The English Commissioners are Lord Aberdare, President of the Royal Geographical Society, Sir H. Layard, and Mr. H. Bell. The Government of India Commissioners are General Sir H. L. Thuillier, C.S.I., late Surveyor General of India, Col. O. T. Haig, R.E., and Capt. A. W. Baird, R.E., of the Indian Survey. The authorities of Venice have arranged to illuminate the city and hold fetes in honour of the distinguished visitors.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing yesterday, has good news for those who are interested in tea-planting:—

"The Calcutta Tea Syndicate may be congratulated on their successful efforts in opening up new markets for Indian tea. A meeting, held on Monday to receive the report of the committee, was attended by a large number of influential persons representing the interest, and great satisfaction was expressed with the results of the shipments to Australia and with the prospects of the further development of the trade. It was stated that late advices from the agents there were encouraging, and that the prices realised had compared favourably with London. All the consignments found a ready sale. Resolutions were unanimously adopted pledging the meeting to use every effort to increase the shipments and to extend the trade throughout the colonies, the present being considered an exceptionally favourable opportunity, not only on account of the encouragement offered in Australia, but also because recent telegrams reported a weakening of the market in London, and the diversion of a large quantity of tea to other parts would probably have a good effect in Mincing-lane. American advices were also stated to be very favourable. A beginning had been made in shipments to that country, and promised contributions would enable the syndicate to steadily continue its operations. It was determined to follow up the operations of the syndicate agents in the United States and in Canada, and to spare no efforts to make the attempt to establish a trade there as successful as the Australian venture had proved. The Assam Labour Emigration Bill, introduced into the Legislative Council by Mr. Thomson last Wednesday, will effect a great improvement in the existing law, and it is hoped that by cheapening the cost of recruiting and importing labour to Assam it will confer a decided benefit on tea-planters in that province."

In prospect of the telegraph traffic in India coming up for further consideration, the Pioneer suggests that the authorities might be persuaded, perhaps, to revise their charges for Press telegrams. Our contemporary says:—

"The rates are absurdly high, and not much encouragement is given to newspaper enterprise in the direction of telegraphic news. During the day (from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.) twenty-four words are sent for one rupee; during the night thirty-six words. In England the rates are seventy-five words for one shilling during the day, and 100 words at night. It is true that the distances and cost of maintenance are greater in India than in England; but the ordinary rates are enormously higher, and, as Press telegrams really serve public ends, the charges for them should be lowered to the smallest possible figure. The curse of Indian telegraphy comes from the service messages sent by public officials and departments: these have grown to such an extent that ordinary work is frequently swamped, and at last a check has had to be put upon precedence messages. This is a step in the right direction, and the telegraph authorities are to be congratulated for their courage in the matter; but the real remedy lies in the hands of Government, which should try to reduce the length of service messages, which now occupy the signallers day and night. The eccentricity of the rules in regard to Press telegrams is wonderful. A message of 1,000 words, which in an English office is looked upon as a mere trifle, is rejected by an Indian office, such as Simla, with the intimation that only 500 words can be received. A message must be published as received, or the newspaper is liable to be charged the full ordinary rates; it must not be modified or condensed, no matter how compromising its purport may be. Luckily this rule is looked upon as a dead letter. Why should not newspapers receive every encouragement to use the wires with the greatest freedom? The revenue of the department might not be much increased, but the whole community would benefit thereby; and that should be a sufficient reason in these days of liberalism and advanced thought."

THE trade and navigation reports for the first four months of the current financial year show that the imports, excluding treasure and Government stores, were Rs.3,11,28,126, against Rs.3,48,29,771 in the corresponding period of last year, and Rs.2,59,18,323 in 1879. The exports were Rs.5,97,73,013, against Rs.5,19,55,972 in 1880, and Rs.4,44,87,918 in 1879. The number and tonnage of the vessels entered and cleared show a slight falling off from last year, but a decided increase on 1879.

THE following, on the Calcutta tea market, is from Messrs. Carritt and Co.'s fortnightly market report:—

"Public auctions were held on the 11th and 18th inst., at the former of which 7,757 packages were sold, and at the latter about 11,000 offered, and about 10,500 sold. A good assortment from the various producing districts was offered, quality continuing to show its superiority over the previous seasons. At the first-named sale prices ruled very firm in most instances, but at the sale of 18th inst. there was a decided reaction in favour of buyers, and several lots withdrawn from sale, for which owners could not realise former values. We quote a reduction of one penny to three half pence per pound on Pekoes and broken Pekoes, whilst Pekoe Souchong, Souchongs and broken teas were also occasionally rather weaker."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary for the week ending August 23:—Capt. Pipon, R.N.; Mr. A. J. Wilson; and Mr. F. Fitzjames.

THE ASSAM RAILWAY.

MR. PELLEW, commissioner of the Dacca Division, has addressed the following interesting letter to the Englishman:—

Sir,—The problem of communication with Assam appears now in a fair way towards solution. The difficulty lay in the fact that the volume, not only of the Ganges, but of the still larger Brahmaputra had to be crossed. These two rivers, in many channels and under many names, traverse the tract which lies between Kushtia on the S.W. and the Garo Hills. The Gorai, the Pudma, the Jamoona, the Dhulentswari, and the old Brahmaputra form the principal waterways which have to be taken account of. The Sara ferry disposes of the Gorai and the Pudma, but only to strand the traveller at a point where he is faced by the whole width of the Brahmaputra with the unnecessary addition of the Teesta. There rivers are very impracticable. There are too many churs, shallows, and islands to allow of a good steam ferry in the dry season, whilst they are too wide and sandy to be crossed in any other way. Except in the height of the rainy season, the Northern Bengal Railway will never afford a satisfactory route to Assam.

The alternative route, which first attracted attention, was by Goalundo. At this point the Ganges and Brahmaputra unite, and the greater portion of their volumes are pent up in a channel two miles wide. Moreover on this line, and within twenty miles of Goalundo, commences that curious old alluvium of red clay, which is sufficiently high and hard to resist river action and afford a good foundation for a railway. This red clay, under the name of the Mudhupur jungle, stretches due north almost to the base of the Garo Hills, and could not fail to be held an important factor in the problem. Goalundo was boldly secured by throwing a bridge over the Gorai, and it was at first thought that Assam might be reached by a ferry over the Pudma, and thence by a railway.

But the difficulty of the country between the Pudma and the Mudhupur clay was underrated by those who may have indulged such a hope. The whole tract is traversed by the spill of the Jamoona, and the Dhulleshurri, though only an offset from that enormous river, is not very much less in size than the Ganges at Sara. A second ferry there would heavily handicap the route. Yet, on the other hand, a bridge over it with another inevitable bridge over the old Brahmaputra, would be a grievous financial burden to a light railway; nor would it be merely necessary to provide a bridge over the Dhulleshurri, but the whole tract from the Pudma to that river would require considerable bridging.

It is, I believe, now proposed to treat the whole tract between Goalundo and the red clay as a ferry, and commence the extension line from the vicinity of Dacca. Experience has shown that, in all seasons, this tract can be crossed safely and punctually in seven or eight hours, by steamers suited for the purpose. With one heavy bridge over the Brahmaputra, near Mymensingh, and one steam-ferry of seven hours, we can thus secure communication with Assam.

Not only this—a new and more fertile country, rich in jute and rice, is opened out to commerce; for it is one of the special excellences of the proposed route that it taps a country remote from water carriage and comparatively undeveloped, yet fertile, and surrounded by overflowing population.

Faridpur, August 6.

F. H. PELLEW.

MR. GRANT-DUFF ON INDIA.

ON Friday the Right Hon. M. E. Grant-Duff, Governor of Madras, and formerly M.P. for the Elgin District of Burghs, was presented by the Town Council of Banff with the freedom of the burgh in recognition of his services as member. The right hon. gentleman delivered in the council chamber a farewell address to his former constituents. After alluding at length to a variety of topics, he said: Last I come to India. Well, we seem gradually getting out of the difficulties which made it necessary for us all to talk so much about that country before the last general election; we must not, however, forget that these difficulties were merely superadded difficulties, and difficulties of the kind into which people too often get when, ceasing to attend to their own affairs, they make and meddle in the affairs of others. The whole of the late Afghan episode, from the despatch of January, 1875, onwards, was purely unnecessary. Every penny of the twenty-three and-a-half millions that were spent, every life of men or animals that was sacrificed, either on the Afghan side or ours, was pure, unmitigated, unalloyed, unredeemed mischief and misery and waste. (Cheers.) And the real difficulties of India remain just what they were, aggravated somewhat, no doubt, by the squandering of resources which might have been employed for useful instead of mischievous purposes, but in the main just what they were half a dozen years ago. The real difficulties are how to govern on European principles with an Asiatic revenue; how to enable a soil which has been unscientifically managed for ages to support a population which is rapidly growing under the British peace; how to bring the natives (to many of whom we are giving a very high education) more into our system of government than has yet been done; how enormously to extend elementary education; how to pour the ideas of the West into the East without causing revolutionary ferment or destroying good which we cannot replace; how to attract ever more and more capital to a country which sorely needs the expenditure of capital; how, in short, to make the most (not primarily for our own sake, but for the sake of the people who dwell there) of the noble estate which Providence has placed in our hands in Southern Asia. These are the real difficulties of our task, and they are aggravated by the fact that in the nature of things our knowledge must be imperfect. It is, however, a knowledge which has always been increasing. The vast continent of India is governed by a mere handful of Europeans. In the portion of India which is about to pass under my charge there are a great many districts presided over each by single British official. One of these districts is, or lately was, about as big as thirteen of the smaller English counties. How much can the local British providence see with his own eyes and hear with his own ears in so vast a field of action? The real difficulties are, then, as you will readily see, internal difficulties, and there are quite enough of them without encouraging our Viceroy to dream dreams of a great Central Asian policy of which Afghanistan is to be made the basis. (Hear, hear.) The present Viceroy will certainly not do that. He will know what passes in these far-off regions, but he will endeavour more and more, I am sure, to extricate himself from every sort of entanglement beyond our north western frontier. (Cheers.) For myself, I shall have no temptation to devote any part of my attention to those Asiatic (as distinguished from Indian) subjects which have in former days interested me as a matter of political speculation, much as they have interested most men. My work will be of a purely administrative kind, and my efforts will mainly be directed to give as great an impulse as I can to all the multifarious good influences at work in a country which has been well called the most Indian part of India—a country larger than the British Isles, and inhabited by over 30,000,000 of people. I am sure I shall have your best wishes in so gigantic and so deeply interesting a task. (Cheers.) It is a task which has come to me very unexpectedly, and, as it were, by a kind of fate. When I was a boy of sixteen an old friend of my father's offered me a Haileybury appointment. I weighed its advantages and disadvantages with what help I could and decided against an Indian life. I went to Oxford and read for the Bar, giving during those years only that amount of attention to India which any educated man who was a member of an Indian family naturally would give. It so happened, however, that when you sent me to Parliament in December, 1857, the question which was before the country was the abolition of the political status of the East India Company, and my maiden speech was made in February, 1858, on the second reading of Lord Palmerston's India Bill. (Cheers.) Again for years I turned away from Indian subjects, speaking no doubt at distant intervals upon them, but still giving nineteen-twentieths of my time to other matters. I wrote my "Glance over Europe," my "Studies in European Politics," my "Political Survey," and a great number of other things quite unconnected with India, but to the surprise of most people and my own I found myself in December, 1868, in charge of Indian affairs in the House of Commons. Only a very few persons who were part of Mr. Gladstone's first Administration when it was formed remained in the position to which they were first appointed when that Government fell—three or four I think at the most. Death, resignation, and change of office or loss of seats completely altered the whole cast, but I remained occupied with India in February, 1874, as I had been in December, 1868. When we went out I determined to go and visit the country to whose affairs I had given so much time, and a delightful journey I had. But so little did I even contemplate ever again seeing it, that the last words which I wrote in the diary I kept of my journey were—"Encore un rêve de la vie fini"—that is, "Once more a dream of life ended." When the present Administration was formed I found myself in the midst of new and intensely interesting duties, which carried my thoughts to almost every part of the world except to India. Even some time after the unexpected death of my lamented friend Mr. Adam, when newspapers were all saying that I was going to Madras, I would have willingly betted heavily against my doing so, but no one can control his destiny. I am going to Madras, and now I have thrown myself so completely into the idea of my new work that it seems to me strange and unnatural that I should ever have hesitated. (Cheers.) That is when I look at one side of the shield; when I look at the other and see the friends I am leaving, why then thoughts arise which, in the words of John Sterling's last letter to Carlyle, I had best "keep down with all the iron weights in my power." There is one portion of the past, however, which is wholly cheerful, the thought, that is, of the days we have lived through together. (Cheers.) Having referred to several of the great events which had taken place in the world during the time he had represented the Elgin Burghs, Mr. Grant-Duff continued: The political link which bound us together is broken, but I am glad to see that you have chosen in my room a good Liberal and a man who will be able, if his energies have free play, to do useful work in a field which lies altogether outside the range of my knowledge. And now, my friends, farewell, a word which must be and hath been, a sound which makes us linger. I would I had the eloquence of him whose farewell to the Church of Constantinople has rung through fourteen centuries to say it as I ought. Mr. Grant-Duff resumed his seat amid loud and long-continued cheering.

The Times, commenting on the above, says:—"Naturally enough, Mr. Grant Duff's address closes with a survey of India, the country with which his hereditary connection is not less close than his personal one. His sketch of the difficulties of our position there is singularly vivid and true. We may or may not agree with his view of the policy of past Governments and of wars that are now matters of history; but there can be no doubt that the new Governor has a clear appreciation of the problems of Indian rule. We govern a vast swarm of men of alien race and alien customs by means of a machinery that seems almost ridiculously slight. One English official, 'one local British providence,' is set down to direct the whole affairs of a region as large as a dozen English counties. Yet the influence of this official is felt in the remotest village; the administration which he represents reaches into every corner; the 'British peace,' like the pax Romana of old, enables the people to live and multiply as they never multiplied of old. How are we to govern on European principles with an Asiatic revenue? How are we to enable an increasing population to support itself on a soil exhausted by centuries of unscientific farming? To know the conditions of the problem is to have gone half way to its solution; and Mr. Grant-Duff has certainly realised the conditions of the problem before him, and we trust that he will solve it with the success that no one desires more earnestly than he. He is in some respects not like the common run of Indian Governors, and it may be that he does not possess some of the gifts by which his predecessors have from time to time commended themselves to their subordinates and the people entrusted to them; but in other respects and in other gifts he far outshines them. He has had a long political experience. He has served numerous important offices. He has been brought into contact with all the English public men of his generation, and with many of the leaders of opinion abroad. If government is a science, it can surely only be learnt by an apprenticeship of this kind. The days of 'Heaven-born Ministers' are over; for society is too wide, too complicated, for its needs to be divined by flashes of genius. The best endowment for a statesman or for the governor of a country is surely knowledge laboriously acquired, digested, and mastered. Mr. Grant-Duff has knowledge to an extent that few of his contemporaries can rival; he has patience, he is devoted to his work. His new post is a great opportunity, and we hope and believe that he will employ it to the advantage both of India and of his own political reputation."

DR. BIRDWOOD.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to approve of the honour of knighthood being conferred upon Mr. George C. M. Birdwood, M.D., C.S.I., of the India-office, late Bombay Medical Staff. Dr. Birdwood is the eldest son of General Christopher Birdwood, late of the 3rd Native Infantry, and Commissary General, Bombay. Dr. Birdwood received his medical education at Edinburgh, where he took his university degree, and passed the usual examination of the College of Surgeons in 1854. He was appointed to the medical service of the late Honourable East India Company on their Bombay establishment in the same year. His first charge was of the Southern Mahratta Horse, Kalludghee, in 1855. Later he was transferred to the 1st Battery 2nd Brigade of Artillery at Sholapur, where he was also at different times in charge of the 8th Madras Cavalry, 3rd Bombay Native Infantry, and the Civil Station. He 1856 he was sent to the Persian Gulf in medical charge of the Honourable Company's steamship Ajdaha and the detachment of her Majesty's 64th Regiment on board, and was present at the bombardment and capture of Mohammarah, for which he received the medal and clasp given for the Persian war of 1856-57. On his return to Bombay in April, 1857, he was appointed acting professor of anatomy and physiology in Grant Medical College, and from that date to his leaving India continued to be connected with the college almost without interruption in the chairs successively of Anatomy and Physiology and Botany and Materia Medica. In the same year Dr. Birdwood was appointed curator of the Government Central Museum at Bombay, and it was in connection with it that he chiefly earned his name in Bombay. With the assistance of the late eminent Hindu physician and scholar, Dr. Bhawoo Dhajee, and the liberal co-operation of the leading native gentlemen of all religions and races, he succeeded in establishing the Victoria and Albert Museum and the Victoria-gardens in Bombay. The undertaking was largely subscribed to by the natives of all classes as a loyal memorial of the transfer of the Indian Empire to the direct administration of the British Crown, while their participation in its establishment had the effect of stimulating the public spirit of the wealthy native gentlemen of Bombay generally in support of the educational institutions of the Western Presidency. The Royal Asiatic Society of Bombay and the Agri-Horticultural Society of Western India, of both which bodies Dr. Birdwood was hon. secretary, particularly reaped the benefit. In 1867 Dr. Birdwood was sent by Sir Bartle Frere, at the express desire of the leading merchants of Bombay, as special commissioner for the Government, to the Universal Exhibition held in Paris in that year. These services were acknowledged by his being appointed sheriff of Bombay and by the addresses presented to him on his being forced to finally leave India through permanently broken health in 1869 by the Royal Asiatic Society, the Agri-Horticultural Society, the University of Bombay, of which he was then registrar, and the students of Grant Medical College. On the occasion, also, of the proclamation of the Queen as Empress of India, January 1, 1877, he was appointed to the Companionship of the Star of India. Since his return to this country Dr. Birdwood has chiefly devoted himself to writing on Indian subjects, and more especially on Indian art. He has been a large contributor to the press as a reviewer of books on India. In 1870 he contributed a paper to the Linnean Society on the "Genus Boswellia, with descriptions and figures of three new species." It is the record of the discovery of the frankincense trees of the Somali Country, made by him in conjunction with Colonel Playfair, then resident at Aden. In 1878 he wrote "The Handbook to the Indian Court" at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, and last year the handbook on "The Industrial Arts of India," published by the Science and Art Department in connection with the Indian Museum. By these books, following on his contributions to the press on the same subjects during the past ten years, he has attracted abiding attention to the traditional handicrafts of India, and created a widespread demand for them, not only all over Europe, but in America. It is understood that it is for his services on behalf of Indian art, in the prosperity of which the Queen and Royal Family take the deepest personal interest, that Dr. Birdwood has now received the honour of knighthood. Dr. Birdwood also still maintains his official ties with India, having been appointed about two years ago special assistant in the Revenue, Statistics, and Commerce Department of the India-office.

GAOL DIET IN BENGAL.

DR. A. S. LETHBRIDGE, Inspector General of Gaols in Bengal, writes to the Englishman in answer to some criticisms that have been passed upon his recent letter on Bengal prisons:—

"CALCUTTA, August 14.

"Sir,—With regard to my recent letter on the subject of gaol mortality in Bengal, I see it is generally stated that I have failed, in my explanation, to show that proper precautions had been taken to watch the effects of the new diet on the health of the prisoners. As my letter to the Times had exceeded the limits usually allowed to such communications, I was unable to mention what had actually been done in this direction. In the first place, it should be mentioned that Mr. Beverley, who represented Bengal at the Prison Conference, was opposed to any reduction of diet. In the report issued by the Conference I find it stated that 'Mr. Beverley was willing to change the quality so as to make it less appetising (as Capt. Hallett had proposed), but not reduce the quantity.' I am informed on good authority that the Bengal medical officers who were consulted by Mr. Beverley before he gave his opinion on the subject also expressed themselves strongly against any reduction of diet. In my circular, No. 17, dated Feb. 24, 1879, addressed to all superintendents of gaols, the following instructions were given regarding the introduction of the Conference scales for labouring and non-labouring diet. 'The effect of these new diet scales upon the health of the prisoners should be carefully watched and briefly noted in the monthly medical reports.' Could the Bengal Government have done more? I have shown that its representative in the first instance objected in the Conference to a reduction of diet, and when it was called upon by the Government of India to give the reduced scale a trial proper precautions were taken to watch the effect. For nine or ten months no indication was given in the medical reports that the new scale was injuring the health of the prisoners. If it is only remembered that the Conference diet, though deficient, was far from being a starvation diet, the effects of which would be immediately apparent, it is easy to see how the gradual loss of health resulting from it might be attributed to climatic causes. As a fact, the months in which the cumulative effect of the new scale was likely to be greatest were also the normal months of increased sickness and high mortality. Only those who have to deal constantly with statistics can appreciate the difficulty of arriving at accurate conclusions from them. My office receives a monthly medical return for each gaol. It is very difficult to draw any correct inference from these returns without first getting a number of them together. I will give two instances of what I mean by this. A small gaol returned five deaths in February, 1881. The superintendent was called on for a special report. He explained that the gaol, on the whole, was very healthy, and that these five deaths took place in cases which had been lingering for many months. For the last five months there has not been a single death in this gaol. In May, 1881, the Alipore gaol had 14 deaths. In June there was only one death. In July there were 12 deaths. Would anybody have been justified, on receiving the return for June, in concluding that the gaol had suddenly become remarkably healthy? And yet it is from these monthly figures that some people suppose I should not only have detected the low effects of a deficient dietary, but should have proceeded to condemn a scale of diet recommended by a large body of experts and ordered to be given a trial. The discovery that the diet was in fault was made in the following manner. In February, 1880, while inspecting the gaols of Northern Bengal, where the prisoners were chiefly employed in making bricks and constructing new gaols, I noticed that the majority of the men had lost weight and were generally in bad health. Having ordered an immediate increase of diet for the prisoners of these gaols, I returned to Calcutta and consulted the statistics for 1879, which had just been prepared. The principal statement required for my purpose was an annual table giving the loss and gain in weight of prisoners on discharge from gaol. I found that no less than 19,229 had lost weight, while only 14,000 were shown to have gained weight. This abnormally high number of those who lost weight, taken together with the death-rate, and what I had seen during my recent inspections, convinced me that the reduction in diet was the chief cause of the increased mortality. Having something tangible to go upon I did not hesitate to state what I believed to be the real cause of injury to health among the prisoners and to recommend Government to immediately abandon the Conference diet scale."

CIVIL SERVANTS IN INDIA.

[FROM THE "STANDARD."]

THE Civil Service Commissioners have lately published a list of twenty-four "gentlemen who after two years' training in this country, have passed the final examination for the Civil Service of India." To those who remember the early and painful days of the Competitive System the tale of recruits seems a meagre one. The truth is that year by year the demand of India for English administrators tends to grow smaller. Among the candidates who have survived the two years' ordeal there is not, it is true, a single native of India. But the balance is more than restored by the nominations now made every year in India of natives only. Little by little, too, the historic "service" has lost the posts it once claimed as its own. "Interlopers" have got into the administration as well as into the country. Barristers not only creep into the most remote districts to defeat by their subtle technicalities that simple justice which it was the glory of the old civilian to administer, but they claim as of right some of those seats in the High Courts which in the old days were reserved as a reward for those civilians who had not allowed their nice perception of equity to supersede all study of the law. Then, too, the care of roads and buildings, once the delight of the "dashing magistrate and collector," has passed over to a mere official of the Public Works Department. And the school which erstwhile was the creature of his fostering care is now managed by somebody from the Department of Public Instruction. The whole fabric of Government, in fact, is becoming departmentalised, and the sphere of the civilian's activity is year by year growing narrower. In the good old days, when railroads were not and roads were few, he was the special providence of his district. The ordinary native expects Government to do everything for him which he and his fellows cannot, in their narrow circle of trade or village life, do for themselves. And in the collector they used to see an incarnation of this mysterious irresponsible thing—Government. To-day he is—and the most unsophisticated nature is at last beginning to realise that he is—only a wheel in the machinery of Government. His decisions could always have been appealed against, but it is only in recent years that the host of petty attorneys and petition writers whom our legal system has called into being, has really brought home to every evil doer how easy it is, provided only funds be forthcoming, to prosecute an appeal, and how distinct the chances are of success.

Year by year, too, our system becomes more mechanical. As a magistrate, the civilian has to think more of preparing a record which will stand the scrutiny of the High Court than of pushing his inquiries in such a way as to get at the real facts of each case.

As a collector of the revenue, he has to think more of getting his reports ready by the right time, and of having his accounts in good trim, than of cultivating friendly relations with those who have to pay. He is still official head of Society, and amongst all those who have anything to gain by being on good terms with the authorities, and those who by family tradition have a position to maintain which requires official recognition, his society is, in a formal fashion, much sought after. But under the system of administration, as it now works, transfers from one official post to another are so frequent that there is hardly any field for the growth and exercise of personal influence, and in many cases it is to be feared the best elements of Native Society, or, at any rate, the most independent elements, keep aloof. No one deplotes this more than the civilians themselves. For the most part they would wish really to have a chance of knowing their districts and those who live in them. But the mechanical routine of work exhausts their energies, and when work is over they are apt to prefer the society of those with whom talk is easy and tastes common, to interviews, more or less constrained, with men speaking in a strange tongue and of the narrowest range of thought. The worst of it is, the evil tends to propagate itself. The less the Englishman knows the native, the less he is disposed to know him; the less his personal influence is felt, the greater is the crop of mischief which personal influence might prevent from springing up; the more copious the difficulties with which the Administrator has to deal, the more mechanical must be the means by which he deals with them, and so the vicious circle runs. The picture with which we are all familiar, of the Indian civilian riding from village to village bringing terror to the heart of evil-doers, or sitting at eventide under the spreading peepul tree in the village dispensing patriarchal justice to all comers, was, perhaps, never quite a true one. Josh Sedley, in fact, was a by no means exceptionable type of the old civilian. In many a district to-day are to be found communities of men who regard our rule with sullen dislike. They have no grievance to complain of now, but they remember that generations since they, or the head of their clan, lost their ancestral lands by frauds which the laxity or corruption of the first race of English administrators permitted. Before the era of codes, too, the body of law which our Courts and Magistrates had to administer was a very jungle of complication and technicality. But, in spite of all this, justice was, speaking generally, administered well and speedily. Natives still speak with regretful admiration of the Sahib who rode eighty miles before dinner to arrest a famous bandit, and whose mere word was law to a country side. It was not that he was less fettered in theory by the regulations than his successor is by the codes; but he could afford to disregard the letter of the law. In many cases he was probably happily ignorant of what the law ordained. If the civilian of the present day attempts to follow the old example of heroic administration, the censure of the High Court and a wiggling from the Secretariat are his reward.

Yet, though the position of the Civil Service has thus changed, a good deal of the old glamour clings round it—for Englishmen, at any rate. India, if it has lost something of its romance, has lost a good deal of its terrors. The young men who have just got their certificates know very well that they are going to a land where the pagoda tree grows no longer, or at least no longer bears fruit worth shaking off—where life is not all nautes and shikar—where Rajas and Nawabs no longer tremble at the nod of the Sahib, and where the educated native is deplorably prone to argue with his English rulers. But they know, too, that if they do not eat too much beef in the hot weather, and can learn to do without brandy and soda as a beverage, the chances are that they will bring home livers at least as sound as those of Englishmen pent up in cities and worried with sordid cares. The Indian civilian is always within easy reach of home, and he has every fifth year as a holiday in which to visit it. Once a year, too, he can leave all the cares of office behind, and go to shoot the Ibex in Kashmir, or discover, if he be of an exploring turn, fresh routes through the valleys and over the snows of the Himalayas. Life and scenery in an average district may be tame—though those who have seen the morning dew on Indian harvest fields will hardly allow that the plains have no picturesque charm. Everywhere within easy distance are mournful but romantic relics of the past. The people themselves—to those who care to regard them aright—are a perpetual source of interest. And though the civilian may be for most of the year only a drudge—a clerk—his drudgery is of the highest kind, and his functions as a clerk command for him the obsequious if not entirely sincere respect of all those with whom they bring him into contact. Then comes the blessed season of cold weather, when life in tents is possible, and as he moves round the district he may feel a pale reflection of the glow of personal interest and personal influence. If he is wise he will make the best use he can of the chances thus afforded him. He may—when his heart is bent on making right prevail—fret and fume at the restrictions which the law imposes on his modes of inquiry; he may deplore the encouragement which our English system of judicial investigation gives to perjury in our tribunals; he may turn with despairing disgust from the spectacle of corruption which the every-day proceedings of the courts disclose to him. By all means let him protest, and, in any way he can, hasten the coming of the day of better things. But, meanwhile, let him make full use of the means and chances the law and the present system allow him. If he seek out what is best in natives, if he prove himself—to use their own phrase—a “discriminator of merit,” he will perhaps, find that much of the lawlessness he deplotes results from a not unnatural distrust of a legal system which, as yet, natives do not understand. Let him make the most of his official position in unofficial ways. Then, when his work is done, he will find, as the best men of earlier times have found, that to serve natives well is the best way to like them, and that to like them is the best way to serve them.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE SIKANDAR NAMA, E BARA.*

A WRITER in the Asiatic Journal, 1832, vol. vii., page 235, says:—“A collection of the Oriental Histories of Alexander the Great would form a course of reading almost as wild and delightful as the ‘Arabian Nights.’” In such a collection the translation now made by Capt. Wilberforce Clarke would take one of the foremost places. The poetry of Shaikh Nizami of Ganja is somewhat sententious and obscure; but his imagery is typically Oriental, and the seventy-two cantos here rendered literally into English are replete with interest in regard both to the language and to the matter. Some curious traditions of the Greek conqueror were preserved among the vanquished Persians, and were handed down to modern times; and, though many of these stories reached Europe at an early period by way of Egypt and Greece, there are others still to be found in these Persian poems. The Sikandar Nama, e Bara, either in whole or in part, is a textbook prescribed both for the First Arts Examination of the Calcutta University, and for the Degree of Honour; and to students preparing for these examinations, Capt. Clarke’s translation will be of very great use. Each line of the translation agrees with the corresponding line in the original Persian text; and the cantos and the couplets are numbered, rendering reference easy. A complete table of contents is given, and alternative renderings of passages and copious notes, elucidating difficult and obscure points, make the student’s path as smooth as it is possible to make it by means of a translation.

* “The Sikandar Nama, e Bara, or Book of Alexander the Great.” Written A.D. 1200, by ABU MUHAMMAD BIN YUSUF BIN MUAYYIDI-NIZAMU-D-DIN. Translated for the first time out of the Persian into Prose, with Critical and Explanatory Remarks, with an Introductory Preface, and with a Life of the Author, collected from various Persian sources. By CAPT. H. WILBERFORCE CLARKE, R.E., late Deputy Consulting Engineer to the Supreme Government of India for Guaranteed Railways, &c. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1881.

GAOL HYGIENE.*

THIS little book is partly destructive and in part constructive. It is the first, inasmuch as it is a fresh, cry of condemnation against the prison diet introduced by the Gaol Conference. This feature has now not much originality, for the “conference diet” has been condemned by great and small, from the Secretary of State for India that speaketh in Parliament to the hospital assistant who watched its anemic effects. It is very rarely that Governors and Lieutenant Governors venture to criticise in such unmistakable terms the work of Government. They like to feel so very safe first. But “where they do agree on the stage, their unanimity is wonderful.” One noticeable feature in connection with the present work is that, although it is based on experience acquired in a province in which the prison diet has been tried, the province is one from which we believe that no official condemnation of the diet has as yet emanated. Such a condemnation is, however, always a matter of gradual evolution, and the stage of full maturity may not yet have been reached. There is the first stage of utter incredulity, in which no explanation is considered necessary, and the evidence simply disbelieved. Then comes the stage in which facts which can no longer be disregarded are explained, or, it may be, explained away. Before admitting, for example, that a diet, as laid down, is unfit or insufficient, there is the obvious alternative that the diet as laid down has not reached the prisoners; in other words, that the gaol officials are dishonest. “We are not angels here, nor shall be;” but the length to which this argument may be pushed is amusingly illustrated at page 106 of this book. A gaol medical official is quoted as saying that he never heard of scurvy in the gaol in the months of September or October without suspecting the honesty of the gaol officials. It is curious, as Mr. Hume points out, that dishonesty should be so prevalent among gaol officials just at that time. It is, however, noteworthy, as he also points out, that this is the very time of the year when physiological causes render the human frame more liable than at other times to feel the effects of an insufficient dietary.

The report of the Conference on the subject of diet is singularly meagre, being summed up in five paragraphs which cover a page-and-a-half of tolerably large type. They say that they were guided almost entirely by the opinions of the medical members of the Conference, members who might presumably have been expected not to err on the side of insufficiency. Another fact which had influence with the Conference was that in the N.W.P. prisoners maintain their health on a dietary which is very moderate in quantity, and still more restricted as to quality; whence they inferred that "some change in the direction of reduction might be made without risk in other parts of India." The figures which warrant this inference are to be found, it anywhere, in an appendix containing a statement showing the sickness and mortality, and another statement giving the diet scales in force, in ten provinces of British India. These figures certainly seem to show that the gaol population suffered most in Bengal and the Central Provinces, and on the other hand that their health was best in Bombay and the Hyderabad Assigned Districts. It might, therefore, have been supposed that the diet scale of one of the latter provinces would, ceteris paribus, have formed a better standard than that of the N.W.P., where, for thirteen years, the percentage of sick was higher than in five other provinces, and where the percentage of deaths, exclusive of deaths from cholera, was exceeded by five provinces only out of the ten. Not only did the Conference quote in their support a dietary which, although moderate in quantity, and "restricted as to quality," does not seem to have been eminently successful, but they proceeded further and cut down to 40z. the 6½oz. pulse allowed in the N.W. Provinces gaols. There should have been a scientific analysis of the proposed diet; possibly there may have been, but it is not published with their report, although it is published in the work before us. This work is of course intended mainly for the use of the medical profession; but it is a mistake to take for granted, as the Conference seems to have done, if they ever made an analysis, that a simple statement of such a kind is one of those things which no man can understand. All that is wanted is a comparative statement showing the exact amount of each component necessary to keep a man in health, and the amount of each component which the proposed diet scale contains. Such a statement is given at page 40 of this work, and had it been given by the Conference it would have shown how very near the wind they were proposing to sail. It might not have prevented the adoption of their diet scale; such a course would have been too premature a discounting of the result of their labours. But it would have shown the necessity for a wide discretion being vested in the hands of the medical officer in charge of each gaol in which the diet scale was introduced. It is a drawback inevitable in India that the ipse dixit of official opinion receives so little support or exposure from able independent criticism. We therefore congratulate the author that, in frank and fearless fashion, he has ventured into the field, and can only regret that he had not a larger store from which to draw the arms of argument. The limited range of his experience is a fact admitted by himself in his preface; and, truth to say, besides being a critique on the Conference diet scale, the book at times reads very like a special indictment of the management of the Akola Central Gaol. Whether this gaol in particular was worse or better than the "general mean average" central gaol, we have no means of saying; nor is the point in question. It is of course enough for the author that it was sufficiently mismanaged to afford him arguments for his purpose. Mercutio's wound was "not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door," but "twas enough, 'twould serve."

If we have confined our remarks to the chapters on diet it is because we think they form the most valuable part of the work. The treatment of the subject is scientific, based on honest work at the desk and in the ward. The other parts of the work, however, merit attention. The formation of dining messes in which the members are classified according to requirements is, if feasible, a good suggestion. When a diet scale is framed for a man of average weight it is prima facie inadequate for a bigger man. This is, however, an oversight which gaol cooks are often supposed to correct by their increased attentions to the men of good caste. (The social status of a case can be estimated roughly by the average weight of its adult male members.) But the gaol cooks unfortunately forget that in rectifying the mistakes of Government, as far as big criminals are concerned, they are thereby aggravating those mistakes (or even creating them) to the damage of the smaller fry.—Bombay Gazette.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the letter of your correspondent "E. S." from Limehouse, dated June 1 last, and published by you on the 8th idem, all who are anxious that sixty millions of our subjects in India should be enabled to seek God in the Holy Scriptures (should, in the words of the Marquis Wellesley, have access to the sacred fountains of Divine truth) will be interested in the following extract from this year's report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, page 139:—

"The translation of the Hindi Scriptures is under careful consideration. The difficulties here are greater than in the case of Urdu. Dialects differ even more widely. Hindi is peculiarly the tongue of the common people, and even scholars differ as to the standard which should be followed in our translations. The whole question will during the present year receive at the hands of the Allahabad Committee thorough attention and care. Constant changes in the language of a Bible are, as all will agree, much to be deprecated. The course at present which the committee view with the most favour is, that they should in the edition about to be prepared revert to the version prepared by the Rev. Mr. Bowley, the old edition of the society, while they take counsel with experienced missionaries and scholars regarding a new and revised version. Very many missionaries and most of our native Christians have pronounced in favour of the old version in preference to those which have followed it."

Mr. Bowley's translation, which is preferred to all other translations, was completed in 1826, when Lord Amherst was Governor General; it thus appears that no progress has been made during fifty-five years.

"E. S." has stated his opinion that Mr. Bowley's translation was in many points very defective. Have I not proved that we have neglected our duty to the natives of India, from whom we draw every year twenty-four millions sterling?—Your obedient servant,
T.

THE OCCULT WORLD.

IT is a strange subject for a paper like this, which has usually to deal with the license tax, the Criminal Procedure Code, magisterial vagaries, and kindred other subjects. But Mr. A. P. Sinnet, editor of the Pioneer, has just published a book which he calls by the above name. The hero of that book is one "Koot Hoomi Lal Sing," and Lal Sing is trying, like Nanak, to bring about an amalgamation of the two races, the ruled and the rulers. Lal Sing is, therefore, from this point of view a political character, and his doings deserve some notice in a political paper.

Now who is this Lal Sing? One little incident will show the calibre of this man or god, call him whatever you choose. Mr. Sinnet dedicated his book to Lal Sing, and the editor of the Pioneer, the proud Englishman, the exponent of all that is imperious and imperial in Englishmen, thus offers homage to the hero in the dedication:—

"To one whose comprehension of nature and humanity ranges so far beyond the sciences and philosophy of Europe that only the broadest-minded representatives of either will be able to realise the existence of such powers in man as those he constantly exercises—to Koot Hoomi Lal Sing, whose gracious friendship has given the present writer his title to claim the attention of the European world, this little volume, with permission, sought and obtained, is affectionately dedicated."

Now, fancy this Englishman, who regarded the Hindus as no better than barbarians, now talking of Lal Sing as one who has gone beyond the range of European science and philosophy, and whose gracious friendship he values above all other earthly good! This will give you an idea of the calibre of the being called Koot Hoomi Lal Sing by Mr. Sinnet in his book, and of whom we intend to write something to-day.

We have not yet seen Mr. Sinnet's book, and the dedication is taken from an extract in the Theosophist. Koot Hoomi Lal Sing is a Hindu and a Rajpoot, as the name imports, though we do not understand the first portion of his name. Not having seen "The Occult World," we shall to-day give some account of Lal Sing, as we gathered from those who followed the great hero of Mr. Sinnet. Of course it is a wonderful tale from the beginning to the end; it is an incredible tale likewise. But our readers have the freest liberty to accept the accounts or reject them. We give them only as we got them.

Of course, we have not seen Lal Sing, but a picture, said to be his, was shown to us. It represented a young man of about twenty-five or thirty, of dark colour, perfect health, perfect physical beauty, a fine beard, and benevolent eyes, with a Rajpoot dress. He, we are told, performed yoge, and acquired almost omnipotent powers, i.e., acquired the eight Siddhis or powers of the soul, anima, laghima, &c. He is only one of many, and they form a brotherhood composed of about one hundred and ten brothers, the majority of whom—about a hundred—are Hindus. They are all led by one Hindu, "the holiest of the holy," himself also a Hindu, and Lal Sing is either their secretary or their exponent. The leader himself is not visible.

Now these "Brothers" selected one man and another woman to perform a mission of theirs. One is Madame Blavatsky, a Russian lady of high family, of whom we gave some account some time ago. The other is Colonel Olcott, an American gentleman, who held high office in America and a leading position in his country. Of the colonel suffice it to say that his intellect and attainments are of the highest order, and that his heart is like that of a woman. It is literally devoted to the cause of humanity, and he left all to come to India at the bidding of the "Brothers."

The "Brothers" are thus in the habit of visiting all parts of the world. They travel in their own peculiar way. Here is a short story told to us by a friend. In the cave of Elephanta the Prince of Wales dined. Everyone knows it is one of the wonders of the world, and it is full of ancient Hindu idols. It was not a judicious act on the part of the Prince's advisers to make this place a resort for midnight amusements. Our friend was there some time after this dinner, and the sight of a bone in such a place disgusted him very much. He loudly expressed his indignation, but no sooner had the expression come out of his mouth than he found himself face to face with Lal Sing, with an approving smile. Lal Sing patted our friend on the back and—vanished. This is the way, we are told, Lal Sing and the "Brothers" travel.

In this manner the "Brothers" travelled all over the world, and selected the American gentleman and the Russian lady as instruments for their great work and brought them to India. During the cremation ceremony of a Polish noble, who died in America and whose body was burnt at his request, the ceremony was performed by a "Brother." He appears suddenly accompanied by another subordinate "Brother" with a garland of gems round his neck, each of which would purchase Rothschilds ten times over. They made themselves visible to thousands of men in the city of Boston, and, after performing the ceremony, they disappeared suddenly. We saw a report of the proceedings and an account of the "Brothers" in the New York Sun, we believe.

We have already given a hint that the object of these Hindu saints seems to bring about a reconciliation between the rulers and the ruled. All efforts in this direction have failed, simply because the ruled approached the rulers with trembling and awe, and the rulers approached the ruled with a patronising air. But the "Brothers" aim at a higher game. They would establish perfect equality amongst the races, and themselves lead the brotherhood. Indeed, one whom they have once taken as their own will not find it possible to rebel against their authority. So small is man, though he may be an Englishman, so immensely powerful is the "Brother" with the powers of his soul developed.

But most readers will laugh at the idea of these "Brothers;" the powers of the soul and so forth. Well, they have a right to laugh; but they should by all means yet join this good movement. Lal Sing may be a creature of imagination, evolved out of the brain of Madame, but yet it has forced men like Mr. A. P. Sinnet and some high Government officials to come down to admit what the former has done in his dedication. This being so, all should join the movement, and if they are willing to test for themselves whether the "Brothers" do exist or not they could do it easily enough. Let them form a theosophical society here, and invite Madame Blavatsky, and it is quite possible Madame will get hold of them, as she seems to have done of Mr. Sinnet, and show them wonders of which they never dreamt before.—Amritsa Bazar Patrika.

RAILWAYS FOR INDIA.

THE concession granted by the Home Government of India to Messrs. Rothschild, Baring Brothers, and other eminent London financiers will, we hope, bear fruit in inciting other capitalists to emulate the example of the firms we name, and devote the plethora of wealth that has accumulated in London to the development of the resources of our Indian Empire. It is indeed pitiable to see capital diverted to such schemes as omnibus companies in Vienna, and supplying the inhabitants of the remote Azores with gas, while the commercial products of what is supposed to be the greatest dependency of the British Crown receive but scant attention. We have, it is true, no reason to complain of the promptitude of the commercial world in financing the numerous gold investments in Southern India, but we should like to see an influx of capital for the purpose of laying open to the mercantile community the general unbounded resources of this country. Did but our motu fuit constituents embody in their letters more information concerning the various trades and occupations in the localities they write about, instead of filling our columns with mere records of purely local interest, they would do more to benefit the districts they write of than is the case at present. We by no means wish to empty by these remarks that our motu fuit letters are uninteresting, but would point out that the information contained therein, as a rule, concerns only those dwelling in the immediate vicinity of the station the contribution comes from. Without egotism we may say that our circulation has attained such dimensions that it is now read in all towns where English forms the commercial language; hence, if our contributors would favour us with occasional independent trade statistics much benefit would accrue therefrom. Of course, it may be said that such information can be obtained from the different local Gazettes, but as the officials who compile these reports depend, more or less, on the court amlah for the prices current, there is too much reason to fear that their returns are not quite reliable. There is, and always has been, a disinclination among traders, both European and native, to resent inquisitive official investigation, owing to the belief that such is generally made with ulterior views of taxation. Hence the truth as to actual prices is but seldom to be got at, and a merchant in the City frequently finds that he can purchase country produce here, in Calcutta, at less cost than is quoted at the price at the place of production in the weekly reports. We attach no blame to the district officers on this account, as they are so environed by amlah, chuprassies, and servants, that independent personal inquiries are well-nigh impossible, and, even could such be instituted, the mere fact of the burra saheb making them would immediately give rise to the surmises mentioned above, correct bazaar rates of articles of local consumption can better be drawn out in conversation with sepoy, coolies, and bustee wallahs, in which direct inquiry should be avoided. By these means a great deal of statistical information would be circulated that would prove of much importance to the commercial community, and, now that a mania for Indian railway-making appears to be setting in, would probably prove the means of bringing remote districts, at present supposed to be unproductive, into communication with the great trade centres. It is well known that enormous tracts of land lie idle from want of labourers in some parts of the empire, while in others a teeming population has so exhausted the soil that famine is periodically inevitable, and all are interested in endeavouring to further a more equable distribution of the people. But we want more tangible information of the capabilities of uncultivated land than the Gazettes and Administration Reports afford, to attract capital thither, and this our motu fuit correspondents can furnish.

The tide of emigration that has been flowing from the densely settled States of Europe, where the struggle for existence is so severe (setting aside domestic and political reasons for it), to the large corn-growing tracts of the United States and the Australasian colonies, is worthy of careful study by the authorities of this country; and, now that money can be obtained in such vast sums, the opportunity for securing a network of railway communication for India should not be neglected. It was pointed out at the beginning of the year that every line of railway that had been projected had been a commercial success, and the assertion is incontrovertible. The Indian Government's credit is so good that a large loan for interest at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. could be easily obtained in London; at that rate financiers are at present willing to undertake to find the money for the works, and if our columns can contribute in furnishing the commercial information that will tend to bring about such a desirable result as complete intercommunication, they are open to all who are willing to aid in the work. In conclusion, we may remark that, if the present "golden era" is neglected, those that allow it to slip by must be held directly responsible for the result of future famines and border troubles. That the present opportunity will remain open for any lengthened period the experience of previous epochs of plethora of wealth render improbable, so that it is necessary that no time should be lost, but that our rulers should, for once, break through the trammels of red tape and act with decision. One word more; if capital be brought into the country we trust the necessary work will not be undertaken by Government departments, but entrusted to the eminent firms of contractors that have proved themselves equal to successfully carrying out the different large engineering works their names will ever be identified with. We wish to cast no slur on the officers of the Public Works Department, but we have had too many instances to show that, however able the individual parts of that machine may be, the machine itself cannot always be trusted; and, in carrying out such a gigantic undertaking as a network of intercommunication for all India, we could not afford to run any risk of a repetition of the melancholy Saugor barracks fiasco.—Friend of India.

SIMLA QUARRELS.

THE main question of interest regarding our parochial affairs just now centres round the doings of the municipality. By one means and another this body has succeeded in exciting or goading its faithful subjects the ratepayers into a state of acute rebellion, and open hostilities were commenced at a public meeting called together to protest generally against the proceedings of the municipal committee; its waste of municipal funds, particularly in regard of the proposed building of the Kursaal; its vexatious interference with individual rights, and its continual increase of local taxation; to memorialise the Lieutenant Governor on these points, urging the necessity of a reorganisation of the committee and the introduction upon it of an elective element, at present non-existent. Mr. Molesworth took the chair in the absence from indisposition of Mr. Allan Hume. About 150 persons were present, and indignantly called for the downfall of the system under which the town is now governed. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Allan Hume, Molesworth, A. B. Sampson, Cullin, Phelps, the Ven. Archdeacon Mathew, and Maulvi Hussain Bux, was appointed to draw up the memorial to the Lieut. Governor, and a second committee to take steps to form a ratepayers' association to protect the interests of the people of Simla against the encroachments and autocratic zeal of their municipality. Mr. Allan Hume wrote from a sick bed urging the ratepayers to vigorous and energetic action, and pointing out that if no redress to their injuries was received from the Lieutenant Governor, or the highest authority in the land, they should agitate their cause through the press at home, in which case he felt sure a Liberal Ministry would never tolerate such wrongs to be inflicted on them as they now endured.

An attempt has been made on behalf of the municipality by means of some of the up-country newspapers to represent that the agitation has been cleverly got up by Mr. Goldstein, the proprietor of "Benmoor," the building which now does duty as concert, ball room, &c., who, of course, sees in the proposed Kursaal a formidable rival to his property. To the impartial observer this position appears untenable for the reasons that at the meeting the majority of those present were not of a class likely to be taken by such a simple trap as Mr. Goldstein is alleged to have prepared for them; and, secondly, that one very generally hears the municipal proceedings spoken of unfavourably, from which it seems that the irritation at these doings is very general and not necessarily connected with the matter of the Kursaal. These strictures rather seems to show that Mr. Molesworth was nearer the mark when he observed that the Kursaal project was nothing more nor less than the last straw on the camel's back.—Friend of India.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.—It is rumoured that the members of the Viceregal Council are setting up determined obstacles in the way of the repeal of the Vernacular Press Act. It is also asserted that, up to the day previous to the departure of the last mail, no response had been received from the Indian Government to the vigorous despatch written by Lord Hartington on the subject of the repeal of the Act.—Friend of India.

THE GOOD INTENTIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—The new secretary to the Government of India in the Agricultural Department, Mr. Buck, is engaged, we understand, in communicating with the local Governments with the view of organising a system under which the recommendations of the Famine Commission in the matter of agricultural reform in India may be carried out. So far, of course, the Government of India has done no more than re-establish the old department; and that department was never able formerly to do much in the direction of agricultural reform for want of local machinery, or funds with which local machinery could be organised. Now, however, the whole subject has received an impulse; and, by striking while the iron is hot, it is possible Mr. Buck may achieve definite results. Pioneer.

THE LAHORE WATERWORKS.—The committee appointed to inquire into the failure of the Lahore waterworks consists of three members, Mr. Michel, chief engineer of the S.P.D. Railway, and Mr. T. Higham, executive engineer, Sirhim Canal, being appointed on behalf of the Government, and Mr. J. Campbell, C.E., on behalf of the contractor who executed the work. The inquiry has commenced.—Bombay Gazette.

SALT REVENUE.—The Indian salt revenue for the first three months of the current financial year has amounted to Rs.1,84,31,000, as compared with Rs.1,82,35,000 during the corresponding period of last year.—Ibid.

THE 72ND HIGHLANDERS.—Lieut. Col. C. M. Stockwell, C.B., commanding the 1st Battalion of Seaforth Highlanders (late 72nd), was recently granted an interview at Simla by the Viceroy, who, it is stated, complimented him highly on the good services done by the regiment in the late Afghan war.—Ibid.

HILL BREWERIES.—In view of the losses incurred by the Indian brewery companies on their contracts for the supply of beer to the troops, owing to the late war, Government has extended the existing contracts at the present rate for five years.—Ibid.

SMUGGLING OF ARMS INTO CENTRAL INDIA.—A discovery made at the Mhow Railway station of a quantity of Government ammunition in the possession of a native fuel contractor has led to the disclosure that a large trade in arms and ammunition has been going on for some time between Bombay and Central India. A search instituted at Mhow resulted in the finding of fifteen thousand cartridges, a quantity of shot and powder, and some small arms. It was also clear that the greater part of the stores had been recently removed. The search is being continued, as it is suspected that large quantities still remain concealed in the bazaar.—Ibid.

THE VICEROY'S TOUR.—The route to be followed by the Viceroy from Simla to Calcutta has been published. His Excellency, according to present arrangements, will leave Simla on November 1, and travel by way of Dharampore, Umballa, Delhi, Agra (branching off to Muttra, Jeypur, Bhurtpur, Ajmere, Chittore), and Benares, arriving at Calcutta on December 2.—Bombay Gazette.

NAINI TAL.—Writing to a contemporary from Naini Tal, on the 11th inst., a correspondent says:—"The place is emptier than it has been for ten years. The rain comes down continually, and there is nothing else of any kind going on."—Ibid.

MR. G. M. BATTEN.—We hear on good authority that Mr. G. M. Batten has completely recovered his health, and may be expected back in India at the beginning of the cold weather.—Englishman.

ILLNESS OF THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Bishop of Calcutta was taken ill soon after his arrival at Dibrugarh, and was consequently unable to start for Sadya, as had been arranged. The programme would allow a week's rest at Dibrugarh, and this would, it was hoped, enable the bishop to regain sufficient strength for the continuation of the tour.—Indian Churchman.

DEATHS IN CALCUTTA.—During the week ended August 6 there were 192 deaths registered in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 23.3 per thousand per annum. In the previous week there were 207 deaths, and the death-rate was 25.1 per thousand. There were no deaths from small-pox, 7 from cholera, 60 from fevers, 18 from tetanus, and 9 from causes not specified. The deaths are thus classified:—1 non-Asiatic, 5 mixed races, 132 Hindus, 53 Mahomedans, and 1 of the other races.—Ibid.

QUEER STORY OF A STOLEN LETTER.—A rumour, which may be taken for what it is worth, reached us on August 15, that a letter from the Viceroy to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, of such importance and secrecy that it was despatched by hand, had been stolen, during transit, from the messenger to whose charge it was entrusted. A native, so runs the report, entered the gari in which the individual in question was driving from the Hawrah railway station, abstracted the document from his possession, and decamped with it. There is an air of improbability about the story which is increased by the fact that, as related to us, it includes details regarding the subject of the letter and the motive of the thief.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At the date of departure of the mail, the unfixed tonnage in port amounted to only 5,800 tons; and business during the week had been very heavy. Rates, for London, via Suez Canal: Wheat, 60s. to 62s. 6d.; jute, 65s. to 67s. 6d. For Dundee, via Canal; Early loading in demand, steamer Rothsay fixed at 67s. 6d. for October loading. London, via Cape: Linseed 56s. 3d., 58s. 9d., 60s.; wheat, 57s. 6d.; rapeseed, 60s. to 62s. 6d.; jute, 55s. to 60s. Liverpool, via Cape: Wheat, 52s. 6d.; jute or linseed, 55s. Dundee, via Cape: Great activity; ships competed for at 57s. 6d., 60s., 61s. 3d.

MADRAS.

MR. GRANT-DUFF.—News has reached us here that Major Bertie Hobart has been staying at Twickenham with our future Governor in order to coach him up in all the pomp and circumstance of chobes, of chuprassies in scarlet liveries, and halberdiers; the efficacy of Eno's fruit salt, and of flannel next the skin; the necessity of sentries, guards of honour, and railway station receptions; in short, the "straight tip" concerning the mysteries of Viceregal life at Madras.—Madras Correspondent Pioneer.

THE NEW GOVERNOR.—The appointment of Mr. Grant-Duff to the Governorship of this Presidency has, of course, been a special topic of conversation at Madras since my last communication. We were by no means taken by surprise when the news reached us. It has all along seemed ordained that, sooner or later, the member for the Elgin Burghs should be our ruler; and now that he has actually been nominated we have accepted our fate as cheerfully as we can. Somewhat disheartening it is, I confess, to hear such forbidding accounts of our Governor elect. Pity breathes her kindly sympathy from the north. Our brethren in the west wag their heads and say, "Your duke chastised you with whips, but lo! here is one that will chastise you with scorpions." And men "who are in a position to know, you know," write letters from London that chill the little marrow that the dreary hot months have left within our bones.—Ibid.

BOARD OF REVENUE.—Mr. W. Dowdeswell Horsley and Mr. Richard Barlow are appointed to officiate, respectively, as second and third members of the Madras Board of Revenue in the absence of the regular incumbents.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY.

THE RIFLE BRIGADE.—The Bombay authorities have definitely decided on moving the Rifle Brigade out of their quarters at Puna. The headquarters of the battalion and three companies are to leave immediately for Ahmednuggur, while the remainder have already been distributed between Satara, Wanowree, and Kirkee. The unhealthy Ghoorpooree Barracks will thus become empty, and it is not unlikely that they may remain so for some time to come.—Pioneer.

H.M.S. "RANGER."—The death is announced of Commander Pison, R.N., of H.M.S. Ranger, who died on the 30th ult. at Bushire. The Ranger had only recently been placed at Bombay, relieving the Beacon on the Indian station.—Ibid.

SIR JAMES FERGUSSON.—H.E. the Governor has deserted the pleasant climate of Puna this week for the hot and steamy Konkan and Guzerat, the objects of his journey being to perform the ceremony of opening the new Tanna waterworks, and to visit the great Nerbudda bridge when the river was in flood. His Excellency also received and replied to addresses from the municipalities of Broach and Surat. The Governor returned on Sunday morning to Bombay, where he was the guest of the Lord Bishop. He left again for Puna yesterday afternoon.—Bombay Gazette.

GOVERNMENT PAPER.—There has been some heavy speculation recently in Government paper, with the result that the price fell a few days ago to 98. Real investors began to buy at that rate, and the scale turned again on Saturday, the price being now again above par.—Ibid.

MESSRS. NICOL AND CO.—A meeting of creditors of the firm of Messrs. Nicol and Co. of Bombay and Messrs. Fleming and Co. of Karachi was held on Wednesday, at which a report of the liquidation was presented. The admitted claims amount to Rs.1,07,34,641; and a dividend of 12½ per cent. has been paid amounting to Rs.13,41,830. The cost of liquidation up to date has been Rs.84,824.—Ibid.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPT. 12, 1881.

NORTH INDIA, ENGLAND'S BEST GRANARY.

SIR JAMES FERGUSSON, in opening the new waterworks at Tanna on August 18, said that he believed that India was only on the threshold of a development of its resources. India would, he hoped, shortly not only supply herself with all she requires, but be a large exporter also to other countries. It was in this direction that enterprise, co-operation, and investment might be best employed.

These words strike the key-note of a policy which will commend itself to all true friends of India and of the British Empire. Last week we earnestly advocated the establishment of an Imperial Commercial Federation, which would give to England, to India, and to our vast colonial dependencies all the blessings of free trade, whilst it would make us independent of the rest of the world, and enable us to insist on such commercial relations with foreign nations as would make our trade "fair" as well as free. The great conference of trades' delegates, convened by the National League, which closed on Saturday last, has decisively pronounced for this policy; and their cause has been strengthened by the presence, at the closing banquet, of Mr. Sampson Lloyd, the chairman of the Fair Trade League—which we trust indicates a coalition of the forces now at work for the promotion of the commercial unity and prosperity of the Empire. Mr. Hunt, the chairman of the Conference, and himself a delegate, suggested the possibility of a light tax on the import of foreign corn into England, provided that the imports of food-grains from India and the colonies were encouraged by being allowed to enter duty free. It is, of course, obvious that the extreme gravity of any measure that could possibly tend to increase the price of bread in this country is such as to demand for it the most thorough and careful examination. Anxious as we all are for any means of mitigating the present unparalleled depression of the agricultural interest, it is nevertheless clear that no Government could safely venture on a policy of mere protection. But it may fairly be doubted whether a light import duty on American, Russian, and other foreign corn would necessarily have the effect of increasing, in any appreciable degree or for any length of time, the price of bread; for it would most certainly stimulate, to an enormous extent, the production of wheat for the English market, not only in the colonies, but also in the Punjab and the North West Provinces of India. We all remember the marvellous expansion of the cotton exports of India under the stimulus of the American civil war. Had it not been for the insuperable difficulty of the shortness of the staple of Indian cotton it is probable that that stimulus would, ere now, have rendered Lancashire independent of the American cotton supply. No such difficulty is to be apprehended in regard to the production of wheat. Already, and for years past, Indian wheat has been competing, in rapidly progressive quantities, with its American rival. The extent to which the production might be increased is practically unlimited. The course of the trade during recent years has shown clearly that it is capable of indefinite expansion; and that expansion will most certainly take place on a prodigious scale whenever it receives the smallest fiscal encouragement from England. The vast extent of the wheat-growing capabilities of Northern India is one of the most important factors in the problem that is now exercising the minds of English statesmen. Timely attention to it may not improbably free us from that terrible danger of famine, to which, under present circumstances, we must ever be liable on the outbreak of any war that might suddenly cut off the foreign supplies of food on which we depend.

THE MYSOR-BEYPORE LINE.—A RAILWAY FOR THE WAINAD GOLDFIELDS.

IN the Englishman of Monday, August 8, we find the following paragraph:—"The Maisur State Railway was opened on August 1 as far as the French Rocks, ten miles from Maisur. This will be a great boon to the public, and particularly to officials whose business obliges them to travel frequently between Maisur and Bangalore. Surveys are being taken with a view to lines being run to Tumkur, Hassan, Chittaldrug, and other important centres in the country. Both the Maharaja and Dewan recognise the value of railway communication, and quite a network of railway lines has been mapped out for the Maisur province." We trust that, in this projected "network of railway lines," at least one line will be found to connect Mysor with the port of Beypore on the Malabar coast, passing through the heart of the gold districts. There exist excellent traces, comparatively free from any considerable engineering difficulties, for two, and perhaps three, such lines. As an outlet of the boundless resources of Mysor to the Western Sea, and the carrier of the foreign commerce, inwards and outwards, of that rich and prosperous region, a Beypore line is certain to be of an extraordinarily remunerative character. We have all heard of the enormous returns of the Kandy-Colombo line in Ceylon; in Mysor there are all the same conditions of success present, and many others to boot. The State of Mysor alone—without counting the Wainad and the rich lowlands of the Malabar district—contains an area greater than Holland and Belgium put together, and has a population greater than that of Portugal. Its only railway communication is eastward from Bangalore by the Madras Railway, with the small extension mentioned above; and even from Bangalore the railway journey to Beypore can only be done by a vast detour to the south, as far as the Gap of Coimbatore. Even with this defective line of communication, Mysor manages to export coffee to the annual value of £300,000, areca nut to the value of £280,000, ragi to the value of £205,000, and so on; whilst it imports yearly piece-goods to the value of £400,000, coarse cloth valued at £216,000, and so on. It possesses an unrivalled network of "provincial" and "district" roads that will at once become the feeders of a line such as that we advocate; whilst a thrifty and teeming population stands waiting to enrich the railway that will enrich them.

For a line of such promise, little more need be said; and yet we have not yet spoken of its greatest attractions. The native name of the Beypore river is Panna-poya, "The Gold River;" and the railway that runs into Beypore from the Wainad will soon be, like the Beypore river, a river of gold. It will bring down the gold, the coffee, and the cinchona, of the Wainad and the adjacent districts of Mysor, as well as those other Mysor exports of which we have already spoken. It will take up the machinery and the stores for the mines and for the coffee plantations, the rice and other supplies for the coolies, as well as all the ordinary imports for the interior of South India. Beypore has grown rapidly into importance since the opening of the Madras line; but the opening of a Mysor railway would be an event of infinitely greater importance, inasmuch as it would open up one of the richest and most extensive districts of India, and at once aid and profit by the development of an industry that is destined before long to be one of the most extended and most remunerative in the country. The immense value of such a line to the gold mining Companies is so obvious that we have no doubt the capital would be readily forthcoming, if only the enterprise be started on a sound basis; and we know of no undertaking in which the combination of English capital and Anglo-Indian local knowledge would be more certain to produce great results. Aid, in the shape of concessions and guarantees, would probably be given, both by his Highness the Maharaja of Mysor and by the Government of India. The Dewan of the Mysor State, Mr. Runga Charlu, C.I.E., is well known as one of the ablest and most enterprising of Indian statesmen; and it can hardly be doubted that he would gladly give to a Mysor-Beypore railway the full benefit of his countenance and co-operation. In every way it seems to us that the undertaking which we now suggest is one of the very highest promise and importance.

HOME NEWS.

THE EX-GUIKWAR OF BARODA.—Sir A. C. Lyall, K.C.B., secretary to the Government of India, has received from Dr. M. D. Kavanagh a long statement concerning the affairs of his client, the ex-Guikwar of Baroda. In reply, Sir A. C. Lyall remarks that the points raised are obviously very disputable, and not at all likely to be settled at an interview; but the Government of India, he promises, will not omit anything from their consideration.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAMER "ROME."—The magnificent steamer Rome is one of the latest additions to the fleet of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. She has been built by Messrs. Caird and Co., Greenock, who have for a long time built steamers for the company. The Rome was launched on May 14, from Messrs. Caird's yard. She is 430 feet long, 44 feet broad, and 36 feet deep, with engines of 5,100 horsepower indicated. The vessel has been specially built with a view to meet the rapidly developing trade between this country and Australia. She will be able to carry about 4,000 tons cargo. She is excellently fitted up all over, and the walls of the saloon and music room inlaid with carved walnut from Italy. There is accommodation for 160 first-class passengers whose quarters are, contrary to the usual custom, situated amidships and forward. Fifty second-class passengers will be accommodated at the stern. The vessel is practically a four-decker, having hurricane deck, upper deck, main deck, and lower deck. She is divided into seven water-tight compartments, and is provided with an extra large number of powerful pumps. The crank-shaft, which is of Vickers steel, weighs thirty tons. All the most modern appliances for the rapid loading and discharging of cargoes have been fitted. On Saturday, Sept. 3, the Rome took a preliminary trip down the Firth of Clyde as far as Brodick Bay. There was a distinguished party of ladies and gentlemen on board, including Mr. Sutherland, chairman and manager of the company. The engines worked in a satisfactory manner. The Rome will start on her maiden voyage for Australia early in October.

INSPECTION OF THE NEW ROUTE.—On Saturday, Sept. 3, Mr. Henry Bayley (one of the managing directors), Captain Angove (marine superintendent), and other officials of the P. and O. Company, travelled by a special train, which had been placed at their disposal by the directors of the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway Company, from Liverpool-street station, via Stratford, Forest-gate, and Barking, to Tilbury, for the purpose of inspecting the new route. Mr. John Turner, one of the Tilbury directors, and Mr. H. Cecil Newton, the secretary of that company, together with several of the principal officers, met the party at Liverpool-street station. On arrival of the train at Tilbury the party embarked on board one of the railway company's steamers, the Earl of Essex, and, after cruising about the river for some time, proceeded to the New Falcon Hotel, which adjoins the West-street station of the Tilbury Company at Gravesend, where luncheon was served. The party subsequently visited Southend, and returned to Fenchurch-street by special train in the course of the afternoon.

TAMBRACHERRY ESTATES AND WYNAAD GOLD MINING COMPANY.—The directors, in a circular just issued, state that after mature consideration they have resolved to consider the sum of £20,000 in the light of profit on the sale of the portion of land disposed of to the Cootacovil Gold Mining Company. Out of this sum they recommend the shareholders to declare a dividend of 10 per cent., which will absorb £16,000, and to appropriate the remainder to cover preliminary expenses in England and India. The directors, after taking the best legal advice, find they are precluded from carrying out their original intention of returning a portion of the proceeds of the above land in the shape of capital, and no other course appears to be open to them excepting that proposed, without bringing the company under the Act as "limited and reduced," which is undesirable.

COOTACOVIL GOLD MINING COMPANY.—A circular from the managing director, dated Sept. 3, to the shareholders of this company states as follows:—"In forwarding the annexed notice of a statutory general meeting, to be held on the 12th inst., I have to inform you that the directors have called you together a month before the extreme time allowed by the Company's Acts, in order to afford Mr. Harvey an opportunity of being present previous to his departure for Wynaad to lay out the work of the mine. The directors have to state for your information that everything possible has been done to advance the work in anticipation of Mr. Harvey's visit. Buildings are now being rapidly erected for the accommodation of the mining staff, and timber is being prepared for the stamping-house. A mechanic and miner are on their way out, and a mine superintendent will shortly follow. Stamping machinery is well in hand, and, with tramway plant, &c., will be shipped by the end of October. Arrangements are being made to open up the mine in anticipation of the machinery being erected, by which time the watercourse and tramways will be completed, and thus no time will be lost in making a bond fide commencement of regular work early in the year, provided no unforeseen delay should occur. With a good road from the coast to the estate, there should be no difficulty in the way of transporting the machinery. The directors add, with much satisfaction, that their endeavours to utilise native labour underground have been so far successful, and the superintendent writes that, with a European or two to lead them, he hopes, with care and tact, to get together a good set of native miners. Should this prove to be the case, a considerable economy in the cost of working will result. Application has been made to the Stock Exchange Committee for a settlement and quotation, which it is hoped will be granted without any difficulty, the requirements of the committee having been fully complied with. Scrip certificates are now ready for delivery in exchange for banker's receipts, and will be forwarded to country shareholders on application."

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—The following appointments have been made to the staff of Mr. Grant-Duff:—Capt. A. Awdry, Royal Engineers, to be private secretary; Major A. G. Spencer, Essex Regiment, to be military secretary; Lieuts. Viscount Dalrymple, Royal Horse Guards, and C. C. Cavendish, Highland Light Infantry, to be aides de camp; and Surgeon Major J. Mackenzie, M.D., Army Medical Department, to be medical officer.

THE LATE LIEUT. COL. KENNEDY.—The funeral of Lieut. Col. R. G. Kennedy, late lieutenant-col. of the 18th Hussars, and one of the heroes of the march to Kandahar, took place on Tuesday at Harold's-cross Cemetery. The body was removed from Belgard Castle to St. Ann's Church, Dawson-street, Dublin, on a gun carriage covered with the Union Jack, and bearing the sword and busby of the deceased officer. On each side of the bier marched a number of men of the Royal Horse Artillery, and behind came a long funeral cortege of carriages, among which were those of the Lord Mayor and the High Sheriff.

GOLD IN INDIA.—In the Geological Section of the British Association on Tuesday, Mr. W. King, of the Indian Geological Survey, read a paper on "Gold in Southern India and the Quartz Outcrops." The reefs, he said, of Wynaad were developed over a very large area of country, but their auriferousness was only displayed over a portion—namely, in the south east of Wynaad, and in the adjacent low country of Malabar, in a general east and west belt. Outside the belt the reefs were weaker and only locally auriferous. The leaders or offshoots of reefs in this belt were numerous developed, and they and the casings were rich in gold. It was these adjuncts, and not the reefs themselves, which had been so extensively worked by the ancient miners. On the other hand, the reefs, as far as was known, did not as yet show any continual steadiness in auriferousness, but they might be said to be capriciously permeated with the precious metal. The gold of the reef was pale coloured and of about the "tough" of standard gold. That of the leaders and casings was yellow gold and of inferior quality. In the outcrop of the quartz of Travancore only mere traces of gold had been found, and there were no traces of gold workings in that district. In speaking of the economic aspect of the Wynaad field, Mr. King said that he did not see any good reason to think that more gold would be got than seven pennyweights to the ton of rock, and, while hopeful of the moderate and paying quality of the reefs, he was decidedly of opinion that the results obtained so far did not warrant the wild expectations which had prevailed in England and India during the last twelve months, nor did they justify the enormous prices which had been paid for land and concessions. In the same section, in a paper on "The Geology of Cyprus," Mr. R. Russell gave a sketch of the physical features of that island, which of late have been often described. The rocks which occurred in Cyprus were first tertiary and secondary, the oldest of the secondary series being the limestone of Mount Helcarion. Raised beaches occurred at several places on the coast, the shells found on them being for the most part the same as those now extant in the Mediterranean.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs.35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs.1,05,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d.; to Bombay, Rs.60,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d.; and Madras, Rs.10,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d. Tenders on all presidencies at 1s. 7 13-16d. and above received in full. The total amount sold was about seven lakhs, the result contrasting with that of the last week or two. The wants of the Indian banks were, no doubt, partly supplied by the twenty-three lakhs of interest notes, which have been dealt in at 1s. 7½d. The Times says:—"The India-office has still ample reason to be satisfied with the results of its recent alteration in the method of tendering. A calculation has been made of the prices at which bills were sold before the minimum was declared and the prices since realised. This shows that out of twenty-four weeks in 1881 the bills were sold nineteen times under the silver price, and more than once at ¼d. and ½d. below that price. In other words, there was a loss of 1 and 1½ per cent., or several thousand pounds, upon each allotment, which must have gone as profit to the banks, who are now complaining of the change of practice by the India-office. Since the minimum was fixed the allotments have not once been made under silver price, and the India-office has saved so much money."

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday, owing to the absence of supplies, business in the silver market was quiet, and prices without alteration, the quotation for bars being 51½d., and for Mexican dollars 51d. to 51½d. In consequence of the low minimum fixed for the Indian Council drafts the total amount of the bills for which tenders were invited was not allotted, silver having receded, and a fall in the Eastern exchanges having occurred during the week. These causes assisted in depressing the market. Rupee Four-and-a-half per Cents. improved ½, to 89¾ to 90. The exchanges from the East were unchanged.—On Thursday a few further small transactions took place in silver at 51½d. per ounce, and some Mexican dollars were sold at 51½d. per ounce, the market altogether being very quiet. There was no change in the Eastern exchange rates, but Rupee Paper, owing, probably, to somewhat cheaper money, was a shade harder, the Four-and-a-half per Cents. closing at 89¾ to 90. In India, too, the quotations were a little better, at 109¼ and 100¼ for the Four-and-a-half and Four per Cents, respectively.—On Friday the continued bareness of supplies, and a corresponding absence of business, caused a weak tone in the price both of bars and Mexican dollars, though no actual change occurred, the figures being respectively 51½d. and 51½d. per ounce. The exchange from Bombay was telegraphed at 1s. 8 1-16d., Calcutta, 1s. 8d., Hong Kong, 3s. 9d., and Shanghai, 5s. 1¾d. Rupee Four-and-a-half per Cents. improved ½, to 90 to 90¼.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—Lieut. Col. R. C. B. Pemberton, Royal Engineers, having on return from leave resumed charge of his duties as consulting engineer for the Government of India for guaranteed railways, Lucknow, Major T. F. Dowden, Royal Engineers, superintending engineer, third class, has been appointed to officiate as deputy consulting engineer to the Government of India for guaranteed railways, Lucknow. Major M. W. Rogers, Royal Engineers, assistant superintendent, 1st grade, Survey of India, has on his return from leave been appointed to officiate as deputy superintendent, 3rd grade. Major C. W. J. Harrison, Royal Engineers, officiating superintendent, 2nd grade, to be superintending engineer, temporary, 3rd grade. Capt. R. E. Draker Brockman, Royal Engineers, executive engineer, 4th grade, has on his return from leave been posted to the Buckingham Canal Division (India). Capt. C. C. Rawson, Royal Engineers, executive engineer, 4th grade, has been transferred to Trichinopoly to take charge of the division, in relief of Major Pennycuik, Royal Engineers. Capt. W. Jenner, executive engineer, 3rd grade, on return from field service, has been posted to the Sirhind and Lahore Division, Military Works. Lieut. A. L. Mein, Royal Engineers, assistant engineer, 1st grade, has been granted three months' leave to study the native languages in India. Lieut. E. C. Stanton, Royal Engineers, assistant engineer, 2nd grade, North West Provinces and Oudh, has been transferred to the Military Works Branch.

THE INDIAN ARMY STAFF.—With the concurrence of the Secretary of State for India in Council the following rules, showing the qualifications required from officers of the British service for the undermentioned appointments to the General staff of the Army in India are issued for information:—1. Qualifications for adjutant general, quartermaster general, and deputy quartermaster general (head of the Intelligence Branch)—five years' service in India in any rank and the linguistic tests. 2. The period of service in India qualifying for a brigade command of a regimental field officer who has been through a campaign in India, in command of a regiment or battery, is reduced to three years, provided the campaign was one for which a medal was granted, or for which the officer has been honourably mentioned in despatches. 3. Qualifications for deputy adjutant general and assistant adjutant general, Royal Artillery—three years' service in India as a regimental field officer and the linguistic tests.

THE "MALABAR."—The Indian troopship Malabar, Capt. Grant, made a two hours' trial of her machinery on Friday morning in the Solent, after repairs and preparatory to her departure on the 16th inst. for Bombay. The trial was conducted by Mr. Charles Icely, chief inspector of machinery, belonging to the Steam Reserve, and Mr. Morcom, of the Dockyard Steam Department, and there was a great number of ladies and gentlemen on board. The pressure in the boilers averaged 45lb. to the square inch, which was considerably within their working power, and with forty-eight revolutions of the engines per minute the ship realised the highly satisfactory speed of 13½ knots per hour, with her full quantity of coal in the bunkers. The mean vacuum was 27in. Since the previous trooping season the Malabar has been fitted with steam steering gear, and with remarkably good results, as the following comparative data of tests made by Mr. Crocker during the trial will show:—The ship was circled to starboard and port with steam and with the usual hand gear, one man sufficing to steer the ship with the former, while sixteen men were required to man the wheel. With the steam gear the angles of rudder were 34deg. and 32deg. for starboard and port helm respectively, while with the manual gear the angles were 31deg. and 33deg., three-and-a-half turns of the wheel being required in both cases. The difference in time required to get the rudder over under the two systems was very marked, and had an important result in the comparative handiness of the ship in going round and in the respective diameters of the circles. With the steam gear the rudder was got over in 15sec. and 14sec., whereas it took 2min. 15sec. and 2min. 5sec. to accomplish the same angle by hand. Under the new system the complete circles to starboard and port were made in 6min. 14sec. and 6min. 40sec., the respective diameters being 674 and 702 yards. By hand the rudder was got over in 6min. 35sec. and 7min. 4sec.; and as in the latter case the ship felt the bite of the rudder more gradually, the diameters of the circles were found to be 814 and 843 yards. At the conclusion of the trial the Malabar was swung for the adjustment of her compasses, and afterwards returned into harbour.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

COFFEE.—A quiet market, without material change in prices. The small public sale went at about valuation.

TEA.—Indian teas by auction sold with a moderate demand at about previous value.

SPICES.—252 bags Trang pepper sold at 5½d., 100 bags Singapore white bought in at 7½d. Pimento in steady demand, and again rather dearer; 954 bags chiefly found buyers—ordinary to middling, 4½d. to 4¾d.; good fair, 4¾d. to 4½d.; and good, 5d.; 528 bales Zanzibar cloves mostly sold at ½d. decline, 20 cases Penang rather dark Amboyna kind, sold at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 6½d.; 20 cases good fair bought in at 2s. 4d.; and 65 bales stems withdrawn.

RICE quiet. A cargo of 1,600 tons Bassein sold at 8s. per cwt.

SALTPETRE.—About 50 tons Bengal sold, to arrive, at 23s.; and some fine, on the spot, 24s. 6d. per cwt.

COTTON.—There has been a fair demand at full prices. The market closed very firm. Sales about 2,600 bales, including Tinnevely, at 5 7-16d. to 5¾d.; Western, 4 11-16d.; Coconada, 4½d.; and Bengal, 4½d. to 5 3-16d. per lb. For arrival: Tinnevely, August, September, Cape, 5½d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery: American, September-October, 6½d.; November-December, 6½d.; January-February, 6½d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson, in their circular, state that the speculative movement in rice has subsided on account of the decline upon wheat and other grain. A few cargoes Burma off the coast or near at hand have sold at about 3d. per cwt. under last week's rates. There has not been any further change in tea beyond rather an improved feeling towards Indian growths after the late heavy fall in prices. As the supply of coffee is moderate, quotations generally have been without alteration. To-day plantation and East India sold with fair competition at full rates. Costa Rica, however, went lower.

TEA.—(From Messrs. Layton and Co.'s Indian Tea Circular).—"The position and prospects of the Indian article are as favourable as those of China tea are the reverse, and although prices have temporarily given way, especially for fine descriptions, we cannot believe that any great fall in value will be of long duration. Finest descriptions have fallen 4d. to 5d. from the highest point, good medium to fine pekoe and broken pekoe 2d. to 3d., and the lower grades fully 1d.; some recovery is, however, already noticeable, the public sales being lighter this week. A rather unfavourable feature with regard to some tea of fine make and appearance, from Assam and Cachar, is the inferior quality in the cup, and many growers and importers are surprised at the low prices such have realised here; it would be well if Calcutta buyers were to take the liquors into consideration to the same extent as the trade in London invariably do."

SUGAR without alteration. 1,000 bags low brown China and 200 tons Palmyra jagghery, to arrive, at 15s., and some old cane on the spot at 15s. Sales of West India only 102 casks.

COFFEE.—The good and fine qualities of plantations Ceylon sold well at valuations. 381 casks 167 barrels and bags sold—middling, 85s. to 89s.; good middling to fine, 90s. 6d. to 98s.; bold, 102s. 6d. to 114s.; 124 cases 1,147 bags East India—medium, 80s. 6d. to 80s.; bold, 91s. to 96s.; small in proportion; 3,478 bags foreign only part sold. Costa Rica at previous rates to 2s. decline; ordinary to fine ordinary greenish, 59s. to 64s. 6d.; grayish to coloury, 72s. 6d. to 83s. 6d.; Guatemala, 54s. to 61s. 6d. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Large sales at stiffer rates. Singapore white, 7½d. to 7¾d.; black, 5 15-16d. to 6d.; Penang, 5¼d. to 5½d.

SALTPETRE.—Further business for arrival, and the market very firm.

JUTE.—Calcutta telegrams gave entries for August as 116,000 bales, of which 87,000 bales were by canal. The sales for the fortnight are estimated at 50,000 bales afloat and 10,000 bales in dock, ex quay, &c.

COTTON.—A firm market with a fair amount of business doing. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Tinnevely, at 5½d.; Western, at 4 9-16d. to 4 11-16d.; Sind, at 4 3-16d.; and Bengal at 4 15-16d. per lb. Forward delivery—American, June-July, 6 11-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—With less offering the tone of the market has been firmer, and all the better qualities have sold at full prices compared with last week's rates, while inferior descriptions barely maintain their value. The imports from Assam and Darjeeling are chiefly of excellent quality. The auctions have comprised 7,900 packages.

COFFEE.—Plantations Ceylon went at yesterday's rates, excepting for low qualities, which sold easier. 187 casks, 55 barrels and bags brought 79s. to 89s. for low middling to middling coloury; 90s. to 95s. for good to fine middling; and 100s. to 106s. for bold; 153 half bales Mocha sold at 112s. 6d.

RICE.—The Brokers' Association weekly circular reports that continued heavy arrivals have tended to flatten the market, and coast cargoes have declined in some instances 1½d. per cwt. To-day one of Rangoon sold at 8s. per cwt. for the Continent.

SPICES.—Business done in Singapore white pepper at 7¾d. and black at 6d. Pimento dearer, some parcels fine sold at 5½d. per lb. Sago in demand at better prices.

HEMP.—Business done in Manila to arrive at 47.

COTTON.—We have to report an active market at full prices on the spot, and about ¼d. advance for American futures. Sales about 4,000 bales, including Tinnevely, at 5 7-16d. to 5½d.; Western, at 4 7-16d. to 4¾d.; and Bengal, at 4½d. to 5½d. per lb. For arrival—Tinnevely, August-October, Cape and Canal, 5½d. for fully good fair g.f.c.; 5 5-16d. for good fair. Forward delivery—American, September, 7 5-16d. to 7¾d.; November-January, 6 19-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

DISCOVERY OF AN OLD INDIAN MS.—The remains of a very old manuscript have been found near Bakshali, in the Mardan Tahsil, in the Peshawur district. The discovery, it is stated in the Civil and Military Gazette, was thus made. There are some mounds on the west side of the Mardan and Bakshali road, which are believed to be the remains of a former village, but little is known for certain respecting them. It was while digging in a ruined stone enclosure on one of these mounds that this ancient papyrus manuscript was found. At the same place were found a triangular-shaped stone "diwa," a soapstone pencil, and a large-sized "lotah" of baked clay with a perforated bottom. Unfortunately much of this valuable and curious MS. was destroyed by the ignorant finder in removing it from the spot where it lay between the stones. The remains are described as being like dry tinder. The character, however, in some of the pages is clear, and resembles Peakrit, and it is to be hoped that when it reaches Lahore, to which place it is to be sent, it may be deciphered.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenæum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chains of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopædia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

The "Times."—"A remarkable work. . . . Shows more impressively than probably any other kind of publication could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. . . . It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE. No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.
"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the Field for such help as is afforded by its pages."

KIRKMAN AND SON, ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.

3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided,
thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harps corded and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

KIRKMAN AND SON

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines when I administered to him five

will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

MONDAY, SEPT. 19, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 30.; Madras and Allahabad, August 28; Calcutta, August 27.

THE report on the state of the weather for the week ending the 30th ult states that the rainfall of Western India has, on the whole, been moderate in quantity, but very unequally distributed. On the 21st ult., along the coast from Cochin to Surat the fall was moderately heavy at a few widely separated places, but very light at the intermediate stations. During the next four days there was little or no rain between Surat and Ratnagiri; but the fall was heavy to southward, every place, except Calicut, having reported a total of more than five inches in the four days. On the 19th ult. there was a break along the coast of the Konkan, and also on the Malabar coast as far as Cochin. On the 20th ult. the break along the Konkan only extended as far as Karwar, moderately heavy rain being reported from that station, and also from the Malabar coast. Within the line of the Ghats, from Belgaum to Puna, in the week ending with the 22nd ult., the rain was continuous, but light. Farther inland, along the dry zone, there were moderate rain in the course of the week, Bellary and Bangalore having reported a quarter of an inch and half an inch respectively on the 19th and 20th ult., and Sholapur about an inch in three days. In Nasik the fall was light, showers only being reported from Malegaon and the neighbourhood. In Eastern Khandesh the quantity registered was, on the whole, an average one, a total of about two inches being recorded at several places. In the north of the Central Provinces rain continued to fall steadily; but in the centre and west a break set in on the 16th ult. In Berar the weather was moderately fine. In Central India the fall was continuous, and especially heavy on one or more days. In Rajputana the break of the previous week continued until the 18th ult., after which day heavy rain fell at Ajmir, Nussersabad, and Jeypur. In Kathiawar the rain was light; but in all the rest of Guzerat there was heavy rain on four consecutive days. There was a break at Surat after the 22nd ult. The barometer was fairly steady up to the 25th ult., and the accompanying weather was much the same as that of the previous week. On the 26th ult. the barometer began to rise everywhere, and still rising at the departure of the mail, giving a promise of finer weather in the greater portion of the Presidency. The atmospheric pressure appeared more uniform than it had been since the beginning of the month, and there was consequently a greater probability of rain in the Eastern districts.

THE health report for the same week states that cholera continues to cause a great number of deaths in two large divisions of the Bombay Presidency—namely, Guzerat, between Ahmedabad and Surat, and the Deccan districts of Khandesh, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, and Puna. In the weekly statement 1,020 deaths from cholera are reported from different districts, and in one or two cases it is merely stated that there is slight cholera, without any figures being given. In Khandesh there was cholera in fourteen talukas, and in the course of the week 962 cases and 371 deaths were reported. In the Sholapur collectorate there were 439 cases and 217 deaths; in Ahmednagar district, 509 cases and 192 deaths, of which 24 cases and 15 deaths occurred in Ahmednagar city; and in Surat (five talukas), 212 cases and 108 deaths. Baroda city is credited with eighty-five cases and fourteen deaths; Ahmedabad, with twenty-six case and fourteen deaths; Ankleswar, with three cases and one death; Hansot, with two cases, both fatal; and Bassein and Kalyan, with eight cases and one death. In Puna city there were ten, and in the Haveli and Bhimthadi talukas thirty-three deaths. Cholera is reported from several talukas in the Nasik district and from Bijapur (Kaladgi), but in neither case are any figures given. In Bombay the disease continues within about the same limits, the number of deaths last week being twenty-two.

THE Times Calcutta correspondent gives us further and more encouraging reports from Mysor, up to date, Sept. 18:—"Latest accounts from Mysor are not discouraging. Prices are easy and some little rain has fallen throughout the province, but more is wanted."

THE official Afghan telegram dated Simla, Sept. 12, was for once actually sensational. His Excellency the Viceroy telegraphed:—

"St. John reports from Khojak, 12th, that Ameer camped 10th, at Band-i-Lakireh, eight miles E.S.E. of Kandahar; firing heard in direction of Kandahar to noon on 10th, and from morning to 4 p.m. 11th. Access to Kandahar closed."

BUT Lord Ripon, having performed this tour de force, appears to have been frightened at the indiscretion he had committed in being so unusually communicative. For four days not a word more was heard from his Excellency by the British public. The Indian papers have been disputing as to whether the Viceroy has or has not been preserving pheasants at Naskunda. So perhaps his Excellency during these four days had gone on a journey to Narkunda, or was pursuing pheasants; or, peradventure, he was sleeping. At any rate, the British public looked in vain for some further information regarding the exciting intelligence about the "firing in the direction of Kandahar." There was no voice, nor any that answered. And at length it dawned on the public what was meant by the ominous words "access to Kandahar closed." Masterly inactivity has sealed Afghanistan against us.

At last, on the 16th, the oracle again spoke; but this time it was in mysterious accents. Telegraphing on the 15th, the Viceroy says:—"Situation at Kandahar reported unchanged up to 13th, Ayub said to be fearing mutiny of Cabul troops." When compared with the preceding telegram, the lack of consecutiveness is simply startling. Does "situation reported unchanged up to 13th," mean that the firing in the direction of Kandahar had gone on continuously from the 10th to the 13th?—or does it only mean that the fact of "access to Kandahar closed" had remained unchanged? As to "Ayub fearing mutiny of Cabul troops," that is what we have been told of him ever since he had any Cabuli troops to mutiny. What we all should have liked to know is, what was the meaning, and what the result, of the firing in the direction of Kandahar heard on the 10th and the 11th? It is almost incredible, even in these times of the apotheosis of masterly inactivity, that the country should be so efficiently closed against us and our emissaries, that Lord Ripon has been able to hear nothing further about the firing. Also, the public would like to know how far it is still the inexorable fact, that our access to Kandahar is closed.

NEITHER of the above points is cleared up in the latest official telegrams which were despatched by the Viceroy on the 17th and 18th respectively. The telegram of the 17th says:—

"Following from St. John, Khojak, 16th.—'No general engagement yet. Ameer said to offer battle daily, but Ayub will not leave his position. Cabuli troops in city deserting in small parties.'"

"From Viceroy, Sept. 18.—St. John reports to 16th. Daily cavalry skirmishes take place without important result."

As usual of late, we get from the Times correspondents our clearest information about the state of affairs. The Khojak correspondent is presumably with Colonel St. John, and in the confidence of the Government. This week he does a valuable service, both to the English public and to the Government, by announcing the preparations that are being made for the retention of the British garrison in the Khojak Pass during the winter, "should circumstances at Kandahar render it advisable," which will certainly be the case. It is perhaps as well that this important announcement should come, in the first place, from the Times correspondent, rather than direct from the Viceroy; we should probably have had a howl from the Radicals.

"We have received news from Kandahar to the 15th inst. Up to that day, beyond insignificant daily cavalry skirmishes, no fighting had taken place between the two armies, which now face each other at a distance of four miles. Ayub holds all the villages outside the town to a distance of two miles, and has disposed his Kandahari and Herati troops in those to the east and south. The Ameer is encamped under the hills to the south east, between the two roads leading from the city to Chaman. His inaction is inexplicable. He obtains no accession of strength, while recruits continue to come in to Ayub, excited by reports, true or false, of the ill-treatment of Durani villagers by the Ameer's Ghilzais. Ayub is, moreover, gaining time to strengthen his position artificially; indeed, it is said that the Ameer is now convinced that he should have attacked at once, and has in consequence disgraced Fathi Khan Achakzai, a Durani chief, who advised delay and whose fidelity is open to doubt. The main point in the Ameer's favour is the mutinous state of the Cabuli regiments who joined Ayub after Karez-i-Atta. They are still armed and in the city, which they are not permitted to leave for fear of their deserting to their old master. All is profoundly quiet within our borders. Orders have been issued to make preparations for the retention of the present garrison during the winter, should circumstances at Kandahar render it advisable."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times gives some useful and interesting comments on the meagre accounts from the Khojak, as well as some valuable notes of what is going on in other parts of Afghanistan. His telegram is dated September 18, and runs thus:—

"The interest of the situation in Afghanistan again centres at Kandahar, where the Ameer and Ayub are now face to face, and whence the news of a general and decisive engagement is hourly expected. Some cavalry skirmishes and artillery duels appear to have taken place, and it is said that Abdur Rahman offers battle daily, but for some reason unknown to us here Ayub had not accepted the challenge up to the date of the latest advices. All the Ameer's measures appear to have been excellent, and his choice of a position shows his reputation for generalship to be well deserved. He commands, not only the road to Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Cabul, but also that towards Chaman and the British outposts, so that he has two lines to retreat upon in case of a disaster; while a force under Abdur Kudus Khan which has been detached to the Hazara country, will be available to cut off Ayub from Herat should victory declare itself for the Cabul troops. There are no exact details as to the strength of the two armies, but probably their numbers are about equal, the advantage in this respect, if any, being on Abdur Rahman's side. The Cabuli soldiers in Kandahar continue to desert in small parties to the Ameer, and such of the Barakzais as are not actually with Ayub are now said to be joining his rival. Abdur Rahman is evidently awakening to the necessity of conciliating the populace. It is announced that he pays the full price for all supplies and compensates the villagers for damage to their property. He has written to the Indian Government that he is convinced he cannot hold the Kandahar province unless he succeeds in making himself popular, and that, therefore, he intends to do everything to win the affection of the people. Thus far, then, chances would appear to be in favour of the Ameer; but it must be remembered that there is little news from Ayub's camp, that we know next to nothing of his intentions, of his readiness for battle, and of the state of feeling among his troops, while we do know that he has more than one able general among his followers, and that he has on his side the prestige of the victories of Karez-i-Atta and Maiwand, and the advantage—a great one among the more fanatical Afghans—of representing a cause untainted by an alliance with the hated Kafirs. Before the end of the week the neighbourhood of Kandahar will probably witness another battle, which for a time at least will decide the fate of that province, if not of Afghanistan. The news from other parts of the country is all favourable to the Ameer; his Turkestan force has taken Chor Fort, the Governor of which has retired to Herat. Abdool Kudus Khan has so far met with no important opposition. Mean Gul, Akhond of Swat, who lately visited Cabul, is said to have been so delighted with his reception that he is using all his influence in Abdur Rahman's behalf, and has collected a force to assist him. Mahomed Jan is still imprisoned at Cabul. It is stated that the charge against him is of conspiracy for the restoration of Yakoub. The Ameer's Envoy is still at Simla, and it is not unlikely that, in the event of the Ameer's victory, he will remain there as permanent representative with the Indian Government, while a native envoy may be deputed as permanent British Resident at Cabul; but these arrangements are still uncertain."

MORE frontier expeditions—the price we pay for the privilege of being governed in India on peace-at-any-price principles. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs, under date of Sept. 18:—"It seems possible that an expedition may be sent next winter against the Abuzais, another frontier tribe, who have lately been giving trouble. The force to be employed will consist of about 4,000 men, under General Kennedy."

AND more compromises. With the above intelligence we are also told that the rumour that the Mahsud Waziris have surrendered Mashah, the leader of the raids on Tonk, is confirmed. Yarik, another chief, was about to be given up, but he is ill and said to be dying; so the tribe have sent in four other chiefs, who are to be liable to imprisonment should he recover and not be surrendered.

THE Invalide Russe of the 16th inst. publishes a telegram from Krasnovodsk, dated 13th inst., announcing that the rails on the Trans-Caspian military railway have now been laid as far as the terminal point at Kyzil Arvat. Already we hear of Russian commerce following close on the heels of Russian conquest. A Reuter's telegram, dated St. Petersburg, Sept. 16, says that the first caravan for the Akkal Tekke territory, recently annexed by Russia, which was despatched by a Moscow merchant named Konoshin, has been obliged to stop at Krasnovodsk in order to obtain the permission of the military authorities to transfer the goods conveyed by the caravan to the Trans-Caspian Railway.

WE learn from the Times telegram from Calcutta, dated Sept. 18, that steps are about to be taken for the purpose of tracing the frontier between Munnipore and Burma, and a party will start next month under Colonel Johnston, the political agent at Munnipore, with an escort of 400 native infantry. This frontier line was settled years ago, but has never yet been properly demarcated.

WE noticed above a rumour that His Excellency the Viceroy had been preserving pheasants in Narkunda, though he refused assent to the Bombay Game Preservation Bill. It is now stated, apparently on authority, that "the Government of India cannot preserve pheasants at Narkunda, because Narkunda is in native territory." The Calcutta telegram of Sept. 18 in the Times says:—

"The Viceroy will leave Simla on Oct. 2 for a shooting expedition at Narkunda, a place about forty miles distant. He will be absent about a fortnight and will probably remain another fortnight at Simla after his return. He will leave the hills about Nov. 1 and proceed on a tour in Rajputana, halting for about a week at Agra. He is expected to arrive in Calcutta early in December, and will visit Burma about Christmas or the new year."

A LAHORE paper says:—"We believe that it is quite settled that the Hon. H. S. Cunningham succeeds Mr. Whitley Stokes as legal member of Council, and that General Cadell succeeded General Hutchinson as inspector general of Military Works."

THE last Gazette of India contains a notification that the Viceroy has conferred the title of "Maharaja" on the young Maharaj-Kumar, the heir and successor of the late Maharaja of Burdwan. This fortunate young nobleman has succeeded to an estate which probably pays the highest amount of land-tax payable by any one estate in the world. The assessment on the Burdwan estate amounts, we believe, to about £300,000 per annum, so that the Maharaja of Burdwan pays nearly a thousand pounds a day to the revenues of the Indian Empire. We are glad to hear that the Maharaja is a young nobleman of great promise and considerable attainments, well qualified to adorn the position he will be called on to fill as one of the foremost nobles of the British Indian Empire.

THE correspondent of an Indian paper writing from Ispahan says, "English influence even in Southern Persia seems to be nil, while the Russian name is known and respected in remote villages of Fars. Here in Ispaham one cannot help being conscious of the shadow of Russian power." Two years ago, on the other hand, in June, 1879, our Minister at Teheran was able to telegraph to Lord Salisbury to say that "the results of our recent policy in Afghanistan have brought about the most beneficial result here. At this moment our influence predominates at Tabriz, which, from its geographical position, had always been under Russian influence."

THE report on Indian railways for the year 1880-81, has been published this week. The figures are in all respects satisfactory; we give elsewhere a useful analysis of them, which appears in to-day's Times.

THE Congress of Orientalists met at Berlin, in the aula of the Royal University, on Sept. 12. The most interesting address as yet delivered is that by Professor Max Müller.

AN order has been sent to England by the Maharaja of Travancore for the coining of a number of gold pieces of the value of half-a-sovereign, for circulation in Travancore, and for the identification of the present reign. The Pioneer Mail, from which this information is taken, states that one side of the coin will bear the image and superscription of the present Maharaja, while the obverse will bear the value and designation of the coin.

FOR the first three months of the current financial year the revenue from salt in India has amounted to Rs.1,84,31,000. During the corresponding period of last year the revenue from the same source was Rs.1,83,35,000; an increase of Rs.1,96,000 is therefore observable in comparing the first quarter of this financial year with that of the preceding.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made at the India-office for the early issue of a new Royal Warrant, modifying the terms of service for officers of the Local Indian Army and Staff Corps, in accordance with the recent decision of the Secretary of State for India in Council. Some little time must, however, elapse before the document can be submitted to her Majesty for her approval and signature, as the draft copies have to be revised by the authorities in India.

WE understand that since his arrival in India the Marquis of Ripon has had under consideration a scheme for recognising the services of the officers and men of volunteer corps now serving under the Government of India, and that steps are about to be taken for extending to the Indian volunteers similar privileges to those which have been for some time granted to the members of the force in Great Britain by the payment to them of a capitulation allowance, under certain prescribed rules, which are in process of preparation.

WE gladly call attention to a new departure in the history of Indian Art; and sincerely hope that the event may indicate the beginning of a re-awakening of vigorous artistic life in India. Four ex-students of the Government School of Art at Calcutta have set up an Art Studio in that city, and advertise themselves as ready to execute theatrical scene-painting, portraits, landscapes, &c., and all kinds of decorative and lithographic work and wood-engraving. Mr. Locke, the well-known principal of the Calcutta School of Art, bears witness, in a cordial testimonial appended to their advertisement, to their being "within fair limits quite competent to carry out such work as their prospectus solicits;" he promises his hearty recommendation, and hopes for their undertaking the full success he thinks it deserves. The names of these enterprising artists are Babus Navakumar Biswas, Phani Bhusan Sen, Krishna Chandra Pal, Jogendranath Mukhopadhyay. These names show that the owners are gentlemen of high caste, the last being of course a Brahman of the highest (or Kulin) rank, whilst the others must be Kayasthas of high social position. Their advertisement is dated from 185, Bowbazar-street, Calcutta, and appears in the Indian Mirror and other leading native papers. Their prospectus is addressed to "the nobility and gentry of the land;" and in it they speak of the interest which the highest classes in Bengal have taken in the growth and spread of Fine Art in the country, as well as "the material encouragement they have afforded to Art Students." The Maharaja Jotindra Mohan Tagore, C.S.I., of Calcutta, has always been, like his illustrious ancestors, warmly interested in the cause of Art; whilst the Maharaja's brother, the Raja Saurindra Mohan Tagore, C.I.E., is known throughout the civilised world as one of its most learned musicians. We are glad to find that the rest of the magnates of Bengal and Upper India are following their worthy example.

IN another column we reproduce a review of one of the Raja Saurindra Mohan Tagore's numerous works on the theory of Hindu music.

IN Mr. Childers's new Monthly Army List the names of two generals in the British army are omitted; and, after the manner of Mr. Childers, the two omitted are exactly the two whom it was least advisable to omit. They are, his Highness the Maharaja Sindia of Gwalior and his Highness the Maharaja of Kashmir. These two great feudatory princes were made generals in the army, as well as councillors of the empire, on the occasion of the proclamation of her Majesty as Empress of India, on Jan. 1, 1877. They are both soldiers born and bred—Sindia's love of soldiering amounts to a passion; they are both loyal to the empire and proud of their rank in its army; they are both certain to be extremely sensitive in regard to an omission of this kind. If there be any good reason for the omission it ought to be published in the fullest and most authoritative manner possible, and with every regard to the feelings and dignity of the princes concerned. If it was an accident, we trust Lord Hartington will insist on the most ample and speedy reparation being made. And if, lastly, it was only one more instance of that sheer "cussedness" that appears to have actuated so many of Mr. Childers's "reforms,"—and we fear this is the most probable solution of the mystery—why, then, we suppose, Kashmir and Sindia must even grin and bear it, as so many of the rest of us have to do. In all discussions on army matters Mr. Childers has the best of the argument, for is he not backed by the Gladstonian dictatorship?—and that is better than any argument.

THE operations in the dockyards connected with the refitting of the Indian troopships to be employed during the coming trooping season have now been completed. We learn that the dockyard establishments will, in consequence, be reduced by about 600 men.

THE Times Correspondent at the German manoeuvres writes:—

"It is needless to say that General Sir Frederick Roberts, whom the Emperor has treated with special distinction, has been the cynosure of neighbouring eyes, and many have been the inquiries as to which of the multi-uniformed suite of his majesty was the man who made the famous march from Cabul to Kandahar. The Crown Princess, who followed the manoeuvres on horseback, was frequently at the side of Sir Frederick Roberts, who, as I have already told you, has conceived a very high opinion of German troops, especially the infantry."

KING KALAKUA and his suite, Col. C. H. Judd and Major Macfarlane, left Liverpool for New York last week in the White Star steamer Celtic. Special accommodation has been made for the king, a tastefully fitted-up room on the spar deck amidships being reserved as a retiring room, his sleeping apartment being one of the principal saloon state rooms. A large number of persons assembled on the landing stage to witness the departure of the tender for the Celtic. The royal standard of Honolulu was displayed on the mainmasthead of the steamer, which is due at New York on Friday week. The king will then proceed to San Francisco via the Union Pacific Railway, and thence to his own dominions.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLAN AND Co. announce for early publication a work on the Sandwich Islands, by Capt. H. Walley Nicholson entitled "From Sword to Share; or, a Fortune in Five Years in Hawaii." The book will be illustrated with portrait of King Halakua and the Royal Family, and will have special interest on account of the King's recent visit to this country.

LAST year the trade in Indian wheat increased to a very considerable extent, the quantity exported from Bombay alone amounting to 195,000 tons, equal to 300,000 steamer tons, or enough to load 150 steamers of 2,000 tons each. The acreage under wheat has been nearly trebled within the last six years, having increased, when compared with last year, by some 221,000 acres. Unfortunately, the recent returns published by the Registrar-General show that the results of the harvest this year have not been such as could be wished. Notwithstanding the increase in the acreage under wheat, there is not a proportionate increase in the quantity of wheat yielded per acre; but, on the contrary, a decided decrease, as much as 265,000 bushels, the average of the present year being only 9.84 bushels to the acre, whereas last year it was 18.29 bushels to the acre. This is the lowest yield per acre since the year 1879, when the harvest was unexceptionally bad. The lack of rain in many districts just at the season when it was most wanted is probably the chief cause of the decrease, the crops in various parts of the country having been seriously affected by the drought.

THE directors of the Tambracherry Estates and Wynaad Gold Mining Company report that they have resolved to consider the sum of £20,000 in the light of profit on the sale of the portion of land disposed of to the Cootacovil Gold Mining Company (Limited). Out of this sum they recommend a dividend of 10 per cent. on the capital of the company, which will absorb £16,000, and to appropriate the remainder to cover preliminary expenses. We are not aware that there is any considerable section of the public dying to invest in the shares of this company, but if there be, that section would probably like to get a little more information about these "preliminary expenses" to which the direction now proposes, with so much nonchalance, to devote £4,000—a sum equal to 2½ per cent. on the capital of the company!

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week:—Mr. F. R. Blewitt, late collector Inland Customs; Staff Surg. W. Algeo, H.M.S. Woodlark.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

THE report on railways in India for the year 1880-81 has been published as a parliamentary paper. Mr. Juland Danvers, Government Director of Indian Railway Companies and Secretary of the Public Works Department at the India-office, has, as usual, drawn up this report, which is dated India-office, June 27. We extract the following summary:—

"During the year 1880 a greater extent of railway has been opened for traffic than in any previous year since the commencement of operations. Up to Dec. 31 a length of 838 miles was added to the 8,487 miles open on Jan. 1, and 266 miles more were finished before the close of the official year 1880-81. The whole extent now completed is 9,591 miles, of which 6,906½ are constructed with the 5ft. 6in. gauge, 2,334½ with the metre gauge, 27¼ with a 4ft., and 56¾ with a 2ft. 6in. gauge; 6,033½ miles have been constructed and are worked by companies, 2,931¾ are State lands, 296¾ miles are within native States. The principal additions made are lines in connection with the frontier towards Peshawar in the north and Quetta in the south. The line to the former place will be completed within a few months. No steps have been taken for continuing the line beyond Sibi to Quetta, but a branch has been taken to the foot of the Bolan Pass. These lines have proved to be most useful during the operations of withdrawing the troops from Afghanistan, and the officers who conducted the traffic arrangements have received the thanks of the Government for the excellent manner in which they performed their arduous duties. The capital which has been embarked in railways in India now amounts to upwards of £129,000,000. During the year under review, a sum of £6,374,353 was expended. Of this, £5,051,638 was laid out on State and Provincial lines, £628,273 on lines in native States, £610,973 on guaranteed lines, and £83,469 on the East Indian. The whole capital above stated is thus divided—viz., £30,970,407 on the East Indian, £66,518,261 on the guarantee lines, £29,589,157 on State lines, and £2,021,139 on lines in native States. The average cost per mile taking broad and narrow gauge lines together is £13,844. In 1870 the average cost was £16,445. The net receipts on the total amount of capital expended were at the rate of 4.11s. per cent. per annum, compared with 4.7s. of the previous year. The guaranteed lines, including the East Indian, yielded 5.43 per cent; the State lines 2 per cent. With regard to the latter, it is noticed that a large extent has only just been opened and is scarcely finished; also that those on the frontier are lines constructed more for military than for commercial purposes; but that others which have been opened sufficiently long to develop a traffic have yielded at the rate of 4.23, 4.50, and 6.56 per cent. The total net revenue derived from all the railways was £5,907,422, the gross receipts having been £12,099,593, and the expenses £6,192,171. The East Indian Railway earned a net revenue of £2,635,831, and after paying all the charges for the annuity, for interest on debentures and on Government advances of capital, showed a surplus profit (calculated at the rate of 1s. 7½d. the rupee) of £757,086, of which four-fifths—viz., £605,669—went to the Government, and one-fifth—viz., £151,417—to the company. The net receipts from the guaranteed companies amounted to £2,662,213, being £600,966 less than the guaranteed interest; so that, taking the guaranteed and the East Indian lines together, the advances by Government for guaranteed interest were covered by the receipts. Under the new contract with the East Indian Railway Company, the Government received £223,514 more than they would have been entitled to, as surplus profits under the old. The expenses of working and maintenance amounted to £6,192,171, compared with £5,858,512 of the previous year. The percentage of expenditure to gross receipts was 51.13, compared with 52.16 of the year 1879. The guaranteed lines were worked at an average of 56.60 per cent., the State lines of 72.02 of gross receipts. The East Indian was as low as 33.04, and the Bombay and Borada and Eastern Bengal were 42.57 and 42.85 respectively. The aggregate quantity of goods carried on all the lines amounted to 9,319,421 tons compared with 7,876,766 of the previous year. The amount received for the conveyance of the same was £7,671,709 compared with £7,274,403. The number of passengers increased from 43,144,608 in 1879 to 48,066,660. The average number per mile was 5.490, compared with 5.140, and the amount paid by passengers was £3,802,388, compared with £3,413,910. The shipments of railway material from this country to India during the year have amounted to 275,627 tons, valued at £2,296,563, the freight for which was £422,463. Besides the 145,041 tons of coal, 594 of coke and 8,845 of patent fuel were sent out. The coal consumed on the lines amounted to 173,340 tons of English or Australian coal, 330,875 tons of Indian coal, 7,077 tons of coke, 8,383 tons of patent fuel, and 183,634 tons of wood. The number of persons employed in working and maintaining the line was, on Sep. 30, 155,734, compared with 142,199 in the previous year. More than 95 per cent. were natives, 2,385 were Eurasians, and 2,441 Europeans. The training of natives for the position of foreman mechanics and drivers continues, and success has attended the efforts hitherto made to qualify them for these duties. Some advance has also been made with respect to the education, in a suitable climate, on high ground, of the children of the European staff. The volunteers formed from the different classes of Europeans continue to do good service, and satisfactory reports on their efficiency have been given. The chief articles of commerce in which there has been increased traffic were coal, cotton, hides, jagree, and sugar, tea, rice, salt, seeds, piece goods, tobacco. That the growth which, of late years, has taken place in the foreign trade of India is due in a large measure to the influence of railway communication, cannot be doubted. We have seen the quantity of merchandise, exclusive of minerals, conveyed by railways increase from 2,633,687 tons in 1870, when the mileage was 4,775, to 9,319,421 tons in 1880, when 9,325 miles were open. In the same period, the value of exports, as will be seen by the subjoined table, has increased from £55,336,186 to £74,517,957, and of imports from £34,459,119 to £50,278,875. Going back twenty years, when only 840 miles of railway were open, the total value of imports and exports (exclusive of treasure) was £56,464,321. Last year it was £124,796,832.

"It is also fair to conclude that the same influence has been at work in connection with certain sources of revenue which have yielded improved returns. The following table shows that the land revenue, without any addition to territory, increased from £18,508,991 in 1860-61 to £20,622,823 in 1870-71, and to £22,463,548 in 1879-80. Some of this increase is due, no doubt, to the effects of irrigation, which, last year, helped to contribute £602,398. In future years the receipts from this source will be shown separately. The development of the salt revenue is also satisfactory. It should be remarked that, within the last period—viz., between 1875 and 1879, the duty has been reduced in Bengal from 3.4 rupees to 2.14 rupees, and has been raised in Madras and Bombay from 1.6 rupee and 1.8 rupee respectively to 2.8 rupees. From £3,805,124 in 1860, it rose to £6,106,280 in 1870, and to £7,266,413 in 1879-80.

"Thus it has been shown that the railways are yearly becoming more and more a source of profit to the State, and that, as they grow in extent, they continue to advance the commerce, civilisation, and general prosperity of the country.

"The aggregate amount of earnings from canals for the year 1879-80, after paying the working expenses, was £882,414, being at the rate of £7.9 per cent., on the capital outlay of £17,696,348. The results thus arrived at are, as in the case of the railways, exclusive of the charge for interest on the capital expenditure, which, in the accounts, is usually deducted from the receipts before they are accepted as net earnings. The present purpose is to show their actual earnings during the year, and not their financial position according to the system of accounts which has been adopted for the purpose of exhibiting, very properly, their losses and gains from the commencement. In the Madras Presidency, the receipts were at the rate of 28.3 per cent.; in the North West Provinces, which includes the Ganges and grand canals, they were £5.03, and in the Punjab 3.9 per cent.; but on the Bengal canals they were only at the rate of .4, and in Bombay there was a loss at the rate of £1.2 per cent.

Commenting on the above, the Times says:—

"The report on Indian railways, a summary of which we publish, brings fresh proof of the material advance of the country. The railways of India are no longer to be counted among the ruinously unproductive public works. They yield now a fair and an increasing revenue. The whole capital expended on them has been upwards of £129,000,000. The net receipts for the year 1880-81 have been at the rate of £4 11s. per cent., as against the £4 7s. per cent. of the year before. When we look closely at the figures of the report, the case is even more favourable. The old-established lines, constructed under the guarantee system, which have had time to develop their traffic, yield an average return of 5.43 per cent. on the capital expenditure. The rate on the whole railway system is reduced by the lower returns on the new lines, and especially on the frontier lines, which have been constructed more for military than commercial purposes. The returns on these amount to only 2 per cent. Under the guaranteed lines the East Indian Railway is still included. The terms on which it has been taken over by the State, favourable as they were to the proprietors, have been to the advantage of the State too. Under the new contract the Indian Government has received £223,514 more than it would have been entitled to as surplus profits under the old. It is by the help of the East Indian Railway that the guaranteed lines are shown to have been worked without loss to the Government. The guaranteed interest on the rest of them has been £600,966 in excess of the receipts; but the deficiency is a little more than made up by the £605,669 of net profit from the East Indian Railway. But it is on the indirect returns that the case in favour of the Indian railways is rested. The revenue of India, under several of the most important headings, has grown with the growth of the railways. The land revenue, which stood at £18,508,991 in 1860-1861, when 840 miles of railway were open, had advanced in 1865-1866 to £20,473,897 concurrently with an advance to 3,373 in railway mileage. In the salt revenue the improvement has been still greater. This produced in 1860-61 a sum of £3,805,124. In 1865-66 it produced £5,342,149. The list is continued for several quinquennial periods, and with similar results in each. Twenty years ago, at the date when only 840 miles of railway were open, the total value of imports and exports was £56,464,321. Now, with 9,325 miles of railway open, it amounts to £124,796,832. The conclusion of the Government Director, Mr. Juland Danvers, on the whole case is that railways are yearly becoming more and more a profit to the State, and that as they grow in extent they continue to advance the commerce, civilisation, and general prosperity of the country. The fact remains that the Indian railways, after all said, do not yet pay their way in the ordinary sense of the phrase. This may be explained and excused, but we should prefer to see a really clean balance-sheet, which needed neither excuse nor explanation. Until this is shown the Indian railway system cannot be pronounced financially successful. Indirect profits, it must be remembered, are very questionable things. The capital which has been sunk in railways is so much taken from the productive capital of India. It matters nothing whether the actual sum has been raised in India or whether it is India which guarantees the interest upon a capital sum which has been raised elsewhere. It is on India in either case that the loss falls if the money is unsoundly employed. We admit very fully the necessity of railways for India. The means of carriage they afford is an advantage which India could not do without. But as long as the Indian railways do not bring in a yearly sum at least equal to their cost, arrears of loss included, we must rest their defence upon other than financial reasons. They are useful for military purposes; they afford the means of bringing effectual help in case of famine; there are a dozen good reasons to be found for them, any one of them, perhaps, conclusive. But we must reserve our note of triumph over their financial position until the time comes when their financial position is sounder than it can as yet be shown to be. The old guarantee system, which was given up just twelve years ago, seems now to have been adopted afresh in a slightly altered form. Under the old system the Indian Government supplied not the capital for the railways, but interest at 5 per cent. on private capital, raised for the most part in this country. The objections to this are obvious. The income was secure in any case, however wastefully the capital might prove to have been misapplied. It is safe to say that some of the lines constructed under the guarantee system will entail a heavy loss to the Indian exchequer for an indefinite time to come. They stand at a good premium nevertheless. Their 5 per cent. will be forthcoming, and whether it is earned by the railway or is made up by the Indian Government is a matter of indifference to the proprietors. Next the state took in hand the construction of the railways, and found the capital itself. The results of the change are not brilliant. The new lines yield, as we have seen, a bare 2 per cent. on money borrowed at about twice that rate. The latest arrangement of all has been made with a view of once more attracting private capital to Indian railways. The time is said to be favourable for this, and there is every prospect that the lines will yield profits before very long. Meanwhile, however, the profits are to be guaranteed as before, but at 4 instead of 5 per cent. The next step, we suppose, will be a further diminution of the guarantee, until at last it disappears altogether and English or native capital is invested in Indian railways at its own sole risk, as in strict theory it ought to be."

OBITUARY OF THE WEEK.

THE Colonelcy of the 38th (South Staffordshire) Regiment is vacant by the death of General James Pattoun Sparks, C.B., which occurred a few days ago at his residence near Reynoldston, Glamorganshire, at the age of 80. He entered the army at an early age, his commission as ensign bearing date July 27, 1815, and as lieutenant July 13, 1818. The late General Sparks served on the north-east frontier of the Cape of Good Hope against the Caffres in 1817; in the expedition to Caffraria under Colonel Brereton, in 1818; in the action at Graham's Town, in 1819, and in the campaign of the same year in Caffraria under Colonel Wiltshire. He again served on the north east frontier when the Caffres invaded the colony in 1834; during the war that ensued he commanded a local corps—the Graham's Town Volunteers—with the colonial commission of lieutenant colonel. In 1848 he was sent from Jamaica to the Mosquito Coast, in consequence of the death of her Majesty's Agent and Consul General there, to attend the British interests, and received the thanks of her Majesty's Government. He served throughout the Eastern Campaign of 1854-55, except from the middle of February to the end of May, 1855, when he was sent to England on duty. He succeeded to the command of the 38th Regiment on the morning of June 18, when Lieutenant Colonel Louth was wounded; was the senior unwounded officer of the 2nd Brigade, 3rd Division, at the close of the action, and commanded it for ten days. He served in the campaign in Oudein 1858, including the capture of Lucknow; and commanded the Infantry Brigade in the action of Meeangunge. The deceased General had received the Caffre medal, the Crimean medal with three clasps for Alma, Inkerman, and Sebastopol, and the Sardinian and Turkish medals, was made an officer of the Legion of Honour, and had received the Fourth Class of the Medjidie, and the Indian medal with clasp for Lucknow. In 1857, in recognition of his distinguished services in the field, he was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He was appointed Colonel of the 95th Regiment in 1871, and on the death of General Lord Sandhurst, in 1876, was transferred to the 38th Regiment, the Colonelcy of which is now at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief.

Colonel Thomas George Glover, late of the Royal Engineers (Bengal), died suddenly at Neuenahar, in Prussia, last week, of blood poisoning. He entered the military service of the East India Company as a cadet of the Bengal Corps of Engineers in 1844, and was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in November, 1849, about which time he was appointed an assistant executive engineer in the Public Works Department of the Punjab Circle. During the Punjab campaign of 1848-49 he was actively employed, having been engaged at the first siege of Mooltan, the storming of the entrenched positions on the 9th and 12th of September, the action of Soorjkoond, the capture of the suburbs, the storming of the city, and the final surrender of the fortress. He likewise took part in the capture of the fort and garrison of Cheniote, and also in the memorable battle of Goojerat, which decided the fate of the Punjab, receiving a medal with two clasps for his services during the campaign. Soon after the pacification of the Punjab he was appointed officiating Garrison Engineer at Lahore, and at the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny he was Executive Engineer at Bhirtapore, to which office he was gazetted on Feb. 6, 1857. He succeeded in escaping to Agra, then the seat of Government in the North West Provinces, and took part in the battle fought there on July 5 of the last named year, being awarded a medal for his services. In 1858 he became captain, and on August 8, 1859, he was appointed Superintendent of the Western Jumna Canals, Punjab, with the rank of a first-class executive engineer, and was engaged in the construction of those great works of irrigation which have tended to the development and fertilisation of the northern provinces of our Indian Empire. He attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in June, 1866, and in March, 1867, was appointed a superintendent engineer of the first-class in the Department of Public Works. Finally, he resigned the Indian service, and retired with the honorary rank of colonel, on July 1, 1870. Colonel Glover was a son-in-law of the late General Charles Herbert, C.B., and a brother-in-law of Mr. Auckland Colvin, the Controller-General of Egyptian Finance.

THE TRANS-CASPIAN RAILWAY.

By the completion of the line of railway from Krasnovodsk to Kizil Arvat the Russian Government have finished the first section of the Trans-Caspian Railway, which is intended to bring the territory recently conquered from the Turcomans into direct communication with both the Caucasus and the interior of Russia. The port of Kizil Arvat has long been one of some importance, and during the eventful period of the last ten years it has played a considerable part in Russian operations in this quarter, and now, as the actual terminal point of this railway, it is not likely to sink into insignificance. From Krasnovodsk, which, after the suggestion of several alternative places, seems destined to remain the principal Russian harbour on the eastern side of the Caspian to Kizi Arvat, the distance is about 200 miles. The country through which the line passes is mostly desert, lying between the two Balkan ranges, and completely waterless, save at the few spots where wells are to be found. Of these the principal are those at Mollah Kari, Tageer, and Kayadjik. Although the scarcity of water has hitherto constituted an obstacle in the path of an army or of a caravan, it is probable that the Russian engineers are right in saying that a sufficient supply can always be procured en route for the engines, while the naphtha springs of the Caspian provided a cheap and easily obtainable fuel. It is not to be expected that the Russians will remain long content with Kizil Arvat as the terminus of their new line, especially as a brisk trade is likely to spring up with the Turcomans, and also with the towns on the northern borders of Persia. East of Kizil Arvat the difficulties of engineering are very much less than those that presented themselves west of that place, although even these were not very formidable, and have now been successfully overcome. As Russia has formally annexed the region up to Askabad, which is about the same distance from Kizil Arvat that that place is from Krasnovodsk, there will probably be no further delay than financial considerations may impose in carrying the line on to the capital of the new Trans-Caspian province. The energy shown in improving their means of communication with this new possession is in striking contrast with the indifference or sluggishness exhibited by the Russian authorities in other parts of Asia. While Tashkent remains more remote from Moscow than our possessions at the Antipodes are from London, and while the resources of Siberia are undeveloped for want of railroads and canals, the same six months have witnessed the subjection of a brave race, and the connection of their subdued territory with the main lines of communication in the empire. To pretend that this exceptional energy has not a peculiar significance would be to disregard facts; nor, although we may repeat that there is nothing unreasonable in Russia desiring to bring her latest Central Asian acquisition into direct communication with Tiflis or Derbend, can the plain fact be ignored that the first section in a line of railway which must one day connect Russia with Meshed, and possibly with Herat also, has been successfully laid down and opened for traffic. It may very well be that at some future period we shall have to recognise in this peaceful triumph of human skill a circumstance not less pregnant with important consequences to the destinies of Asiatic peoples and Powers than the fall of kingdoms and the destruction of dynasties. The hope may be indulged, however, that while many will only see in this achievement the obvious influence it must exert by simplifying the movements of armies, experience may show that it will prove to be an element conducive to the preservation of peace rather than to the provocation of its dread alternative.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

MR. EDWARD THOMAS ON THE MUGHAL REVENUES.*

IN the last number to hand of the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Mr. Edward Thomas deals finally and decisively with the controverted question of the amount of the revenue resources of the Mughal Emperors. This is a subject which Mr. Thomas has made peculiarly his own. His prolonged and exhaustive researches were suggested by some numismatic questions that arose during the progress and completion of his great work on the history and numismatology of the Pathan Kings of Delhi; and the leading results were embodied in his "Revenue Resources of the Mughal Empire" (Trubner. London. 1871.) The revenue returns arrived at by Mr. Thomas, as published in this brochure, contrasted so strikingly with the lesser totals obtained from the land in our day, that there was not wanting at that time a tendency to suspect errors in his figures and calculations; but the fuller attention that has been given to the subject among orientalists, and especially among orientalist numismatists, has steadily gone to confirm their general accuracy. Mr. Thomas, in the article now before us, deals with some recent objections. Mr. C. J. Rodgers, of Armitsan, in a paper contributed to a recent number of the Bengal Society's Journal on the Copper Coins of Akbar, entered into some speculations on the amount of the State revenue of that monarch, based upon novel interpretations of the legends on the coins he describes; and Mr. Thomas now demonstrates that those interpretations, wherever they are at variance with his returns, are erroneous:—

"Mr. Rodgers proposed to reduce by a summary process my total No. 1, of Nizam-ud-din, from £32,000,000 to £3,200,000. The data for this alteration are, unfortunately for his argument, fundamentally erroneous. He has figured two coins of Akbar, in his plates, bearing upon this division of his proof. No. 27 weighing 40 grains of copper, which he reads correctly as one damri. A second coin of a similar character No. 4, weighing 76 grains of copper, he reads incorrectly as dām, and he proposes to identify the coin as the representative of the dām or 1-40th of the rupee of Akbar's revenue system. I need scarcely follow his method of calculation whereby he seeks to justify the reduction above-named, as there is a much more simple way of disposing of the question. Tested by his own interpretation of the legend on No.

* "The Revenues of the Mughal Empire in India." By EDWARD THOMAS, F.R.S., late Bengal C.S. From the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. L., Part I. 1881.

27, the letters on No. 4 can only be read as damri, i.e., a double damri, and having nothing whatever to do with the long sought piece of the money of account. This second basis of calculation depends on the import of the word he transcribes as tanke, inscribed on the coins Nos. 1, 2, 3. The definitions of value on these pieces result in an average weight, in copper, of something over 55 grains. Mr. Rodgers thereupon proceeds to infer that as 'the total revenues of Akbar are put down by Nizam-ud-din at 640,000,000 tankes, this at the rate of 200 to the rupee would be equal to 3,200,000 rupees, or £3,200,000.' In this instance, also, the argument is founded on a palpable fallacy. There were both gold and silver tankas, which constituted the early currency of the Pathans, each of which were of the identical weight of 175 grains. But the tanke (or dāng), as I was careful to point out (p. 408, my 'Pathan Kings'), had nothing to do with the tankah. I was also able to determine that the former was the surviving equivalent of the purāna of Manu, weighing 32 ratīs, or 56 grains. In short, the dāng, which Bābar himself remarked was still used in his days to weigh 'jewels and precious stones,' and which he enters in his own table of weights as equivalent to 32 ratīs."

Mr. Thomas deals as effectively with the criticism on his results that were contained in Mr. H. G. Keene's "Turks in India." He says:—

"The main point of difference between us seems to be the relative reliance to be placed on the returns of the Ain-i-Akbari, as against those of Nizam-ud-din Ahmad. The former were avowedly progressive as new official details came in, and the grand total (in the case I examined) did not accord with, or come up to the division totals embodied in the same schedule; the method of reckoning was also, to a certain extent, arbitrary—i.e., by forty dāms to the rupee, the latter a coin only recently introduced, and whose absolute divisional money representative, or one-fortieth in copper, is still a doubtful quantity. I may add, with reference to the dām of account, that Prof. Wilson in his Glossary of Indian terms, informs us that, the forty dāms to the rupee of Akbar's time, came to be forty-six and a third under 'Alamgir and even eighty to ninety, at later periods. Whereas, on the other hand, Nizam-ud-din, a master of finance, defined his returns in Sikandari Tankas, the current coin in which the Settlement of Sikandar Lodi had been framed. Mr. Keene, at p. 9, takes objection to my estimating the rupee at two shillings, this was merely done for facility of conversion, but every available testimony goes to prove that the exchange value of the fine silver rupee was, in those days, far higher than two shillings."

THE VOYAGE OF THE SUNBEAM.

MESSRS. LONGMANS, GREEN, AND CO. have just issued a popular edition of the charming volume in which Lady Brassey described the voyage round the world which she and her husband, accompanied by their children and some friends, accomplished in the year 1876 in the steam-yacht Sunbeam. The book is profusely illustrated with woodcuts. In form it is very similar to the cheap piratical reprints of the American market; but the typography and illustrations are far better. The low price of sixpence brings it well within the reach of all classes.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As so much has lately been written regarding the great loss by exchange incurred by the Government of India on the home charges, I am induced to offer the following suggestion. I cannot, however, help thinking that it cannot be new, and that some commercial or other objection must exist unknown to myself. If so you can consign this communication to the waste-paper basket of your office. I, however, fail at the present moment to see any objection to the Indian Government being exporters of grain to England to the amount required for the home charges. The expenditure, say, of £18,000,000 yearly on Indian wheat in India would give a great stimulus to those who grow wheat in India, and at the same time supply a large quantity of wheat for the English market, the prices of which would meet the home charges. The transaction, moreover, might meet with a profit in the place of the certain loss of some £3,000,000 now annually incurred by the taxpayers of India. At all events it would save the one if it did not realise the other. Wheat is imported into England from India by private speculators with a profit, and why should not the same result occur when Government is the speculator? I have named wheat as the article, but there are many other articles of trade which obviously could be used for the same purpose.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
AN OLD INDIAN.

RACE ANTAGONISM IN INDIA.—A CAUTION TO THE LONDON PRESS.

I WAS glad to read yesterday in the Daily News the following just and telling article:—"A correspondent has called our attention to what certainly seems a case of considerable hardship. Mr. Tagore, a native member of the Civil Service of India, was nominated last April to be judge at Surat, being transferred to that place from Shikarpore. But when Mr. Tagore arrived at Surat to take up his appointment, he was informed that an English judge had been since selected, and that he was therefore superseded, and would be sent to Kanara. Surat is, we believe, a far pleasanter station, besides being the centre of a much more important district than Kanara, and Mr. Tagore not unnaturally felt aggrieved. But the only answer to his complaint which the Bombay Government would give was that the new arrangement was in the public interest, and could not be reconsidered. The curious part of the story is, however, not the refusal of the authorities to alter their decision, but their persistence in disregarding a settlement already made. Sir James Fergusson and his Council must be assumed to have had all the necessary information before them when they fixed on Mr. Tagore to be Judge of Surat, and some reasons should surely be stated to account for their having changed their minds. The semi-official version of the matter appears to admit all the facts which have been supplied to us, and attributes the cancelling of Mr. Tagore's appointment to the influence of the Chief Justice, Sir Michael Westropp. It would be a great pity if the natives of Bombay were led to think that they could not reckon on getting fair play from the Government. It has been suggested in one of the Indian papers that there is an assistant judge at Surat, and that strong objection is felt to putting an Englishman under a native. We do not believe that such can be the true reason for Mr. Tagore's abrupt removal. But, considering how important it is that competent natives should, in accordance with the terms of the Royal proclamation in 1858, be employed in the public service, and encouraged to take the necessary trouble and incur the requisite expenditure for that end, it is much to be regretted that any cause should be given them for supposing that when they have succeeded, their interests will be postponed to those of their European colleagues. The circumstances seem to require further elucidation. Of course I am writing, as the able journal is, in ignorance of all the facts, but I do not think we can be far wrong as to the significance of what is narrated here and of its extreme importance in the relations of England and India.—London Correspondent of the Hindu Patriot.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE CENTRAL BENGAL RAILWAY JOB.

IT is gratifying to observe that the new Indian Railway loan in London, which was started under the auspices of such eminent firms as Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. and Messrs. Rothschilds, has proved to be the success it was reasonably expected. But several native capitalists have complained to us that it was not opened in India also, so that they might be able to profit by the opportunity of subscribing to it. Only two or three days ago we gave a list of the new railway lines proposed to be opened in Bengal. It seems to us that Major Baring would only be extending the principle of his new policy, if he invited local capitalists to subscribe towards the funds for the construction of these railways. At any rate, he would, by making the attempt, be able to gauge the depth of interest which local capitalists really take in this most useful and necessary class of works. For instance, in regard to the proposed Mymensing and Dacca Railway, we know it is a fact that the local Zemindars will be only too glad to subscribe to the capital for the opening of the line. We hope the excellent Financial Minister of India, Major Evelyn Baring, will take into his early consideration the proprietary of draining local capital, which is available on cheaper terms, into the aid of pressing objects for the construction and extension of railways in India.—Indian Mirror.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

PAY AND PENSIONS IN THE P.W.D.—We understand that General Fraser, secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, has taken up the cudgels, in a forcible minute, on behalf of the emoluments and wretched pensions of the Higher Uncovenanted Service, which the Hon. T. C. Hope, considered to be already too high. We presume, however, that General Fraser's objections were chiefly intended for the benefit of the officers of his department, rather than for that of the Higher Uncovenanted Service generally.—Journal of the Anjuman-i-Punjab.

THE LATE MR. RYALL.—We deeply regret to announce the death at Kensington, London, of Mr. George Ryall, Judicial Assistant of Lahore and Law Lecturer of the Punjab University College. We do not believe that there is any person in this province who was more popular, and deservedly so, than Mr. Ryall. His death will be universally deplored and is a great loss to the Government which he has so well served. His intimate knowledge of the natives and of every detail of his work provided the material to his great common-sense for offering the most admirable and mature judgment on matters of the most intricate nature. In court and in allotting claims he had the capacity of going straight to the point without the faintest bias or giving the slightest offence. He was the truest and warmest of friends, perfectly fearless and outspoken and singularly unselfish. In him the Punjab University loses a painstaking and able lecturer, whose command both of the vernacular and of law made his lectures most practical as well as invaluable for purposes of legal education and examination. The Anjuman-i-Punjab lose in him one of their oldest and most valued members, whose advice was of inestimable advantage on several occasions. We have no details of his death, except that he fell down and expired in a paroxysm of pain, after a long illness which had kept his friends in anxious suspense since October last, and from which he seemed at last slowly to recover.—Ibid.

BULANDSHAHR ANTIQUITIES.—Mr. F. S. Growse, C.I.E., has not found Bulandshahr altogether barren of antiquities. The Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal tell of Buddhist sculpture, and pots like Roman amphoræ, and bricks of the fifth century of our era, which he has unearthed. In the garden of a native gentleman, close to the Id-ghar, he found "the only unquestionable proof that has yet come to light of the ancient prevalence of Buddhism in the neighbourhood." If, therefore, the Government removed Mr. Growse from Muttra to Bulandshahr, in order that he might bring to light more remains of Buddhism, their object has signally failed. The present sculpture represents the master in an attitude as if he were summing up the points of an argument. Rampant hippogriffs rear their head, on either side of his throne, and a devotee sits praying. Two lions, Hindu caryatides, more devotees kneeling, a couple of deer, and the wheel of the law are also included in the group. There is an inscription which Dr. Hoernle translates:—"All things that proceed from a cause, says the Tathachata, their cause is identical with their destruction; such is the dictum of the great philosopher."—Pioneer.

RED TAPE.—If a chimney smokes in a barrack at Rangoon the difficulty is encountered as follows:—The officer commanding the troops who occupy the building refers the matter to the proper staff officer whoever he may be; he communicates with the military staff at Madras, and the commander in chief at that presidency brings the question to the notice of the local Government. The Government of Madras then addresses the Government of India at Simla, and the papers on the subject travel about that pleasant station for a while in boxes. There a despatch is prepared, and finally sent to the chief commissioner of British Burma, who sets the machinery of his administration in motion, and then the officer in charge of military works at Rangoon sends for a mistree and the chimney is set to rights. Some impatient reformers want to alter the system, but the army organisation authorities of the India-office declare that the greatness of the British empire in the East has grown up under the existing system, and that it is better to let well alone.—Pioneer.

The Indian Churchman announces that the Bishop of Calcutta is quite recovered. His illness, however, necessitated the omission of visits to Rangogara, to the Dum-Duma Tea-garden, and to Hiloidari.

It is stated that the advocate fees in the great Tikara case, which has just been settled, amounted to three lakhs and ten thousand rupees. Mr. Evans received Rs.1,35,000; Mr. Paul, Rs.85,000; Mr. Gregory, Rs.55,000; and Moulvi Mahomed Yusub, Rs.40,000. About 400 witnesses were examined.

A MOVEMENT has sprung up in Calcutta to obtain the closing of liquor shops on Sundays. The Indian Daily News says that Sunday is the one day of the week when the seamen in port resort to the shore for a form of enjoyment the lowest and most degrading, and adds that the present state of things is a disgrace to the city.

The Calcutta papers report that a sensational case is going on in Court of the Deputy Magistrate at Purneah, in which Mr. Edward Taylor, Manager of Raja Lilanand Singh, has charged his Dewan with criminally intimidating the Raja. Mr. Gasper, of the Calcutta Bar, appears for the prosecution, and Mr. Monmohun Ghose for the defence.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP.—Speculation is rife as to who will succeed Sir Ashley Eden as Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. Dame Rumour points to Mr. River Thompson, and we believe she is right. Mr. Thompson has had ample and varied experience. He has been a collector and magistrate, a judge, a commissioner, and a senior secretary to the Government of Bengal, not to mention his later appointments. He combines both revenue and judicial experience. He is unostentatious and thoroughly conscientious.—Patriot.

MADRAS.

WE understand that his Excellency the Viceroy will leave Calcutta for Rangoon in the I.G.S. Tennasserim about Dec. 20. It is expected that the Marchioness of Ripon will accompany his Excellency.—Times of India.

MAJOR A. W. ROBERTS, officiating political agent, Merwara, is posted to Sujangarh as assistant to the Governor General's agent in Rajputana. Mr. W. R. Lawrence, assistant commissioner, 3rd class, Punjab, is posted to Merwara.—Ibid.

The Melbourne Argus reports that the Calcutta Tea Syndicate, through their agents, are beginning operations so energetically for the new season as to put out of the question any fear of failure in their endeavours to make that colony a heavy consumer of their teas.

AN up-country paper reports that Yakub Khan, the ex-Ameer of Cabul, had a very narrow escape the other day. His residence at Mussoorie was struck by lightning, which passed through the billiard-room in which he and several of his staff were at the time. Two persons by his side were knocked down insensible, but nobody was killed.

It appears that a question has lately been raised at Simla, as to the necessity or advisability of taking over charge of the Commerce and Statistical branch from the Financial Department by the New Agricultural and Revenue Secretariat. It was finally decided, by the committee of officers appointed, to abandon the scheme for the present.

It is stated that on the 15th ult. a band of Zakka Khels, over one hundred in number, attacked the village of Sangu, not far from Peshawur, and drove off sixty buffaloes, wounded one grazier, and killed another. The militia and villagers pursued the Zakka Khels for many miles, but failed to recover any of the loot, owing to the enemy having been too strong. It is said to be the intention of Government to have a strict blockade of the Zakka and Kuka Khels in this cold weather.

BOMBAY.

BRIGADIER GENERAL AITCHISON, C.B., has returned to Bombay from the Neilgherries.

It is stated that the Home Government have called upon the Bombay Government for a "full explanation" of Mr. Tagore's removal from his appointment of Judge of Surat to Carwar.

A HINDU gentleman now travelling in Europe, writing to his friends in Bombay from Moscow, says that his movements are keenly watched by the authorities. While at St. Petersburg he was very uncomfortable on account of being constantly dogged by detectives in plain clothes.

We regret to hear that Staff Surgeon W. Algeo, of H.M.S. Woodlark, recently died at Muscat from an overdose of hydrate of chloral which he had taken to procure sleep. The deceased, who was a promising young officer, had many friends in Bombay, who will hear of his untimely death with deep regret.

At the meeting of the Bombay Port Trustees on the 11th ult. a telegram was received from the Government inquiring when the debentures for the Dock Loan would be issued. The trustees resolved to reply that the great delay that has occurred in passing the bill would prevent them from issuing the loan at present.

As an indication of the prosperous state of the spinning and weaving industry in Bombay, we are informed that for the year ending June 30 the Anglo-Indian Spinning and Manufacturing Company made a net profit of Rs.1,95,000, which is equal to 32 per cent. profit for the whole year. The working of this mill for the half-year ending June 30 last showed a profit at the rate of 36 per cent. per annum. These profits will admit of large dividends, and the putting by in addition substantial amounts for depreciation and reserve.

A number of changes in the staff of the Political Department have been made in consequence of the retirement of Col. W. C. Parr. Major H. W. Reeves is transferred from Cutch to Kolhapur; Lieut. Col. G. R. Goodfellow is appointed Political agent, Cutch; Major C. Wodehouse goes to Mahi Kanta; and Lieut. Col. A. M. Phillips becomes First Assistant to the Political Agent, Kattywar, but during his absence Major W. Scott, Joint Administrator of Gondul, will act for him.

The number of deaths from cholera in Bombay last week was 22, being one more than in the previous week. In the mofussil, the disease, according to the latest official report, continues in most districts, and is unfortunately increasing in Khandesh, Ahmednugger, and Sholapore. During the week ending August 17, 14 deaths from cholera occurred at Ahmedabad; 108 in Surat and the immediate neighbourhood; 371 in Kandesh; 10 in Poona; 33 in Haveli and Bhimthadi; 15 in Ahmednugger (city); 176 in Ahmednugger (district); 217 in Sholapore; 9 in Man (Sattara); 4 in Sersi (Canara); and 49 in Baroda. The disease is abating in the Now-saree division.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that since the last mail the produce markets have experienced no decided change, and business is less active than expected at this season. There has been more inquiry for Burma rice cargoes off the coast. China tea is dull and without further alteration, the public sales being of less importance than usual. The light stocks and satisfactory consumption of Indian have encouraged buyers, enabling the importers to dispose of nearly all the supplies brought on the market at prices comparing favourably with last week's rates. At the sale of Java coffee held yesterday, on account of the Netherlands Trading Company, good descriptions in many cases went 2 to 2½ cents under valuations, the proportion of these being very large. Current qualities showed a decline of ½ to 1 cent. Good ordinary about 35½ to 36 cents. Plantation Ceylon and East India are steady.

TEA.—Messrs. Layton & Co. report that the market for China tea continues in the same depressed condition as we last reported, and notwithstanding rumours that the production of Indian tea will not come up to the requirements of the trade, in which case China must supply the deficiency, prices at to-day's unprotected auction ruled even under those of Tuesday last; this is more surprising as the quantity offered was comparatively light.

COFFEE.—In the public sales 103 casks 54 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon realised very full prices; good middling to bold, 91s. 6d. to 105s.; 203 cases 38 bags East India, small, 69s. 6d. to 72s. 6d.; medium, 77s. 6d. to 85s.; bold, 96s. to 101s. per cwt.

RICE.—Two cargoes Necranzie off coast sold at 8s. per cwt. continent.

COTTON.—A moderate business has been concluded, arrivals being somewhat easier. Sales about 2,000 bales, including Western at 4¾d. to 4¾d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnivelly September-October Suez, 5 5-16d. for fully good fair, g.f.c. Forward delivery American September-October, 6¾d.; November-December, 6 13-32 per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THE INDIAN GOLD MINES COMPANY AND THE SOUTHERN INDIA ALPHA GOLD COMPANY.

—The following is an abstract of a letter, dated August 18, and received from Mr. Severn:—"Since last Friday I have been wholly taken up with Mr. Morgan at Nellore and here. During my absence Mr. Howe has been crushing with five head; the engine will not drive ten head. Nine tons of stone from Nos. 3 and 4 (say seven tons No. 3 and two tons No. 4) have been put through; shall clean up at end of week, but in order to give you all the information to date, I have cleaned the mercury off plates, and I have obtained 100z. 15dwts. of hard amalgam, and the nine tons in question may be said to be going 10dwts. per ton. Howe is still on the old tailings, so I cannot at this date give you the exact returns. No. 3 looks very fine, indeed; plenty of stone; stone coming in in No. 1. Nos. 5 and 6—Sinking going on in No. 5; all looks very fine. No. 7. Started work on Alpha southern boundary. No. 8 also being timbered and pushed on. I have also started a drive other side of dam into Hamlin, and I have the greatest assurance that it will turn out a heavy lode of twenty feet or so." Mr. Brough Smyth also writes as follows:—"My servant got nineteen specimens with visible gold from Kintall Reef on Thursday last, and he has got, with the same facility as formerly, specimens with visible gold from Rhodes' Reef."

TAMBRACHERRY ESTATES AND WYNAAD GOLD MINING. The second ordinary general meeting of this company was held on Sept. 11 at the Cannon-street Hotel; Mr. J. Labouchere in the chair. The Chairman said that when they last met the company had just been formed, and they had to put before the shareholders the sale of part of their land to a new company, the Cootacivil Company. That sale had been duly effected; the deeds had been executed, the money had been received, and the meeting was called that day chiefly for the purpose of declaring a dividend out of the proceeds of the sale. The sale was on the following terms :—The Tambracherry Company brought some estates in the Wynad for the sum of £120,000; the Tambracherry resold a part of those estates for £60,000, thereby reducing the actual cost of the entire property to about the actual value of the coffee and cinchona, without taking into account the value of gold. They had accepted £32,000 in shares in the Cootacovil mine and £28,000 in cash, out of which the directors now propose to declare a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent., which would absorb £10,000, and £4,000 would be applied to the reduction of the expenses of the formation of the company. Those expenses were very heavy, and had been increased recently through the action of the Indian Government, which had increased the transfer duty to 1 per cent., the duty in this country being ½ per cent. They had in consequence to pay £2,000 to have their conveyances registered. They would have in hand after this a sum of £8,000, which would be divided, together with any further profits, in the course of another six months. They hoped by that time to show a small profit on the coffee crop of this year, besides a profit arising from the interest on the capital of the company, which was invested immediately the calls were paid up. They took possession of the estate on May 1, and their manager had done all he could, driving right and left and seeing what the numerous outcrops were like, but they had concentrated their chief attention on the Cootacovil reef, which, although it was now formed into a new company, this company remained shareholders in it to the extent of £323,000, and they had consequently the greatest interest in seeing the company do well and do so quickly. It was the intention of Mr. Harvey to start almost immediately for India, and then to set to work at the reduction works, and also at exploring and defining certain reefs which were being opened for inspection. In conclusion, the chairman moved the declaration of a dividend of 10 per cent. The motion was seconded by Mr. Arbuthnot and carried unanimously.

THE HINDU MUSICAL DRAMA.

THE first work, edited by Dr. Tagore in 1880, is entitled "The Ten Principal Avatars of the Hindus." In this work he speaks of the Indian musical dramas as follows :—"According to Sanskrit authorities there are two kinds of dramas—Marga and Desi. That form of dramatic entertainment which Brahma first learnt from Mahadeva and Parvati goes by the name of Marga Natya. That known on earth, and which is chiefly performed by mortals, is called Desi Natya. Murti is one of the sixteen varieties of the latter. The other fifteen kinds may be found in my work, the 'Eight Principal Rasas of the Hindus.' Murti is that kind of dramatic performance in which celebrated historical characters are represented without any expressive pantomimic movements, and in which a Sutradhara is introduced, who explains the mute figures. This kind of dramatic entertainment—very ancient—somewhat resembles the tableaux vivants, which occupy a conspicuous place among the entertainments in England and on the continent of Europe. Dr. Tagore now explains the details of the tableaux vivants :—1. The Stage; 2. Lights; 3. The Curtain; 4. The Grouping; 5. The Stage Manager; 6. The Artist; 7. The Wardrobe. Dr. Tagore then continues :—"The subjects for the tableaux vivants are in England, for instance, chosen only from history or from the lives of the people; but in Germany, and also frequently on the continent, from the Bible. In India, however, where the lives and customs of the people are inseparably connected with religion and mythology, where the generality of them (men and women) find no charms in pleasures unless they have something of religion about them, and where from their very infancy mythology is closely interwoven with everything, here nothing would be more acceptable to the multitude, or would give them greater pleasure, than the representation of the ten principal Avatars."

But before we proceed further, we must explain the significance of the word "Avatara." "Avatara"—a mythological expression—signifies "one who has descended," or, in the general acceptance of the term,—"the incarnation, in a corporeal body, of a God. The object of the periodical incarnations is thus explained in the Bhavagat-Gita by Vishnu, who visited this earth in the form of Krishna :—"Although it is not in my nature to be born and to come down, and although I am the Lord of all creatures, yet have I power over my nature, for I have sprung from my own might; and I create myself (make myself evident) as often as a decrease of virtue and an increase of vice and unrighteousness take place in this world;—and thus I appear, from age to age, for the preservation of the just, the destruction of the wicked, and the establishment of virtue." For the accomplishment of this purpose Vishnu is able to assume different shapes, of which the following ten are here enumerated :—1. The Matsya, or the Fish Avatara; 2. The Kurmma, or the Tortoise Avatara; 3. The Varaha, or the Boar Avatara; 4. The Nrisinha, or the Lion Avatara; 5. The Vamana, or the Dwarf Avatara; 6. The Parasu-Rama Avatara appears under the name of Parasic-Rama, as the son of a pious Brahmin, holding a bow in one hand and an axe in the other; 7. The Rama Avatara—here he was the son of Dasaratha, King of Oudh, and conqueror of Ravana; 8. The Bala-Rama Avatara, which is also the name of Vishnu. Some take him to be Krishna himself, but others consider him to be the perfect manifestation of Vishnu, and as such do not reckon him among the incarnations at all. He appears as warrior with four arms. 9. Buddha Avatara. The birth of Buddha is placed in the sixth century before Christ. His followers are the Buddhists. During the representation of this tableaux, the following hymn used to be chanted :—

"To thee, O Buddha, whose face beams with tranquil serenity, whose compassionate heart abhors the destruction of animal life, from whose head shining locks descend,—To Thee, O Buddha, Prince over subjects, do I offer up my prayers!"

10. The Kalki Avatara is looked upon as the future incarnation of Vishnu. His appearance will be the sign of the end of the world. "On the appearance of Kalki," says Sonnerat, "the sun and moon will be darkened, the earth tremble, and the stars fall from the firmament." He appears as a warrior on a winged steed.

Of these ten incarnations the first five are purely mythological in their character, and are said to have taken place in the Satya Yuga. A Yuga is the infinitesimal portion of a kalpa. Kalpa, again, is one day of Brahma, and consists of 4,320,000,000 human years. It is divided into four periods—viz., Satya Yuga, the most ancient time, is the period of eternal righteousness; Treta Yuga, the age in which righteousness is diminished by one-fourth; Dwapara Yuga, in which righteousness is increased by half; Kali Yuga, or the present time, in which one-fourth of righteousness remains. The next two Avatars appeared in the Treta Yuga, and the eighth in the Dwapara Yuga. The last two belong to the Kali Yuga.

These ten Avatars are now frequently the subject of odes, songs, ballads, and tales. One of the most celebrated odes is by Jayadeva, the descendant of a high Brahmin family in the twelfth century. Dr. Tagore gives us several of the songs of Jayadeva, with modern music, in the above mentioned works. The ten Avatars are specially treated of by the Raja Sourindro Mohun Tagore in an elegantly got-up volume, with illustrations of the tableaux. The Indian song, in ancient and modern notation, has been given in an appendix. To all who are interested in Indian music and Indian customs this work is therefore worthy of the warmest recommendation. The foregoing is but a small sample of the interesting contents of the book, which concludes with a grand hymn in praise of Vishnu. We shall, in our next number, consider more especially the most valuable and interesting of Dr. Tagore's works, "The Rasas."—Indian Mirror.

THE RAILWAY BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION have issued an appeal to the proprietors of railways in Scotland, in which it is pointed out that there are upwards of 300,000 officers and servants employed upon the railways in Great Britain, about 35,000 of them being in Scotland. The institution has, it is contended, done much for the relief of servants reduced to distress by disease or accident, and for those of their widows and orphans who may have been left unprovided for; but hitherto its operations of beneficence have not been very widely spread in Scotland. With the object of extending its aid in this part of the kingdom a Scotch branch has now been established in Glasgow, which is managed by a committee of the officers of Scotch railways, and funds are necessarily needed as a foundation. The fact that Mr. J. Wainwright, of the Glasgow and South Western, and Mr. Archibald Gibson, of the Caledonian, are at the head of this committee is sufficient to create confidence in this important extension. The object of the circular is to make an urgent appeal to each of the shareholders for assistance.

INDIAN DIFFICULTIES CREATED BY ENGLISH PARTY-FEELING.

WE give in another column a quotation from the London correspondence of the Hindu Patriot, which we have headed "Race Antagonism in India: A Caution to the London Press." And we venture to take the opportunity of respectfully putting before our London contemporaries and the public at large some remarks on the evil which is illustrated by this quotation—an evil that has grown during the last five or six years to most alarming dimensions, and that seems likely, if unchecked, to threaten the stability of our Indian Empire.

There are many English writers who, writing in London journals of high repute, whose authority is justly respected by the natives of India, deal with difficult Indian problems, and criticise the carefully thought out measures of Indian administrations, with as light a heart as if they were treating of the squabbles of a Surrey vestry or the vagaries of a rural magistrate in the shires. The information on which they found their observations is usually imperfect, and not unfrequently altogether erroneous. Every old Anglo-Indian knows that the first three or four years of an Indian career are largely occupied in unlearning preconceived notions about India and Indian affairs, which in most cases are mere illusions in regard to nine points out of ten; and yet, how many writers are there who deal with Indian questions on the strength of study and hearsay only, with no practical experience, and only the light of nature and their inner consciousness to guide them!

Now, when such crude and ill-formed criticisms are put before an English audience about an English question no great harm is done; the readers can often separate the wheat from the chaff for themselves, and, at any rate, no action is taken except by those who are so able to discriminate between what is reasonable and what is not. But when the criticism takes the form, as it often does, of censure on the conduct—or, still worse, imputations on the motives—of the local administrations in India, it is immediately accepted by the natives of India, naturally and in perfect good faith, as an unwilling or remorseful confession of wrong-doing on the part of the ruling race. An Indian gentleman, unfamiliar with that curious mental attitude, common in a certain political stratum in England, that inclines so many Englishmen to depreciate their own national character and take part against their own countrymen, naturally thinks it very unlikely that the English Daily News, for instance, would hasten to decide against the English executive and judicial authorities of Bombay, in a misunderstanding with a native subordinate, unless the case were very black indeed. And so mistrust, dislike, and finally hatred are generated; and if such feelings by frequent irritation take firm hold of the loyal and well-disposed part of the population, it is perfectly clear that the lawless and turbulent classes will soon cease to be held in any restraint. These classes are the natural foes of all orderly government; under an alien rule they can only be controlled either by the display of overwhelming force or by the cordial co-operation of the loyalists. The British rule in India can never hope to be sustained by the love of its subjects, as in a self-ruled nationality—that would be contrary to human nature; the utmost we can hope for is the respect of the educated and orderly classes, and this we are not likely to obtain if we do not respect ourselves and each other.

The particular case on which we have based these remarks is not one concerning any great imperial interests; and we have therefore been the more willing to direct public attention to it. But a very large number of cases have occurred during the last five years in which the most serious and lasting damage has been done to our national character, and to the prestige (and therefore, also, to the stability) of British rule in India. The natives of India were prepared to receive the proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India with a perfect furor of gratification and pride; the malicious suggestion of some London papers, that it was cunningly devised in order to curtail the pretensions of native princes, and to increase the despotic power of the Queen, curdled this enthusiasm into a doubting neutrality. Not less pernicious, in their political effect in India were the mocking criticisms of a portion of the London press on the expedition to Malta. We do not hesitate to assert that there is not a single Anglo-Indian who was at that time in India, and in a position to gauge native feeling, who would not agree with us that no other measure of the British Indian Government has ever produced half the loyal enthusiasm that was evoked among all classes by the thought that the great English Sirkar at last fully trusted and relied on its Indian soldiers. But alas, much of this enthusiasm was dashed by the mockery of some of the London papers; the ill-judged and utterly absurd references to tomahawks, scalping, and the like were read throughout India with flashing eyes and angry hearts. So it has been with every other Indian question that has been dragged into the arena of English politics by the unscrupulous bitterness of the last five years—the Afghan war, the financial difficulties, the cotton duties, the license-tax, the extension of native employment—and so on with every question capable of being twisted into an indictment against the local authorities.

The Hindu Patriot, owned and edited by an Indian gentleman of high social position and remarkable attainments, is entirely above race-antagonism. It is written and conducted with as good a tone, and in as liberal and enlightened a spirit as any high-class English journal. It is widely read by educated native gentlemen, not in Bengal alone, but in every part of India; and it undoubtedly exercises a very great influence for good on educated native opinion. Going into every corner of the land, it carries with it wherever it goes an atmosphere of loyalty and good sense. For such a source of good to be poisoned by quotations from the English Press would be both scandalous and deplorable. In the current number we find the article extracted from the London Daily News, which we print to-day, in which the well-known case of Mr. Tagore and the Surat Judgeship is dealt with in a most mischievous spirit, and in which the most damaging imputations are made against the fairness and probity of the Bombay Government and the Chief Justice of Bombay. The Daily News article gives the authority (but not the name) of "one of the Indian papers," for the suggestion, that the reason why Mr. Tagore was not given the Surat Judgeship was "that there is an assistant judge at Surat, and that strong objection is felt to putting an Englishman under a Native." The Daily News does "not believe that such can be the true reason for Mr. Tagore's abrupt removal"; but it gives no other reason, and goes on, somewhat illogically, to say, "It is much to be regretted that any cause should be given them (the native civilians) for supposing that their interests will be postponed to those of their European colleagues." And elsewhere it significantly observes, "It would be a great pity if the natives of Bombay were led to think that they could not reckon on getting fair play from the Government."

What are the actual circumstances? They are so well known to the bulk of our readers that we need not recapitulate them in detail, but an ample answer to the malevolent insinuations of the Daily News writer is afforded by the mere broad facts. Mr. Tagore was promoted from Shikarpur to the Surat judgeship and proceeded to join his appointment; but by the time he arrived at Surat it had transpired that his appointment to Surat would be a gross slur on Mr. G. M. Macpherson. It will be sufficient for all those who are acquainted with the unwritten laws that govern promotion in the Indian Civil Service, to state that Mr. Macpherson was four years senior to Mr. Tagore, and that he had distinguished himself as acting judge at Surat at the exceedingly critical and trying time of the Surat riots, when his judicial conduct had commanded the confidence alike of the natives and of the Government. The great difference in seniority alone made Mr. Macpherson's claim, in default of any disqualifying circumstances, absolutely overwhelming. It is perfectly certain that it would have been enforced if his competitor had been an Englishman; and, indeed, it is highly probable that the fact of Mr. Tagore being a native of India made it more difficult for Sir James Fergusson and Sir Michael Westropp to enforce justice, in view of the possibility of such imputations being made as those of the Daily News, than it would otherwise have been. Mr. Tagore was without delay re-transferred to Kanara, the other vacant judgeship—doubtless not so desirable as that of Surat, but the one to which Mr. Macpherson (a senior by four years) would otherwise have had to go. We can quite understand that the "slip 'twixt cup and lip" was a disappointment to Mr. Tagore, but the high reputation of that gentleman is sufficient guarantee that he would be the last to impute his disappointment to "unfair play," as insinuated by the Daily News, when the truth about it must be as evident to himself as to every other Indian civilian.

THE EASTERN MAIL SERVICE.—The British Indian Steam Navigation Company officially announce that with the Chyebassa, leaving Brisbane on December 23, the steamers forming the Queensland mail service will, on the homeward, as on the outward passage, call at Plymouth, where mails and passengers will be landed. It is not unlikely that previous to the Chyebassa other steamers will be ordered to put into Plymouth. This announcement, following so closely on the decision of the P. and O. Company to remove to Plymouth from Southampton, has been received in Plymouth with much satisfaction. Between the Orient Steamship Company and the Great Western Railway Company a serious difference has, it is believed, arisen, as the Orient Company state that if the Great Western Railway Company do not show more readiness to meet it in respect to passengers' fares and other facilities, it is very probable that the steamers will be taken from Plymouth. It is hoped that the difference will be satisfactorily arranged.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Malabar, Captain Grant, left Portsmouth on Friday, for Bombay, calling at Queenstown. She embarked at Portsmouth Capt. Penno, Lieuts. Williams, Clements, and Baird, and seventy-nine men and three women, belonging to the 2nd West Indian Regiment; Lieut. Bedingfield, 2nd Devonshire; Lieut. Evatt, 1st Dorset; Lieut. Foster, 2nd East York; Lieut.

Cartwright, 1st Durham; Lieut. Lamb, 1st Leinster; Surgeons, Corkery and Braganza, Indian Medical Department; Mr. Ruggles, Inspector of Educational Department; Major Watson, 1st Worcester; Lieut. Boileau, 2nd Cheshire; Lieut. Hockin, 1st Essex; Lieut. Orger, 1st Border Regiment; Lieut. Richardson, 1st Seaforth Hussars; Lieut. Anderson, 2nd Cheshire; Capt. Aldworth, 2nd Bedfordshire; Lieut. Trevor, 2nd Cheshire; Surgeon Patch, Indian Medical Department; Lieut. Johnstone, 1st Hampshire; Deputy Surgeon General Hendley, C.B., Surgeons Major Keith and Hoysted, and Surgeon Moberley, of the Army Medical Department; and six men, eight women, and fourteen children. At Queenstown the Malabar embarked the 2nd Battalion of the Lancashire Fusiliers, consisting of Lieut. Col. O'Neill and Bowlby, Majors Brown, Wahab, and Power, Capt. Collingwood, Browne, Wright, and Montgomery, Lieuts. Bland, Scott, Furlonger, Temple, Blencowe, Deane, Freeman, Fleming, Reid, Monck, Deane, and Hawks, Adjutant Bloomfield, Quartermaster Choake, Paymaster Denning, and 872 men and their families. The following individual officers also took passage for Bombay:—Surgeons Major Cotter and Macartney and Surgeon Bushe, of the Army Medical Department; Lieuts. Burke and Money, 1st South Yorkshire; Lieut. Hazelgrove, 2nd Bedfordshire; and Lieut. Richardson, 2nd Liverpool Regiment. On Wednesday morning the Malabar was inspected at Portsmouth by Admiral Ryder, commander in chief. Every portion of the ship, including the watertight doors and steering gear, was subjected to examination, after which the crew were drilled at fire-quarters and cutlass exercise. One of Berthon's collapsing lifeboats was also rigged and lowered into the water and manned. Since her last trooping season, the Malabar has undergone an extensive refit, having been furnished with three new decks, new steam steering gear, new main drainage, and new arrangements for flushing. The rudder head has also been strengthened and fitted with a tiller and Rapson slide in the place of the old yoke. As the vessel was being hauled from the jetty in the dockyard the fore tow rope broke, and the stern hawser, being let go, was caught in the screw, whereby the ship was temporarily disabled. She was towed out to Spithead by a dockyard tug, and a diver having been sent out to free the propeller, she proceeded on her voyage a few hours afterwards.

INDIAN RELIEFS.—The Indian relief season of 1881-82 may be said to commence with the departure of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers (20th) from Ireland for Bombay. The 2nd Derby (95th) had been told off for India this season, but the battalion, although strong enough numerically, is too much made up of young soldiers for service in that climate, and it will now proceed about the end of December to Gibraltar, whence the 22nd Lincoln (10th) will be sent on for a tour of service in India. The 2nd Scots Fusiliers (21st) now in Natal, will embark in the Serapis, which has already sailed, and will reach Bombay about the beginning of November. These three battalions are composed of soldiers who are fairly seasoned and trained, and whose condition ought to prevent a renewal of the objections hitherto made with too much reason to the immature lads sent out to India and South Africa. The Lancashire Fusiliers have been to some extent made up for service by volunteers from other regiments, but they received a number of eligible men from their own 1st Battalion at Cork, in exchange for about 100 recruits, and they go out in good condition. The Scots Fusiliers are composed of men most of whom have served for the last two years in Natal, and on arrival in India they will be increased by a number from their 1st Battalion at Secunderabad, which is now on the point of returning home. The 2nd Lincoln has been stationed for the last two or three years in the Mediterranean, and is also in a satisfactory condition as regards the maturity and training of its men. The fact of the authorities being able at once to tell off a battalion from Malta or Gibraltar for service in India is an illustration of the wisdom of the step lately taken by Mr. Childers for increasing the strength of each battalion in these garrisons from 600 to upwards of 800 rank and file. It is now understood to be settled that, in addition to the 2nd Scots Fusiliers, the 14th Hussars will be sent from Natal to India this season. The regiment had been borrowed from the Indian Government in the spring, in order to provide for contingencies in South Eastern Africa, with the understanding that it should return to India when no longer required. But it has been determined to reduce the number of British cavalry regiments in India from nine to eight, and the Indian Government sought to carry out that reduction at once by dispensing with the services of the 14th Hussars, and allowing that regiment to return to England. It has, however, been settled that they are to return to India, and shipping is being taken up to convey both men and horses from Durban to Bombay about November. The reduction of a cavalry regiment in India would therefore probably be effected by the return home next year of the first regiment for England—the 10th Hussars—without relief. Regarding the Infantry battalions to return from India to England in this and the next few years, some modifications in the order and the period of relief have been necessitated by the new scheme for amalgamating battalions. Before that scheme came into operation it was arranged that the 1st Wiltshire (62nd), 1st Scots Fusiliers (21st), 1st Dorset (39th), 2nd North Lancashire (81st), and 2nd Irish Fusiliers (80th), were to come home this winter, the 1st Essex (44th), going to Aden with a view to its return in 1882-83. Owing to the new re-linking, the roster has been changed. The 2nd North Lancashire and 2nd Irish Fusiliers will not return at present, and will probably remain two years longer in India, the six battalions having their corresponding battalions abroad preceding them homewards; while, for a similar reason, the move of the 1st Essex to Aden has been countermanded, and that battalion will now remain abroad for three years longer, the 1st Seaforth Highlanders (72nd) going to Aden in their place, and coming home in the winter of 1882-83. The 2nd Dorset (54th), which would have returned in a year or two under previous arrangements, will now remain in India for probably six or seven years, in consequence of its being re-linked with the 39th, returning this season. The new order of relief from India would appear to be as follows:—1, 1st Wiltshire (62nd); 2, 1st Scots Fusiliers (21st); 3, 1st Dorset (39th); 4, 1st Leicester (17th); 5, 1st Manchester (63rd); 6, 1st Seaforth Highlanders (72nd); 7, 2nd North Lancashire (81st); 8, 2nd Irish Fusiliers (80th); 9, 1st York and Lancaster (65th); 10, 1st Essex (44th); 11, 2nd East Surrey (70th); 12, 1st Royal Irish (18th); at the rate of about three battalions in each year.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—10 Calcutta, Rs. 33,65,000; to Bombay, Rs. 1,30,000; and to Madras, Rs. 5,000; the average rate in all cases being 1s. 7-8 1/2d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 7-13-16d. received about 24 per cent. Thirty-five lakhs are to be offered again next Wednesday.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday a little business was done in bar silver on Continental account, at 51 3/4d. per ounce, but there was no demand of any kind for India. The nearest price quoted was 51d. per ounce. The Indian rate for telegraphic transfers was 1s. 7 3/4d., being slightly harder, but there was very little Indian export business, owing to a scarcity of freight. The Shanghai exchange quotation was rather firmer, at 50. 1 3/4d., the Hong Kong rate being steady at 3s. 9d. In the market for Rupee Paper prices were unaltered, with very little business on either side.—On Wednesday the sum of £49,000 in Dutch gold coin was brought by the Bank. The Vanduvck, from Brazil, arrived with £19,000 in specie. In the Silver Market a parcel of bars was placed at Wednesday's prices; but later on the tendency was scarcely so firm, and some consignments, amounting in all to about £30,000, were subsequently sold at 51 11-16d. per ounce. A portion of the Mexican dollars found buyers at 51d.; but a balance of the arrival was held over for future negotiation. The Indian quotations for telegraphic transfers were a shade easier, but no quotable change was shown in Rupee Paper.—On Friday the market was unchanged, bars being dealt in at 51 11-16d., and Mexican Dollars at 51d. per ounce. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. improved 1/2, to 90 3/4 to 91. No exchange was received from Bombay, owing to the Parsee New Year's holidays, which continue until Tuesday. The rate from Calcutta was telegraphed at 1s. 8 1-16d.; Hong Kong, 3s. 8 7/8d.; and Shanghai, 5s. 1 5/8d.—On Saturday the market was very quiet, with small sales in each case at previous prices. The rate for telegraphic transfers advised from Calcutta was unaltered, but the tendency was not strong. The Shanghai exchange rate was rather easier at 5s. 1 5/8d. Rupee Paper both here and in India was again firm, without any further quotable change in prices.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The Clyde, built and engined by Messrs. Denny Brothers, of Dunbarton, of 4,100 tons register, went her trial on the Clyde on Tuesday last, and attained a mean speed of 15.9 knots (equal to 18 1/2 miles) per hour, the horse power indicated being 4,900. This vessel is fitted with all the recent improvements, the saloon and decorative work being completed in a very artistic manner. The Clyde will be despatched from London to Calcutta on the 11th of October.

REMARKABLE INDIAN OCEAN PASSAGE.—The Pacific Steam Navigation Company's Royal Mail steamer Cotopaxi, R. Studdert, commander, has just completed a remarkably quick passage across the Indian Ocean. Her log shows an average speed of 322 knots per day for eighteen consecutive days from Adelaide to the Red Sea. The Cotopaxi was detained two days in the Suez Canal, but has nevertheless completed the voyage from Adelaide to Plymouth in the extremely short time of thirty-five days three hours, including all stoppages. The Cotopaxi was built and engined by Messrs. John Elder and Co. nine years ago.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—The command of the district staff at Woolwich, about to be vacated by Col. Oldfield, Royal Artillery, on his promotion, will, it is expected, be conferred upon Lieut. Col. E. Keate, R.A., who is at present attached to the 10th Brigade, and doing duty at Shoeburyness. Col. Oldfield, who loses two years of staff employment by his rank, would, it was expected, have succeeded Col. Heyman, R.A., as superintendent Royal Carriage Department, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, having previously served five years as assistant superintendent, will probably proceed to India. Col. C. H. Owen, R.A., recently serving upon the Heavy Gun Committee, will most likely go to India with the winter reliefs.

THE AFGHAN CAMPAIGN.—Nearly 800 officers of the Royal Artillery and many of the rank and file have subscribed towards a memorial in honour of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Royal Artillery who fell on service in Afghanistan and South Africa in 1877-80. It is proposed to erect a suitable monument at Woolwich, the home of the Royal Regiment, and the remainder of the fund will be devoted to the purchase of presentations to different charitable institutions for the benefit of the widows and children of those who lost their lives in the Afghan, Zulu, and Transvaal campaigns.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

cation could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. . . It is a creditable

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE. No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.
"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of
'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who

KIRKMAN AND SON, ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS,

3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided,
thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPT. 26, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 6; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 4; Calcutta, Sept. 3.

THE official report on the state of the weather and the prospects of the crops for the week ending Aug. 23 says:—

"There has been no material change in the Bombay Presidency, where a break is still required in Guzerat and Baroda, and the crops in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta country have been injured by drought. In the Central Provinces the rainfall has been generally light, except in one district, and crops have improved, though a further break would be beneficial. The weather has also been too wet in some parts of the North Western Provinces and Oudh, and in a good many of the Rajputana and Central India States. In Bengal the inundated tracts of Orissa are now being resown, but, as before, more rain is needed towards the east and north east. In the Madras Presidency harvesting has begun in some districts, and general prospects are fair, although the standing crops in places require more rain. The same want also continues to be felt in the eastern districts of the Mysor State, with the exception of Bangalore; to the west of the State the crops are in good condition. In the Nizam's territories the standing crops are suffering, and rabi sowings are being retarded by dry weather. In the rest of the country, i.e., in the Punjab, in British Burma, in Assam, in Coorg, and in Berar, agricultural prospects are generally satisfactory. On the whole, owing to a superabundance of rain, chiefly in the centre and to the west of the country, and to insufficient falls, principally in the Deccan and adjoining tracts and in a few parts of Bengal, the reports of the week are not quite so favourable as they have been of late. But in by far the greater part of the country, and particularly in Northern India, the season continues to be a good one."

THE telegraphic news of the state of the crops in Mysor is most satisfactory. Telegraphing yesterday, Sept. 25, the Times Calcutta correspondent says:—

"The crop prospects of Mysor have improved. The sowings are still progressing. Prices are stationary. Plentiful rain has fallen throughout the province."

THE news received from Afghanistan to-day seems, for the present, decisive. Fortune has once more favoured us in despite of ourselves. The Amir—our Amir—has come off victor in the great struggle under the walls of Kandahar, no thanks to us; Ayub is in full flight towards Herat, just as he was about this time last year, and once more we may thank Heaven we are for a time rid of him.

DURING the week the India-office, doubtless appreciating the anxiety of the public to obtain early information of the issue of the conflict that was so clearly impending, has liberally supplied the daily papers with the bulletins from the Viceroy. They were the following:—

Dated Simla, September 20.—"Reported from Khojak, 19th, that Ayub intends forcing action. Ameer said to be waiting reinforcements from Cabul. Numbers of Duranis from Tirin and Dehrawat joining Ayub. Bodies of horse from Taraki and Suliman Khel Ghilzais have joined Ameer."

Dated Simla, September 21.—"Following from St. John, 20th:—'Ameer's force apparently inferior numerically to Ayub's. Latter force now outside city and in good spirits. Ameer likely to move to Zakird.'"

Dated Simla, Sept. 25.—"St. John reports, Gulistan, 24th. Ameer defeated Ayub 22nd. Battle lasted seven to noon. Two Cabuli regiments deserting Ayub deciding action. Ayub and sirdars fled to Herat, abandoning guns and baggage. Losses on both sides heavy."

THE account of the action, and of the circumstances which attended it, is well given by the Times correspondent, telegraphing from Gulistan on the 25th inst.:—

"On the 19th inst. the Ameer, finding great difficulty in obtaining flour for his troops, and unable to tempt Ayub out of his position, shifted his camp about nine miles to the west. By this manœuvre he abandoned his line of command of a larger extent of country in order to be the better able to feed his troops, securing by his change of camp a position with abundance of water and mills. He was also within communication with Kelat-i-Ghilzai, but still had a line of retreat to Peshin open. He also obtained striking distance of the Herat road. During the next two days he remained quiet, while Ayub transferred his camp from the east to the west of the city, and established his own headquarters at Ghilzina, three miles from Kandahar, on the Herat road. From this point a ridge of very steep rocky hills runs to the south west for four miles. To the east of it, a mile from Ghilzina, lies Old Kandahar, destroyed by Nadir Shah in 1735. It is a complete ruin but its wide ditch and massive ramparts still make it a formidable military position. Here Ayub placed his guns, his infantry holding the villages and walled enclosures for a mile or more to his left front. In the open valley to the west of the hills he placed his Herati Horse and one Herati regiment, apparently to secure his retreat. At daybreak on the 22nd inst. the Ameer, whose headquarters were at Karez-i-Niko, six miles to the south west of Kandahar and a mile and a-half from the southern end of the hills, broke up his camp, intending to advance up to them and attack next day, but he appeared in the villages on his right, detaching his Ghilzai Horse to engage the Heratis in the valley to the west. On reaching the hills, Ayub's guns on the southern rampart of the old city opened on him, and the Ameer pushed forward to meet them. Ayub placed his Kandahari regiments in front; next to them the Ghazis, of whom he had nearly 10,000; and in their rear two of the Ameer's Cabuli regiments, the third regiment being with the baggage. The action seems to have gone on without any result for three or more hours, when the Cabulis suddenly opened fire on the Ghazis and Kandaharis in their front. This treachery decided the day. The Ghazis and Kandaharis broke and fled, and two of the Herati regiments went over to the victor. The Ghilzai cavalry in the meantime had routed the Herati Horse and infantry in the valley west of the hills, but do not appear to have been able to hold the road, for Ayub and his sirdars escaped unopposed. The losses were slight on both sides, the Ameer having only forty or fifty killed and as many wounded, while the enemy had 250 killed, mostly Kandaharis and Ghazis. The tents, baggage, and fourteen guns fell into the victor's hands. The city opened its gates; the bazaars were partially plundered, with many merchants' houses and the Farsiwans' quarters. The next day the villages in the vicinity of the city were given up to plunder in revenge for their inhabitants joining Ayub. Nothing is said about lives being lost. The Ameer intends to march on Herat in four or five days, leaving Shams-ud-din or Mohamed Yosub Khan as Governor."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on the same date, confines himself to briefly confirming the welcome news from Kandahar. He, however, incidentally mentions a disquieting rumour, to the effect that the Turkestan army had revolted against the Ameer's authority in favour of Muhammad Jan and other prisoners:—

"This morning news, still, however, unconfirmed, has been received here that a decisive battle was fought on Thursday, lasting from sunrise till noon; that, owing chiefly to the desertion of two Cabuli regiments during the action, Ayub was totally defeated and has fled with his sirdars towards Herat, leaving all his baggage and guns. The losses on both sides are said to be heavy, but no particulars are yet known. If this news is true, and there seems to be no reason to doubt it, we shall probably hear soon that the Ameer has occupied Kandahar, and it is quite possible that Ayub may fall into the hands of Abdul Kudus Khan, whose success in capturing Fort Taiwarra and placing himself between Kandahar and Herat has been confirmed by news from Herat via Persia, as well as from Cabul and Kandahar. Should this last contingency happen, Abdur Rahman ought easily to make himself master of the entire country, although the Turkestan army may give him trouble, if it is true, as rumoured, that it has revolted in favour of Muhammad Jan and other prisoners."

FOUR Englishmen of the 66th Regiment—so says a sepoy of Jacob's Rifles who shared with them for a time their misfortunes—have been taken to Herat and sold into slavery!—with two sepoy of the Bombay Grenadiers. The Abyssinian war was waged for a smaller outrage on English national feeling; has the national honour since then become so dead that we shall now fold our hands, whilst our countrymen are enduring the horrors of the cruelest of all fates? The Times telegram, dated Sept. 22, was as follows:—

"A sepoy of Jacob's Rifles, who was taken prisoner at Maiwand, has arrived at Quetta. He states that four British soldiers of the 66th Regiment and two sepoy of the Bombay Grenadiers were also taken prisoners. They were sent to Herat and sold into slavery. He was also sold, and lost sight of his fellow captives. The death of his master's son enabled him to escape."

It now becomes an interesting question, "Do Jelly Fishes experience any emotion when their kith and kin are sold into slavery?" The Indian authorities seem to have been convulsively struggling in a vain attempt to shake the evidence of the sepoys; the poor sepoy apparently has some bowels of mercy for his enslaved comrades, and perversely sticks to his story. The last telegram from the Times correspondent, dated yesterday, Sept. 25, says:—

"The story regarding the Maiwand prisoners, which I telegraphed to you on Thursday, arose as follows:—A sepoy of Jacob's Rifles lately arrived in Quetta, having been absent without leave ever since the battle of Maiwand. He was tried by court-martial for desertion, and set up a defence that he, with four soldiers of the 66th Regiment and two soldiers of the Bombay Grenadiers, were taken prisoners and sold into slavery, but that he escaped and found his way back. Further inquiries are being made for the purpose of testing this story, which has already stood a severe and repeated cross-examination, and it is stated that the sepoy gives the details in so circumstantial a manner that there seems to be little doubt of their truth."

As usual, we have to record a daring outrage on British territory, committed by the border tribes on the Afghan frontier. And, as usual, this particular outrage is "the most daring" that has "occurred on the frontier for some years past"—showing the rapidly progressive rate at which British prestige has run down since the "scuttling" policy has been in fashion. We commend to our readers the comments of the Times correspondent, whose telegram we quote, dated Sept. 25:—

"On Tuesday night, a little before twelve o'clock, a band of frontier raiders, supposed to be Zakha-Khel Afridis, and to be instigated by the notorious outlaw Kamal, managed to enter the lines at Kohat, and crept unobserved to the quarter guard of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry. They then fired a volley and rushed upon the guard, who was taken by surprise. Of the ten troopers on duty three were killed and four were wounded; and after a brief struggle, lasting only a few minutes, the raiders made off, carrying away two carbines. They were at once pursued, but without effect. This is the most daring raid that has occurred on the frontier for some years past. In thus venturing into a cantonment garrisoned by 2,500 troops the Zakha-Khels have displayed a cool and deliberate audacity which, if not checked by prompt and efficient punishment, will doubtless lead to a succession of similar attacks on British outposts. Probably a punitive expedition will be undertaken next winter."

LET us now take another part of the same telegram:—

"The terms imposed on the Afridis in punishment of their attack on a picket of the 19th Bengal Lancers at Peshawur last month are as follow:—1. The surrender of Kamal, or his expulsion from the Afridi limits and a fine of Rs.2,000; 2. The surrender of Kamal's associates or the payment of a further fine of Rs.1,500; 3. The payment of blood money at the rate of Rs.500 for each trooper killed or wounded. It is doubtful whether these terms can be enforced without an expedition."

It appears that "Kamal" and "Kamal's associates" have learnt a lesson from the Boers, we demand their surrender and the payment of fines—and they straightway reply by sending some of their friends into our cantonments at Kohat, who kill and wound seven of our troopers and carry off our carbines! It would be laughable if it were not pitiful. As in Ireland, as in the Transvaal, so on the Afghan frontier—the people who are shot, or wounded, or plundered, are the poor fellows who stick by us and are loyal to the "great British Government;" those who boldly defy us go off with the loot, or put their tongues in their cheek at us, or become Triumvirs and dictate terms to us.

THERE have been most serious riots at Multan during the week. The ill feeling between the Hindus and the Mahomedans of the Punjab has been smouldering for months past, and has been noticed more than once by us. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times thinks that "the event seems to show that the religious feelings of both sects are in a most dangerous state of tension, not only in Multan, but in many other parts of the country." We fear, however, that this is only another symptom of that feeling of unrest that is clearly spreading throughout the country—due mainly to the disturbing causes fostered by the weak and vacillating policy that has of late been in vogue in every part of the British Empire. We do not mean, it is hardly necessary to point out, that scuttling out of Kandahar and base surrender in the Transvaal actually and directly lead to religious riots at Multan or to daring outrages on our troops in cantonments. What we do mean, and what we certainly believe, is this, that the general feebleness of our recent policy (of which the scuttling and the surrender have been the most notorious, and perhaps the most shameful instances) tends, throughout our vast dominions and along our whole frontier, to loosen the reins of authority and order, and to encourage the lawless and defiant. The first announcement of the Multan disturbances came through a Reuter's telegram from Bombay, dated Sept. 21. In the Times telegram from Calcutta of yesterday's date we get the following full account:—

"The ill feeling between the Hindus and the Mahomedans at Multan, of which we have heard a good deal for some months back, has culminated in a serious riot. The ostensible cause was, as before, the question of the slaughter of cows. It appears that on the 16th inst. the Mahomedans asked permission to open new beef shops in the city. This was refused, and an order was issued that all beef should in future only be brought into the city by the old route, the use of which was discontinued a few weeks ago. Thereupon the Hindus declared they would not that allow any beef to be brought in. Last Monday the Hindus closed their shops and stopped all business. On Tuesday they attacked and badly wounded a butcher bringing in beef. The police, who attempted to interfere, were driven off, and an excited crowd of Hindus collecting in the streets attacked the mosques and burnt their contents. The deputy commissioner made an unsuccessful attempt to induce the mob to disperse, and the Mahomedans then rose and commenced reprisals by burning the Hindu temples. By ten o'clock the rioters numbered many thousands, and the troops, consisting of an entire brigade, were called out and marched into the city. The infantry and cavalry took possession of the gates and the principal streets, while the artillery were drawn up in the open squares. The rioters carefully avoided coming into collision with the troops and gradually dispersed. It was considered advisable, however, to keep half the brigade on duty and the other half in reserve for some days. From thirty to forty people were hurt, some severely. About one hundred arrests were made, including thirteen of the leading chowdrys of the Hindus. All is now quiet, although considerable excitement prevails. The troops still occupy the city, but a large force of police has been sent to relieve the soldiers. The Punjab Government believe that there is no cause for anxiety. The event, however, seems to show that the religious feelings of both sects are in a most dangerous state of tension, not only in Multan, but in many other parts of the country. In every case the Hindus have been the aggressors, and, as there is little doubt that the masses were incited by fanatical and unscrupulous leaders, the Government should spare no effort to bring those leaders to punishment."

THE Radical Press is ungrateful to Government. The Western Morning News, of Plymouth, is one of those clever, well-informed provincial papers of the "philosophical Radical" type that did so much to bring about the unexpected results of the last election. Founded by Messrs. Saunders and Spender, it was one of the very first to obtain the advantage of the admirable system of London correspondence started by those gentlemen; and, like most of the other papers so founded, it has been a great Radical power in its own locality. But even Radicals now begin to see that the masterly-inactivity policy condemns us to absolute ignorance, as a rule, of what is going on in Afghanistan. The London correspondent of the Western Morning News says:—

"It is evident enough that the India-office is being very badly supplied with Afghan news. Every telegram is succeeded by another practically contradicting it. The other day a battle had begun outside Kandahar, and Abdur Rahman was in the better position. There have been no battles. It turns out that Abdur Rahman is in the worse position. Ayub is the better off. We heard of him afraid to accept battle when last the Viceroy telegraphed; we hear of Abdur Rahman now retiring to make his own position secure before a shot has been fired. The truth is that we have not been taking such pains to get good 'letter writers' in Afghanistan since the war that we took before it, and it is rather a pity. A good service of fairly trustworthy news costs little, and is of high value. As to the English correspondents, they would not be safe neither in the camp of Ayub nor in that of Abdur Rahman. But the native newsgetter is cheaply bought, and his services might be a little better utilised just now."

We have quoted this paragraph mainly with the view of showing how hard an error is to kill when it has once been started on authority. The Duke of Argyll and the other Liberal statesmen who contended against the necessity of having an English resident at Cabul are mainly responsible for the propagation of the monstrously foolish notion that any political information worth the paper it is written on can be obtained from the native "news-writers" here spoken of with so much respect. Every Anglo-Indian officer of experience, every intelligent native gentleman, will readily testify to the utterly worthless and even misleading nature of the political information so obtained. We imagine the correspondent of the Western Morning News is quite wrong in supposing that Lord Ripon has any lack of this information; we can only hope that his Excellency has not too much of it, and too little trustworthy news.

We have spoken, in our leading columns to-day, of the liberality with which the magnates of the Punjab have from time to time come forward with large subscriptions in aid of the University College, and other educational institutions of the provinces. The last mail brought the news of a recent instance of this liberality in a magnificent gift from the great Phulkian chief, the young Maharaja of Patiala. The late Maharaja was a magnificent patron of learning; and there is hardly a chief of note in the Punjab whose name is not associated with some endowment in, or some donation to, the provincial university. The Maharaja of Patiala has given Rs.25,000 to the Punjab University College, in commemoration of his first visit to Lahore, on the occasion of the late Viceregal Durbar. His Highness has requested that the money may be utilised in the following manner:—The interest on Rs.10,000 to be expended on Gurmukhi teaching and scholarships; the interest on Rs.5,000 to be given in scholarships to students passing the Gazani examination, or, in the event of there being none such, the interest to be added to the amount of the Gurmukhi scholarships; the interest on the remaining Rs.10,000 to be utilised for the general benefit of the college.

THE Secretary of State for India in Council, on the recommendation of the Viceroy of India and the Indian military authorities, has granted a number of permanent pensions and gratuities to those natives who have been brought to notice as having rendered valuable service to the Imperial cause during the late campaign in Afghanistan. Among those selected for recognition are Muhammad Akbar Khan, Orakzai, assistant district superintendent of police, for services as senior native assistant political officer in the Khyber, a life pension of Rs.1,500; Nawab Sir Khwaja Muhammad Khan, K.C.S.I., Knattack, a remission of Rs.2,000 per annum of his tribute of Rs.20,000, and to his son Muhammad Jaffer Khan, for services as commander of Khaltack levies in Jowaki Campaign a khillut of Rs.500; Ghulam Nubbee, Kazilbash, for services rendered to the late Sir Louis Cavagnari, in carrying a letter from the residency during the attack, a present of Rs.2,000; Waziezada Muhammad Afzai Khan, 2nd Bengal Cavalry, for services in connection with the mission to Khanabad, a life grant of Rs.1,800 per annum, by grant of proprietary right in lands. There are altogether thirty-four grants, besides a number of minor khilluts given by the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab during his recent tour.

At the Geographical Congress, which closed at Venice last Tuesday, it is hardly too much to say that the chief honours of the meeting were carried off by the Indian Survey, represented by Sir Henry Thuillier and Captain Baird. After Captain Baird, in a very modest speech, had explained some of the very thorough work done by these pioneers of science in India, Colonel Ferrero, on behalf of the assembled geographers, gave expression to the universal feeling of astonishment and admiration that had been produced by the details; and deplored the fact that so little of all these details had hitherto been known to the Geodesical Institutes and Geographical Societies of Europe. Now that a beginning has been made we trust that the Survey will no longer consent to hide its light so completely under a bushel. With such a representative as Sir Henry Thuillier, resident in England, every discovery and every advance made by the survey should immediately become the property of European science.

We are glad to learn, by a private telegram from Madras, that an officer has been appointed to superintend the immediate construction of an extension of the telegraph line from Utakamand to Devala—a distance of over forty miles. This extension will bring our gold companies into immediate telegraphic communication with their agents and managers at the mines, and ought to have an excellent effect in keeping us here in London perfectly au courant with the workings out there.

THE Association of Gold Mining Companies, of which we spoke a few weeks ago as likely to prove an active power for good in the gold districts, has just offered some prizes that will stimulate the ambition of the local managers. It has promised a bonus of £1,000 to the manager who first shows a result of 5,000 ounces of gold from his crushings, and smaller bonuses for smaller results. Five thousand ounces means close on £20,000 value of gold, and would represent something like two months' working of the biggest concerns at an ounce a ton.

We are glad to observe that the Maharaja of Mysor recently paid a visit to the Kolar goldfields.

THE Indian Spectator, an ably conducted native paper of Bombay, confirms what we said last week regarding the Indian wheat trade. It says:—

"The country has done remarkably well this year in the matter of the export of wheat—her chief cereal. It is, indeed, a cause for congratulation that this city alone exported something like 195,000 tons to Europe. We are quite sure that the more our agriculture is stimulated and the more our cultivators are freed from the claws of the relentless Marwari, the more able will India be to grow and export wheat every year, until she becomes a formidable competitor with America."

THE following report on the Calcutta tea market is from Messrs. Carritt and Co.'s fortnightly market report, dated Sept. 3:—

"The usual weekly auctions were held on the 25th ult. and 1st inst., at the former of which, 8,600 packages were sold and at the latter about 8,500. There was a general assortment of teas offered, and, although the proportions of extra fine quality was not so large as at some former sales, still the quality generally continues to be good. Reported unfavourable sales in London of recent arrivals, which have been telegraphed, and repeated reduced quotations, amounting to a decline of several pence, have caused this market a severe check, and, with the exception of Darjiling growths, rates must be quoted during the fortnight quite three pence per pound lower for Pekoes and Broken Pekoes, and twopence per pound for Pekoe-Souchongs and Souchongs, common broken teas being about 1d. easier. Darjiling teas were not affected to the same extent, but must be quoted one penny to three halfpence lower. Accounts from the producing districts are more favourable, excepting from the North West, and although some lost ground is being now made up it is not expected that at the present advanced period of manufacture the estimated outturn can be eventually realised."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending Sept. 6:—Lieut. Col. J. Hopkins, Bengal Army, unattached; Col. G. J. Dalrymple-Hay, B.S.C.; Maharaja Sir Joymungul Singh Bahadur, K.C.S.I., of Gidhur; Capt. M. S. Saunders, late 20th Hussars.

THE SEHNDE (HANOVER) PETROLEUM ASSOCIATION.

UNDER the above title a company has been formed, with a capital of £60,000, in £1 shares, to acquire rights in the oil deposits over about 3,000 acres of land in Sehnde, near the city of Hanover. Great excitement continues in regard to the recent oil discoveries in this neighbourhood, a town having sprung up into existence with a rapidity characteristic of the early oil strike in Pennsylvania. On the property in question, through which a railway passes, large supplies of good oil have been tapped at very shallow depths. The rights have been acquired at the rate of about £13 per acre, which, it is held, will permit re-sale at a profit, if needed, as well as of working at first hand. The consideration money is £40,000, half to be paid in cash and half in shares. A rental of about £8 per acre accrues when active operations have been commenced. Very favourable reports as to the purity of the oil have been received from Herr Schmidt, Herr J. Kampfenkell, and Dr. A. Faulbaum, Directory of Refinery at Peine. The company has also secured the services of Herr Kleissen, the first discoverer of petroleum at Oelheim, as honorary consulting engineer. An application will shortly be made to the Stock Exchange-Committee for a quotation and settlement.

DEATH OF SIR VINCENT EYRE.

WE regret to announce that, shortly before the third annual dinner on Saturday of the officers who took part in the relief of Lucknow under Havelock and Outram in 1857 intelligence reached the metropolis from Aix-les-Bains, Savoy, conveying the melancholy news that that good soldier and Christian gentleman, sans peur et sans reproche, Major General Sir Vincent Eyre, C.B. and K.C.S.I., a retired colonel of the Royal Artillery, who was one of the gallant band, had died there after a lengthened illness which it was hoped would have been alleviated by his residence in that milder clime. Sir Vincent Eyre was born in 1811. He was educated at Norwich Grammar School and at the Royal Military College, Addiscombe, entering the service of the Honourable East India Company as a cornet in the Bengal Artillery December, 1829. During the operations in Afghanistan in 1841-2 he saw his first active service, being engaged at the defence of Cabul during the insurrection there in 1841, and commanding as a volunteer a detachment of Horse Artillery in two successful actions, being severely wounded at Beymaroon, Nov. 22. In the disastrous siege of Cabul he bore an honourable part; and in the terrible retreat from that place with the forces of General Elphinstone he, with so many other brave men, was made a prisoner by Akbar Khan and conveyed to the Afghan capital. The imprisonment of these brave men stirred the British Government in India to make great efforts for their release, and General Pollock was ordered to march for their relief; but, before that officer left Jellalabad with the relieving forces, Akbar Khan had sent two of the captive British officers to treat for the liberation of the whole. He wished, however, to make the British evacuation of Afghanistan the condition for restoring the prisoners; but, as the terms were inadmissible, negotiations ceased, and General Pollock issued a manifesto to the chiefs of Cabul stating his intention of marching upon the city, and promising them that, if they restored the prisoners, their property would be protected and their city spared, but, if they allowed Akbar Khan to remove them, they must be held responsible for the consequences, and that every house in Cabul should be razed to the ground. The result of General Pollock's march on Cabul is well known, but before he had fought his decisive action—the Tezeen Pass—and ensured the liberation of the captives, Lieutenant Eyre and several of his companions escaped from their captivity, and joined General Pollock's camp, after having been held prisoner for eight months. Returning to England the following year, he published an interesting work, giving an account of the military operations at Cabul, which has been of great service to subsequent historians of those campaigns. In September, 1846, he was made a captain of the artillery, and in June, 1854, a major, in the interval between these two periods having devoted much study to scientific inventions and practical engineering. During the trying time of the Indian Mutiny he greatly distinguished himself, commanding the field force for the relief of Arrah, and in two successful actions against the Dinapore brigade and the Jugdespore rebels under Koer Sing, on August 2nd and 12th, 1857, receiving the special thanks of the Governor General in Council, the brevet rank of lieutenant colonel (Dec. 11, 1857), and the Companionship of the Bath (Military Division). He also commanded the same field force in the defeat of a large body of Oudh rebels at Koondunputtee on Sept. 11 in the same year, for which he again received the special thanks of the Governor General in Council, and was also brigadier of artillery in the Gwalior contingent at the first relief of Lucknow by General Sir Henry Havelock, and the occupation of the Alumbagh by Sir James Outram. He was further rewarded with the brevet rank of colonel, dated March 24, 1858, and, after commanding the artillery division at Alumbagh during the final siege of Lucknow and in the repulse of the attack on March 15, received the Indian medal with two clasps, and a year's service for Lucknow. Subsequent to the suppression of the Mutiny he served as superintendent of the Royal Gunpowder Factory at Ishapore, and as inspector general of Ordnance in Bengal, reaching the substantive rank of colonel in November 1862, and retiring from the service on full pay with the honorary rank of major general in the month of September following. Since that period he had mostly resided on the Continent, and during the terrible conflict between France and Germany, 1870-71, he acted as chairman of the Boulogne branch of the English National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded, and made public some of his experiences in a little work entitled "A Fortnight's Tour among the French Ambulances." Sir Vincent Eyre, who was a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and of other learned bodies, was created a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India in 1867 as a reward for his services in India. He was twice married; firstly, in 1833, to Emily Ahmuty, only daughter of the late Colonel Sir James Mouat, Bart., of the Bengal Engineers, and after her death, which occurred in 1851, secondly, in 1860, to his cousin, Catherine Mary, only daughter of the late Captain Thomas Eyre, R.N.

THE PERSIAN ARMY.

SITUATE as Persia is, between Afghanistan and Asiatic Turkey, both of which are countries in which there are British interests to preserve, it behoves us to watch carefully the growth of her military institutions, so as to prevent any sudden danger arising to us from a quarter already looked upon with grave suspicion by a large section of the Anglo-Indian school. It is not so very long ago that a telegram announcing the movement of Persian troops from Meshed was construed into an intention on the part of the Shah to endeavour the recapture of his old stronghold, Herat. These suspicions were soon set at rest; and, indeed, the condition of the Persian army has not been such of late years as to make any such adventure probable. Meshed lies on the highway from the Caspian to the key of India, distant about 215 miles from the latter place. Its garrison, however, consists of but nine battalions of infantry, a regiment of cavalry, and a couple of field batteries, in all about 8,000 men—a force scarcely sufficient, in the eyes of the Persians, for the capture of their once-famed stronghold. In addition to this, a force of about 1,000 horsemen is employed in patrolling the road between Meshed and Khosan, the frontier town.

The present condition of the Persian army is not such as would warrant an offensive war being undertaken even against the Afghans. Nominally consisting of 100,000 men, it is doubtful whether a fifth of that number could be called under arms. The population is not warlike, is not addicted to carrying arms, and would not, under the present régime, respond to a call for military service. In Afghanistan, on the contrary, every adult male is a born soldier, is accustomed to bear arms from childhood, and as, even against our well-equipped, well-disciplined troops, these semi-trained, badly-armed hordes made a formidable stand, they would be able, it is more than probable, to hold at bay any force Persia, unaided, could send against them.

Under the present organisation the Persian army consists of seventy-seven battalions of infantry, of an average strength of 800 men; seventy-nine regiments of cavalry, consisting of eight troops of fifty sabres; a strong regiment of engineers, and 200 guns. The various grades are:—Ameer-i-Toman, or General of Division; Ameer-i-Pung, or General of Brigade; Surteep, or Colonel. The regimental ranks are represented by Surhang, or Lieutenant Colonel; Yawar, or Major; Sooltan, or Captain; Naib-i-Awwal, or First Lieutenant; Naib-i-Doyum, or Second Lieutenant; sergeant is called Vakeel, a corporal a Dahbashee, and a private Surbaz. It is remarkable that the organised forces of Persia proper have seldom been adequate for home defence. The nation has in a certain sense sustained its vitality by absorbing, or, in the end, throwing off, the conquering hordes who accomplished its subjugation; but its forces have not the less successively succumbed in the field to the attacks of the Arabs, Turks, Afghans, Russians, and, more recently, English, in a manner that belied the power and prowess of a people who once held sway from Egypt to the confines of China. To attempt to estimate the military strength of Persia on the basis of the existing organisation of the army would be delusive. That organisation is, in plain terms, a sham. It retains but the shadow of the system improvised by the British officers who, on two successive occasions, were lent to the Shah as military instructors. Now—as probably in ancient times, but now exclusively—the bone and sinew of the Persian army is derived, not from the Persian speaking population of the country, but from the Toorks of Arzarbiajan; still retaining to a very great degree their tribal formation from the Kurds of the mountainous districts of Persian Kurdistan and from the Loor, Bukhtigar, and the Eliaut tribes who inhabit the mountain chains extending southward and eastward from the great range of Zagros. The standing army of Persia is, with the exception of the Shah's body guard, made up of the regiments nominally raised in the above districts; the chiefs and khans of the various tribes are nominated to commissions in the regiments furnished by three clans. The officers consequently are devoid of all military education; drill and discipline, in our sense of the word, being unknown. All promotion goes entirely by favouritism or, what is far worse, by bribery. Still there are many officers who only need instruction to become very fair soldiers. They take an interest in their men and in their profession, and are in truth the mainstay of the present Persian military system. The plan by which the army is raised is by conscription, very arbitrarily applied to districts and tribes; the War-office makes no attempt to proportion its demands to the statistics of the population of these divisions, and many towns manage to evade the conscription altogether, so that it falls very unequally.

The nomad tribes, who possess no Court influence and are not wealthy enough to bribe the War-office officials, are thus called upon to furnish more than their fair share of the burden. The men are supposed to be replaced by fresh contingents annually; but it practically happens that if a man does not care to run the risk of deserting or cannot bribe to get his discharge, he remains a soldier for the rest of his life. The physique of the men is undoubtedly good, and they are of a quiet, cheery, and submissive disposition, possessing all the material of good soldiers, needing only the moulding into shape. They are credited with wonderful powers of marching, but it must be remembered that nearly every man possesses a donkey, on which he usually rides himself, and carries the rifles of such of his comrades as are less fortunately situated. A Persian regiment on the march, therefore, scarcely presents the same aspect as one of a properly-disciplined army. There is seldom any attempt at order, and when once the command to march is given each owner of a donkey mounts his animal and goes along at his own pace. This system is, of course, fatal to discipline, but there is no doubt it enables Persian regiments to get over in one day an extent of ground no troops could accomplish solely on foot. The infantry are dressed in a badly-made tunic of the European model, and as the men generally wear their own long frock coats under their tunics the effect is absurd and unsoldierlike. The head-dress is a black lambswool busby, with a brass ornament representing the Lion and the Sun; but during the summer the men generally tie a cloth over their heads and wear the busby over all. An attempt has been made to introduce breech-loading rifles into the army, and a certain number, it is believed, have been imported; but the majority of the troops are armed with muzzle-loading, smooth-bore percussion muskets of French manufacture.

The cavalry are rough and ready, of a decidedly irregular type; yet under good leadership capable of performing excellent work. They are, as a rule, well mounted on strong, serviceable nags; there is no regulation as to the height of the chargers, and a fourteen-hand pony is often seen in the ranks next to a sixteen-hand Turcoman horse. Their uniform consists of long, dark blue frock coat; sheepskin busby, with movable peak; boots of untanned, brown leather, reaching half-way up to the knee. Like Circassians they do not wear spurs, but each man carries a short whip. Their arms consist of a rifle and sword; the latter is of an extremely curved shape, with no protection for the hand. The belts are of brown, untanned leather, the cartridges of their carbines are carried in stitched receptacles on the cross-belt, thus doing away with the necessity for a pouch. The horse equipment consists of a narrow, brown leather headstall with picketing chain attached; to the end of this is fastened a light, but strong camel's-hair rope, with an iron peg. The saddle, though not the same shape as ours, is a very strong serviceable article, and underneath it are invariably carried two numdahs; the horse clothing, which is made of felt, is carried in a roll behind the saddle, and in heavy marching order a pair of khorzeens, or saddle-bags, made of carpeting, are slung over the whole.

The artillery is, perhaps, the best disciplined corps in the Persian army. Their armament, however, is very defective, consisting for the most part of old, smooth-bore nine-pounder guns; but it is said that a large number of the Uchatius rifled cannon have been introduced into the service. Col. C. M. McGregor, who in 1876 accompanied a Persian force on the march from Meshed to Sarakhs, says the "men were simply splendid in physique and had all the attributes that raw material should possess. The way they got their guns over places that would have made many a more civilised gunner stare was remarkable."

Although the Persian army nominally contains 100,000 men, it is doubtful whether more than 20,000 are ever under arms at one time, and these are invariably to be found garrisoning the chief towns or else guarding frontier posts. The remainder of the force (80,000 men) are tending their flocks and herds, employed in agriculture or in trade, endeavouring to earn a livelihood which their military profession sadly interferes with. The pay is nominal, but rarely seen; and their rations, though on a liberal scale, are not often forthcoming. The consequence is that when not actually on duty the soldier is often seen driving his not too reputable trade of drug dealer or usurer; while the sentries often relieve the monotony of their posts by erecting small stands for the sale of wares to the passers-by.

It is the concurrent testimony of all who have been connected with the Persian army, or who have had opportunities of witnessing those portions of it quartered at a distance from the enervating influences of the chief towns, that no people in the world present better rough material for soldiers than the Persians. Their physique is admirable; there is an absence of all intemperance among them; their general intelligence and personal courage are beyond all praise; in fact, there is a material out of which any European Power could construct a military force, equal if not superior, to anything Turkey could produce.—Times.

THE BERLIN CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS.

THE International Congress of Orientalists was opened on Sept. 12, in the aula of the Royal University. The Minister of Education, Von Gossler, welcomed the guests in a speech of real eloquence, delivered extempore, in which he dwelt on the importance of Oriental studies as throwing light on the ancient history of mankind, and as forming, particularly in our century, a connecting link and channel through which the civilisation of the West could exercise its vivifying influence on the East. He dwelt in modest terms on the contributions made by German scholars to an accurate and scholar-like knowledge of the East, and recalled the memories of Schlegel, Humboldt, Bopp, and others as the founders of that science of language which unites into one focus all the rays of knowledge issuing from the various departments of Oriental research. He was followed by Professor Dillmann, the President of the Congress, who gave a rapid account of the preceding congresses and of the preparations made for the present one. He told the audience that, originally, Dr. Lepsius, the great Egyptian scholar, had been chosen as president, but that his health had not allowed him to accept that post of honour. He did not tell the assembly how he had himself been chosen unanimously, as president, both on account of his eminent position as an Oriental, and chiefly Ethiopic, scholar, and as a recognition of the honourable and impartial character which during a long and most successful career he had always borne in public as well as in private. He, too, claimed but a modest share for the Oriental scholars of Germany, dwelling on the great opportunities which countries like England, France, Russia, and even Italy possessed, by their commercial and political relations with the East, for the discovery of antiquities, the collection of manuscripts, and the practical acquisition of Eastern languages. His speech was a decided success, and was warmly applauded. Afterwards the different delegates of foreign governments, universities, and learned societies were invited to address the meeting. Professor Schefer, speaking in French, presented to the Congress the first fasciculus of the long-expected Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum, published by the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres. Similar addresses followed by Professor Amari, Messrs. Ascoli, Tiele, Gubernatis, Gottwaldt, and others. The only longer address was delivered by Professor Max Müller, as delegate of the University of Oxford. He fully admitted, in his speech, the great advantages which England, and in particular the English universities, enjoyed in the study of the East. He gave an account of what English orientalists had achieved, and how far Oxford had been able to contribute to the cultivation of Eastern learning. But he did not conceal how much more Oxford might have done, and might still do for true oriental scholarship. He said:—

"No university has so many and so close relations with the East as Oxford. If England is the greatest Oriental empire, Oxford and Cambridge ought by right to be the greatest schools of Oriental learning in Europe. Think of India, with its nearly 300,000,000 of inhabitants, drawing every year its best civil servants from Oxford and Cambridge. Think of China, Japan, Persia, Arabia, Egypt, Africa, even the Malay and Polynesian Islands—everywhere England has its stations, its missions, its harbours, its colonies, its empires. From merely practical reasons the two high schools of England cannot ignore the duty of supporting and encouraging, by every means at their command, a scholarlike study of those countries and people, with their languages, customs, religions, literatures, and antiquities. The English universities would cease to be universities if they did not assign to the East its legitimate position by the side of the West. Much, no doubt, has been done of late in the two English universities for the advancement of Oriental scholarship, and more may be expected from the immediate future. But the practical interests of mere instruction predominate too much, and often to the total exclusion of real scholarship. We have had of late to appoint, for instance, teachers of Tamil and Telugu, of Hindi and Hindustani, of Bengali and Marathi. We have a chair of Sanskrit, founded by an Indian colonel, chiefly for the sake of educating civil servants and missionaries for India. We have besides a young Indian, Pandit Shyamaji Krishnavarman, who is present here to-day, and who gives useful instruction in Sanskrit conversation at Oxford. It is even intended to found an Indian Institute, to which the natives of India have most generously sent their contributions in the hope of supplying young Indians studying at Oxford with an education corresponding to their wants. Our Professorship of Chinese was chiefly endowed by English merchants who had made their fortune in China, and wished to enable young Englishmen to fit themselves for a really useful career in that country. These are the advantages, the bright side of English Universities in their practical relations with the East. But I must not pass over in silence their dark side. The practical interests preponderate so much over the purely scientific that in spite of all efforts made by the friends and representatives of Oriental philology, in spite of appeals addressed to the Commission which had been appointed by Parliament for the reform of the Universities. Oriental languages which are no longer spoken, whatever their importance may be for the history of mankind—nay, even for a correct understanding of classical and Biblical antiquities—are still without their recognised representatives at Oxford. English student who wish to attend lectures on hieroglyphics or Egyptian antiquities or cuneiform inscriptions, Babylonian and Assyrian antiquities, on the literature of the Veda, or of Buddhism—nay, on Semitic and Persian antiquities—have to emigrate to the poor universities of Germany and France! The evil is all the more crying because, as you know, there are in England at the present moment thoroughly competent representatives of these branches of Oriental learning; nor do I doubt that in a short time a remedy will be found. Whenever evils cry very loud in England, they are cured, and cured thoroughly. Another impediment in the cultivation of Oriental studies in England is the absence of all support which in other countries is given by academies, by wise ministers, and even by enlightened Sovereigns to Oriental undertakings. You have no idea of the difficulty of getting any paper of purely scientific interest printed in England. In France, in Italy, Germany, Russia, nay, even in Hungary and Roumania; you have academies which publish new texts or translations, new investigations of every kind, without any expense to the author, nay, often with a remuneration for him. In England there is an immense amount of important material lying buried and unused. No encouragement whatever is held out for purely scientific work, and no books can hope for success unless they are able to appeal to the interests of the larger classes of educated men and women. It has sometimes been said that this state of things has its advantages, and obliges scholars to give to their works such an internal and external perfection that even the darkest problems become transparent, and the most remote investigations are brought in contact with general human interests. I admit that this kind of artistic perfection, this true and genuine popular style, which we find in England in the works of Darwin, Huxley, and Tyndall; in Germany in men such as Mommsen, Helmholtz, Dubois, Reymond, and others, is the highest degree of perfection which true science can reach. But in our Oriental studies we have not yet reached that stage. We have still to cut stones before we can build temples, and it is exactly for this kind of work that we want the help and protection of universities or academies. And here it gives me genuine pleasure to be able to tell this assembly how of late the University of Oxford has recognised the duty to assign some share of its large resources to the publication of works of Oriental scholarship. With the assistance of the Indian Government, and chiefly through the exertions of Lord Salisbury, as Chancellor of Oxford, and then Secretary of State for India, the funds have been provided for publishing a collection of translations of the 'Sacred Books of the East.' Nearly twenty volumes of this series are ready, and whoever has the will and the knowledge to take a part in this truly international Oriental undertaking will always be welcome. Of still greater interest will it be to this congress to hear that the University Press of Oxford has lately encouraged a new undertaking—namely, the publication of 'Anecdota Oxoniensia,' of which I have the honour to present to our president in the name of our university the first number. Here, too, the interest is purely scientific. Whatever is still an anecdota, whatever has not yet been printed or published of MSS., whether Aryan, Classical, Semitic, Mediæval, preserved in the Bodleian and other English libraries, may here be printed without involving any sacrifices on the part of the editor. It is well known how rich Oxford and England in general are in unpublished literary treasures. If only the true men of science will come forward—the hardworking miners, the discoverers and conquerors in the field of knowledge—I can promise that the charge so often brought against the English Universities, that they are good teachers (Lehrerin) but not increasers (Mehrerin) of knowledge shall not be brought again."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

"SIR,—Having just returned from Berlin, I trust you will allow me to say that your correspondent, in his lively account of the International Congress of Orientalists recently concluded at that capital, omitted to mention that, as a delegate of the Government of India, I paid a tribute to the efforts made by our Government for the encouragement of Eastern learning, and for the preservation of important inscriptions, archæological remains, and manuscripts. In showing how the Rig-veda is still used in the daily morning and evening prayers of 200,000,000 of Hindus committed to our rule, I pointed out that our Government had liberally provided the funds which enabled Professor Max Müller to bring out his laborious and costly edition of that work, and expressed my regret that, notwithstanding the estimation in which it is still held as the most sacred of India's sacred books, it does not find a place among the series of versions of 'Sacred Books of the East,' in the publication of which the Government of India is also rendering substantial aid. Those of your readers who are old enough to remember the ably-conducted controversy to which you opened your columns more than twenty years ago on the question of the applicability of the Roman alphabet to the languages of India—in which Sir Charles Trevelyan took a leading part—will be interested in learning that the paper I read at the Congress on that subject led to the appointment of a commission of inquiry, composed of many learned German scholars, which will report to the next Congress on the best method of transliterating Oriental alphabets.—Your obedient servant, MONIER WILLIAMS."

ORIENTAL LEARNING IN ENGLAND.

THE following letters have been addressed to the Editor of the Times :—

"SIR,—I think that a reference to some facts connected with our Indian administration will suffice to show that neither the University of Oxford, nor the English, nor the Indian branch of our Indian administration has neglected the increase of Sanskrit learning. The first Governor General of India was Warren Hastings, an early and zealous friend of the cultivation of Oriental learning. Many causes had kept Hindu knowledge shut up in a few native minds. Among them a chief cause was the Mahomedan conquest of the great part of civilised India, and the reluctance to communicate to the outside world the supposed teaching of the Divine Spirit in some form or other manifested. Sir William Jones was one of the very first and most zealous promoters of Oriental learning. I do not represent him, as some writers do, as one himself, a great Oriental scholar; but he was a great propagator, nevertheless, founding the Asiatic Society, himself the first president of it. Early imbued with a love of letters and of Oriental learning, educated at Harrow and Oxford, and himself a man of letters, he was able to do great and efficient service for that republic. He promoted the translation known as Jagan-natha's, a digest, with comments on Hindu law, from the institutes of Menu. Johnson, with his noble zeal for letters, urged on both Jones, Chambers, and Hastings, none of whom, indeed, required the spur in that course and new field. Colebrooke, still regarded as one of the very best of lawyers, as respects Hindoo law, coeval in time and equal in merit, and in like manner encouraged by Hastings, was the translator and expounder of that law from the alleged Divine text or the confused human comments on it, and was lexicographer, lawyer, judge, and writer at once, undertaking and completing amid his official work, not light, labours which I can scarcely exaggerate. In my now rare perusals of lectures and works on Hindu law I find his name still cited with the old and just respect both by English and native writers. Jones was Oxford-bred, and was greatly assisted there in his early career in his Oriental studies. There grew up in India a school, as it were, of Orientalists, aided greatly, subsequently, by missionary zeal. Bopp introduced comparative philology, and that, as it were, new science with its developments, England did not originate. But Eastwick translated him, and Wilson, the Boden Sanskrit professor at Oxford, helped to forward that new branch of learning. About the time of Macaulay's entrance on his Indian life, the battle, not of books, but of schools, was raging in India between the Orientalists and the Occidentalists contending for the direction of Indian thought. Something unfortunately too much like party spirit was mingled in words, at least, with that dispute. Macaulay, then new to India, even then a great name in literature, espoused, with all his power, zeal, and dexterity in pointing his language, the side of the Western world. A very learned Hindu lawyer, the late Prosoonnocoomar Tagore, showed in his preface to the 'Chintamani' that he resented these rhetorical stings. The language both of Macaulay's minute and of that of Lord William Bentinck was unguarded and too general, but neither really meant to disparage the Hindu ancient learning. The tide was not turned back nor meant to be diverted. It would be as just to say that any one of the Oriental school, in directing attention to the old learning, more than 3,000 years old, of the Hindus, meant to throw any rubbish on the rising fire of science. The present Boden Professor, Monier Williams, yields in zeal and work to none of the past or present cultivators of Sanskrit learning. His works evince his labours. His reading, his writing, his travels, all speak his zeal (it would be presumptuous in me to speak of his knowledge). What he does, Oxford—I may say England—does by his agency. The water is brought to the horse. Here and there an eager lip will drink; such studies can never become general; other studies, for many reasons, are more attractive, but if I may judge from my limited observation, the good cause makes progress.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, "LAWRENCE PEEL."

"SIR,—You will confer a great favour on me by allowing me to complete my catena of early supporters of Eastern learning in India by adding the names of two honoured Governors General of that early time—viz., Lord Cornwallis and the first Lord Teignmouth. I wrote from memory. I have since read Sir W. Jones's original preface to his 'Persian Grammar,' Johnson's three letters to Hastings, and Colebrooke's dedication of his translation of Jagan-natha's digest, 'to the memory of Sir William Jones.' Johnson sends Hastings Jones's 'Persian Grammar,' and Jones acknowledges his obligations to the two noble lords whom I had from forgetfulness, I hope excusable in me, omitted to name.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obliged servant, "LAWRENCE PEEL."

"SIR,—Having just returned from Berlin, I trust you will allow me to say that your correspondent, in his lively account of the International Congress of Orientalists recently concluded at that capital, omitted to mention that as a delegate of the Government of India I paid a tribute to the efforts made by our Government for the encouragement of Eastern learning and for the preservation of important inscriptions, archæological remains, and manuscripts."

OBITUARY OF THE WEEK.

GENERAL HENRY RIGHY, Colonel Commandant of the Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, who died at his residence in Clanricardegardens, Bayswater, on the 14th of September, was in his 71st year, having been born May 10, 1811. Having received his professional education at Addiscombe, the East India Company's military seminary for the scientific branches of their service, he obtained a nomination to a cadetship in the corps of Bengal Engineers in 1829, and was promoted to be first lieutenant in May, 1839. In December of the latter year he was appointed to the Public Works Department as executive engineer of the Cuttack and Balasore districts, in the south-eastern provinces of Bengal. He attained the brevet rank of captain in 1844, and on May 30, 1854, he was nominated executive engineer to the Fifth or Benares Division, being transferred to the Punjab on October 28, 1856, as officiating superintending engineer of the First Circle at Lahore, this arrangement being necessitated by the departure on furlough to Europe of Col. Robert Napier (now Lord Napier of Magdala), who then held the position of chief engineer in the Punjab. In 1854 Righy was promoted to a brevet majority, attaining the same rank regimentally in 1857. The outbreak of the Indian Mutiny found him at Lahore, having been confirmed as superintending engineer there on April 14, 1857, and he rendered good service in the sphere of his professional duties, though he does not seem, like so many of his more fortunate contemporaries, to have had an opportunity of earning honours in the tented field. He became a regimental lieutenant colonel on August 27, 1858, and colonel on March 12, 1861, being for several years about this period on duty at Barrackpore, near Calcutta, where he continued till his promotion to the rank of major general in January, 1871 (his commission being antedated to March 6, 1868), when he obtained a furlough to Europe, and did not again return to India. His subsequent rise in military rank was exceptionally rapid, for he attained the grade of lieutenant general on March 31, 1875, and became full general on August 15, 1878, being placed on the retired list in May last on attaining the age of seventy years. By General Righy's death there is a vacancy in the list of colonels commandant of the Royal (Bengal) Engineers, to which he was nominated on March 31, 1875. By the decease of Gen. Righy, Gen. John R. Becher, C.B., Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, becomes colonel commandant.

We have to record the death of General Thomas James Gallo-way, Colonel of the 70th Regiment, which occurred a few days ago at Kilmacogue, near Naas. The deceased, who was in his 82nd year, entered the Army in 1821, obtained a lieutenancy in 1825, and a captaincy in 1827. He was actively employed in Jamaica during the insurrection of the negroes in 1831-32 in command of a detachment of the 33rd Regiment. He also commanded the Peshawur brigade during the Indian Mutiny in 1857-58 as brigadier of the first class, which appointment he retained until his embarkation with the last division of the 70th Regiment for New Zealand in 1861. He became colonel in 1854, major general in 1863, lieutenant general in 1871, and general in 1877. On his promotion to major general he was appointed to the command of the Colonial forces in the province of Auckland, which post he held during the operations in the North Island down to 1865. He had been colonel of the 70th Regiment since 1874.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

HEALTH RESORTS FOR TROPICAL INVALIDS.* DR. MOORE has produced a little book of great interest and value to Indian invalids in the climatic handbook which he has called "Health Resorts for Tropical Invalids." His first chapter is devoted to a full and careful analysis of the climatic conditions of all the Indian hill sanitarium, with comparative statements of their value in the various disorders which are induced by the heat of the Indian plains. Then we get a brief reference to the value of a sea voyage as a curative measure. But the most interesting as well as the most valuable part of Dr. Moore's researches is that which details the various distinctive features of the health resorts of England and the Continent of Europe. His account of the general characteristics of the Riviera is particularly clear and accurate, whilst to each station therein he assigns its peculiarities, which will enable each person readily to decide for himself to which he ought to give the preference in choosing a refuge after suffering from the Indian climate. So also for the German, French, and Swiss baths, and the various watering-places of England, Italy, and the Mediterranean, the description here given of each is sufficient to enable the reader to answer the question "Is this place likely to suit me?"

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Having been thirty-five years in the Indian Civil Service, from which I retired only in 1878, I have read with much interest your editorial remarks on the subject, and I hope it may do the good that it ought. I can entirely endorse all you have said. It is astonishing what harm thoughtless writing on Indian matters in English papers can accomplish in India. I have been often asked by natives "How can such things be?" as depicted in some English papers. There cannot be a more careful Government than the Government of India, and the same care is impressed on all its servants, and credit should always be given for such when the actual cause for any act is not divulged. The instance which has called forth some of the editorial comments in question is one in point. Even supposing that the relative positions of Mr. Tagore and Mr. Macpherson were reversed, and the former instead of the latter were the senior, it would still have been inadvisable to place a European judge under a native one for his own sake. It is true that native judges are fast gaining the confidence of the country, but it has not yet reached that pitch as to induce them to prefer their cases being heard by them rather than by a European. I was for seventeen years a judge in Bengal, where the appellate work was so heavy that I was obliged to have sometimes two subordinate courts. These courts were presided over by native judges of ability, and, I believe, the strictest integrity, and yet I hardly ever entered my court without numerous petitions being presented to me, either to retain or retransfer cases to my own file. And this might have been frequently done had Mr. Macpherson and Mr. Tagore been located in the same district, and with the former the superior it would have been very galling to him for natives to have been constantly trying to get their cases heard by his European subordinate in preference to himself. Natives have no objection to have their cases tried originally by native judges, but they do not like appeals heard and decided by them. They always like to have the last word before a European judge if they have any confidence in him, though he may be really the less able officer of the two. One of the reasons often adduced for wishing me to take appeals was—"If you decide the case both parties will be satisfied, whereas if a native judge does so the losing party will be sure to prefer a special appeal to the high court, and so greatly increase the costs." I have, no doubt, as you say, that Mr. Tagore would be the first person to approve of the arrangement objected to by the Daily News on his behalf. And I am astonished to read in even the same paper of the 19th inst. that the Secretary of State for India has thought it necessary to call upon the Government of Bombay for an explanation. It is generally thought that calling for an explanation can do no harm; but this is not so in India; there is nothing which annoys a native official more than for his superior to call for an explanation from him; and let his explanation be ever so satisfactory it takes a long time before the feeling wears off, and he seldom really forgives the person who has complained against him. It always impresses him with the idea that he will never stand so high again in the opinion of his superior. What, therefore, must such persons think of the Government of Bombay being so treated? The fact of an explanation having been called for on such a matter will be printed in every paper in India, and, probably, the explanation will not appear in any; and the general feeling amongst the native population will be that the Government of Bombay cannot be trusted in the smallest matter by the Home Government, and though, in European estimation, it seems preposterous to say so, the prestige of the Bombay Government will be lowered. This can hardly be credited by anyone who has not had long personal experience of the native mind and character, but I am sure that it will be endorsed by everyone who has, as I have, lived amongst the natives of India for so many years. And I cannot help thinking that some good might be done if retired civil officers did not keep their experience so much to themselves but occasionally brought it to bear on the Indian questions of the day. If what some say is true about the Government of India or Bombay having been called upon for an explanation by the Secretary of State for India, "a caution" is not unnecessary to the London Press, but also to those who govern India from home; and it is obvious that the "London correspondent of the Hindoo Patriot" is entirely wanting in any practical experience of India and the native character, for otherwise he would never have approved of the article in the Daily News.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Cornwall, Sept. 24.

AN OLD INDIAN.

THE TELEGRAPH TARIFF.

Now that the telegraph rates are again under consideration it is much to be desired that any changes which may be introduced may be marked by a large and generous spirit, and that the public may not again be put off with some petty tinkering of the existing system. The Telegraph authorities seem to feel a timidity and fearfulness of the result of granting anything like extensive concessions such as perhaps might be natural in a pedlar experimenting with the sale of his wares, but such as we scarcely expect to find in a public department whose first reason of existence is not its own pecuniary advantage, but the public convenience. From time to time the department had laboured mightily with the question of telegraph rates, and the public had been led to expect that at last the demand for cheap telegrams would be satisfied.

These anticipations, however, have been considerably chilled when confronted with each reformed code of rates. At the same time, the concessions being of the pettiest description, traffic has not been stimulated to any appreciable degree, and the department has experienced an exacerbation of its usual depression when considering the probable effects on its receipts of further concessions. That the trifling reductions of the telegraphic rates to which we have been accustomed should not produce an increase of traffic is precisely what might have been expected, and the argument which it is attempted to infer from it cannot legitimately be drawn. On the contrary, experience seems to show that, in transactions of this character, in order to induce people to take advantage of concessions made to them, the concessions must be considerable and thorough-going. The introduction of the penny postage system is a case in point on which the telegraph authorities might reflect with possible profit. In making such concessions the department would of course run some risk; it would, as it were, have to take a leap in the dark. We should like, however, to know any matter of human concern wherein, metaphorically speaking, every fresh action does not involve a step in the dark. The probabilities, judging from the result of experiments similar in principle, go to show that the telegraph department would be justified in taking upon itself the risks of really thorough-going concessions. We are glad to know that these views are to a great extent shared in a quarter likely to bring considerable influence to bear on the settlement of the question. We hope that, in considering the subject, the Government of India will not be influenced by the perhaps necessarily conservative opinions of the Telegraph Department. Beyond furnishing the facts and figures needed for the proper discussion of the question, there appears to be no reason why the department should have voice or part in the matter at all. As in the controversy regarding the telephone, its action will almost of necessity be unreasoning and obstructive.

Since writing the above we have learnt that the following are some of the changes believed to be contemplated in the revision of the telegraph rates. It is proposed that there should be three classes of messages; express, at four words the rupee, to have precedence over all other messages, and guaranteed to be delivered at their destination within a certain time; ordinary, at sixteen words the rupee, to be despatched in the usual way; and deferred, probably at thirty-two words the rupee, to be kept over till night. A large number of service messages will, it is hoped, come under the last head. Certain concessions will also be made to the press; but this question has not yet been decided.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE LEGAL MEMBER.—Letters from Simla state that Mr. Whitley Stokes will not serve the full period of his term of office, but will leave India in November next. His appointment, as member of the Executive Council of the Viceroy, would terminate in April next year. His Simla house, known as the "Myth," has been bought, together with the whole of the furniture, by Brigadier G. Leslie, Inspector General of Royal Artillery. It is said that Mr. Stokes intends proceeding on a lengthened tour in America, and that it is very probable he will take up his final residence in the United States.—Englishman.

A RUSSIAN TRAVELLER IN INDIA.—The man who died the other day in the Montgomery District, and on whose body certain Russian papers were found, was a Khokandi. The Russian papers consisted merely of one document, giving the bearer permission to move from Khokand and settle in Tashkend, and dated Jan. 1, 1881.—Indian Mirror.

DEATH OF SIGNOR NICOLINI.—Many of our readers will regret to see among our domestic occurrences the announcement of the death of Signor A. Nicolini, which took place on Friday, the 2nd inst., after a protracted illness. Signor Nicolini had long been one of our most popular teachers of music and singing, and the large number of excellent singers in Calcutta who owe their success to his efforts furnishes the most convincing proof of his skill. His annual concerts were among the events of the season that were always looked forward to with pleasure, and the support that was given him on these occasions both on and below the platform showed the high regard in which he was held. The funeral took place at half-past seven o'clock on Saturday morning.—Englishman.

SIR ASHLEY EDEN.—The personal influence of the Lieutenant Governor on the leading families of Bengal is certainly most beneficent. He has saved the Durbanga Raj from the blighting effects of a heavy law-suit by bringing about an amicable settlement of the dispute between the two Rajas. He has, according to our Dacca correspondent, suggested a reference of the suit between Newab Abdul Gunny and his relatives to an arbitration for compromise. He has been the means of reconciling the young Maharaja of Burdwan with his mother, by inducing him to give up his idea of going to England, and by taking him under his protection, has rendered him fit to receive his family title.—Hindu Patriot.

THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Baden-Powell, C.S., left Simla on the 18th inst., for Dehra Dun, in order to deliver a series of lectures to the students of the new Forest School and a certain number of forest officers, on Forest Law. The school will be under the general supervision of the public-spirited head of the Forest Department, Dr. Brandis. We also hear that Dr. Schlich, the conservator of forests in the Punjab, accompanied Mr. Powell to Dehra Dun, for the purpose of also delivering lectures to the school on some branch of forestry, but we have no further details regarding the interesting experiment that is now being tried in India, in order to give to students of forestry in this country all the advantages of training hitherto only accessible in Europe.—Journal of the Anjuman-i-Punjab.

MAHAMMED HYAT KHAN, C.S.I.—We understand that the case of Hyat Khan will come on at Lahore after October 15 next when the Judges of our Chief Court will have returned to the capital of the Punjab.—Ibid.

NEWSPAPER POST.—It would be greatly to the interest of the native press, if papers of the weight of ten tolas and under could be despatched at a price a copy, if "Exchange" copies to their contemporaries could be sent post free, and it a similar boon could be extended to packages containing newspapers despatched by railway to stations on the line for purposes of local sale.—Ibid.

THE FOREST TRAMWAY AT DARJILING.—Very rapid progress is being made with the construction of the Forest tramway line, and it is quite probable, judging from present appearances, that the rails will have been laid down by, at all events, the end of next cold weather. The road starts from a point on the Darjiling railway close to the Goom village, and is carried along at a very easy gradient from thence to a place called Lepchajuggat. The length of the line from its junction with the railway may be roughly estimated at four miles, more or less, and a very considerable portion of this distance has been metalled already. The road passes under the southern part of the Goompahar forest until it touches the ridge at Lepchajuggat, and, as we said before, in constructed on an easy gradient throughout. This line when completed and in working order ought to secure an ample supply of good fuel to Darjiling at moderate rates, and it is certain to be a great advantage to tea planters owning property on either side of the ridge, as they will be enabled to send their produce to the Jor Bungalow station for less than half what it costs them at present.—Darjiling News.

OFFICIAL ASSURANCES.—It is a satisfaction to know that our own frontier is perfectly secure, as the Press Commissioner has repeatedly assured us.—Indian Spectator.

THE PREMIER BENGAL NOVELIST.—We are glad to hear that Babu Bankim Chandra Chatterjee has been appointed to officiate as Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the place of Babu Rajendra Nath Mitra, who has taken leave. The Bengali language, and with it the province in which that language is spoken, owe much to this distinguished writer. Babu Bankim Chandra is the creator of the novel literature of Bengal, and his works, judged even by the strict standards of European criticism, are models of the highest finish and skill. In honouring such a man the Government has honoured the country of which he is a distinguished ornament.—Indian Mirror.

NEWS FROM MANDALAY.—The news from Upper Burma is in the same old and doleful strain. From every town and village on the banks of the Irrawaddy between Allan Mayo and Bhamo the burden of the cry is the same—the bulk of the people have been ruined by the lotteries; and to intensify their distress they can only sell their produce to monopolists, and that at such rates as the latter shall fix, which are, of course, as low as they possibly can be made. Monopolies have already been granted for purchase by the traders of cutch and cotton, in addition to that of jageri or raw sugar, which was disposed of some time ago. The salt monopoly is still under consideration, we believe; at least nothing definite regarding its disposal or otherwise is known in Rangoon. As one result of the hard times prevailing in Upper Burma, a steady stream of immigration is flowing into this province from beyond the frontier. The immigrants locate themselves along the banks and creeks of the Irrawaddy delta, and hire themselves out for labour in the paddy fields and plantain and pineapple gardens. As they gather a little money they get their relatives down from King Theebau's territories; and thus, in course of time, whole families become quiet and contented subjects of her Majesty the Queen Empress.—Englishman.

DEATHS.—Col. Dalrymple-Hay, of the Bengal Staff Corps died at Puna on Wednesday morning. The death is also announced of Col. Hopkins, a well-known unattached officer, who rose from the ranks.—Times of India.

SIR A. LYALL AND SIR S. BAYLEY.—Sir A. Lyall goes home in the steamer leaving Bombay on the 20th inst. Sir Stuart Bayley, the Resident at Hyderabad, has engaged a passage for Brindisi in the same steamer, the Mongolia.—Ibid.

THE AURORA FRAUDS.—Capts. Harris and Elmiston, two prominent characters in the Aurora frauds cause célèbre, have been granted free pardons.—Ibid.

THE MECCA PILGRIMAGE.—The Indian Government are considering the propriety of establishing a consular agency on the Red Sea coast for the protection of natives of this country on pilgrimage to Mecca.—Ibid.

OVER LEGISLATION.—At a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council the Hon. Whitley Stokes has made a speech, replying to the article in the last Quarterly Review which accuses the Indian Government of over-legislation.—Ibid.

LADAKH.—News has been received in India that Mr. Dalgleish, who was formerly connected with the Central Asian Trading Company, passed through Ladakh lately en route for Yarkand on a trading venture.—Ibid.

THE MILITARY SECRETARY TO THE VICEROY.—Lord William Beresford, V.C., succeeds Lieut. Col. White, V.C., as Military Secretary to his Excellency the Viceroy.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA TEA.—Owing to the success the Indian tea industry has achieved in Australia the merchants engaged in the trade intend opening up a market in America.—Englishman.

INDIAN VOLUNTEERS.—An official return recently published shows that on Dec. 1, 1880, there were in India 8,734 enrolled volunteers, of whom 6,950 were efficient.—Ibid.

THE ARMS ACT.—The retainers of Raja Sheoraj Singh, C.S.I., of Kashipur and Burhapur, in the North Western Provinces, have been exempted by the Viceroy from the operation of the Arms Act.—Pioneer.

EDEN GARDENS.—A tender for the lighting of the Eden Gardens and a part of the Strand, Calcutta, has just been accepted.—Englishman.

THE SIMLA SEASON.—The festivities of the Simla season will be closed by a masked fancy ball, to be given by the members of the Simla Club.—Pioneer.

UNREST AMONG THE BHILS.—All is not yet quiet amongst the Bhils, for a telegram from Udaipur on the 25th ult., to the Times of India, states that on the previous day the Bhils had killed five sowars engaged in arresting criminal Bhils.—Englishman.

UNREST AMONGST THE SANTALS.—There is a report that the Santals are again beginning to show symptoms of disquietude, but arrangements have been made by which a strong force of police can be concentrated in any part of the district at very short notice.—Ibid.

SIR ASHLEY EDEN.—The Lieutenant Governor will leave Darjiling again about Nov. 15 on a tour in Behar, where he has promised to visit the great Behar chiefs—Bettiah, Dumraon, and Hatwa. He will stay at Muzafarpur, Chumparun, Bettiah, Chapra, Hatwa, Gaya, Patna and Dumraon, and will arrive at Burdwan on his way to Calcutta for the season, about the first week in December.—Ibid.

THE BISHOP OF RANGOON.—We regret to learn that the Bishop of Rangoon's medical advisers have ordered him to proceed to England with the least possible delay. It appears that injury to the spine has lately manifested itself—an injury of which at the time of his accident in the Karen Hills there was no indication. He leaves direct for England in the s.s. Amarapoora early in September.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—The market has been extremely quiet, in great contrast to the recent excitement. At date of departure of mail the amount of unfixed tonnage in the port was 9,000 tons. Rates, for London via canal:—Wheat, 75s.; wheat, 67s. 6d.; London via Cape:—Wheat, 60s., 57s. 6d.; jute, 65s., 60s.; linseed 60s.; rapeseed, 62s. 6d. Liverpool via Cape:—Wheat, linseed, and castor oil, 57s. 6d. all round; linseed, 58s. 9d. For Dundee, 65s. for September loading.

MADRAS.

THE 14TH HUSSARS.—The 14th Hussars, who went from Bangalore to Natal six months ago, are expected back at the end of October.—Madras Times.

BISHOP COTTON'S SCHOOL.—The Rev. Mr. Hildersley, headmaster, Bishop Cotton's School, Simla, has been selected to succeed Dr. Pope at Bishop Cotton's School, Bangalore.—Ibid.

THE CROPS.—The season report for the week ending August 23 shows that the rain has fallen in some quantities all over the province, and that prospects are more encouraging than before.—Ibid.

CHEMISTS' QUALIFICATIONS.—At the meeting of the Madras Legislative Council recently the Hon. Mr. Coleman obtained leave to introduce a bill for regulating the qualifications of chemists and druggists.—Madras Times.

THE MYSOR RAJ.—The Maharaja of Mysor has issued a minute stating that it is his desire to take into his confidence his subjects regarding administrative affairs, and with this object a meeting will be held at Mysor after the Dussera festival of all the representative landowners and merchants, when the Dewan will report the results of the past year's administration and submit a programme of the coming year.—Times of India.

RELIEF MEASURES IN KURNOOL.—The south west monsoon has failed in Kurnool, and the Madras Government have authorised the local collector to adopt, if he considers it desirable, a suggestion of Mr. Latham, chief engineer and manager of the Madras Irrigation Canal Company, to irrigate the dry crops at half rate or at quarter rate at lowest. It appears that there has never been so dry a July recorded in Kurnool except in 1877.—Ibid.

A PRESENT TO H.H. THE NIZAM.—To-day being the commencement of the Eed festival, as is customary, all the city nobles, &c., will present their nuzzars to his Highness the Nizam. We hear that a magnificent sword and belt are to be presented to his Highness by the Nawab Shums-ool-Oomra and Ameer-i-Kabeer, the co-regent. The sword and belt are said to have belonged to the late Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Aziz, and are valued at two and a-half lakhs of rupees. The handle and scabbard of the sword are covered with diamonds, several hundreds in number, and with those on the belt aggregating in weight two thousand five hundred carats. There are two splendid ones on the handle of the sword, one weighing 110 carats and the other eighty-five. The belt is of gold studded with diamonds, especially at the clasp. Altogether, a more costly sword and belt was never perhaps seen.—Deccan Times.

CARRIAGE ACCIDENT AT OOTY.—An accident, which, serious as it turned out, might have had even more fatal consequences, occurred last Sunday. As the sanitary commissioner was driving round the lake in an open victoria, one of the horses stumbled on a loose stone but immediately recovered itself. The other horse became a little alarmed when suddenly the splinter bar of the carriage broke, and at once the horses, already alarmed, took fright and bolted. With the bar broken they were of course unmanageable, and running the vehicle against a boulder upset it. The doctor was thrown out, but happily not hurt, more than a severe shaking. The horses, however, having kicked themselves free of the trap, bolted down the road, cannoned off a pony carriage, severely frightening two ladies therein, and then in their mad fright kicked one another so that one had his leg broken and had to be shot, and the other is severely hurt. This is not the only carriage accident we have to record. The Governor's private secretary was run into whilst driving a mail phaeton, and the whole affair was upset in a ditch.—South of India Observer.

BOMBAY.

THE KANDAHAR CROSS.—Much satisfaction has been given to the Bombay army by the official announcement that the Kandahar Cross is to be awarded to the troops which composed the Khelat-i-Ghilzai garrison during the siege of Kandahar.—Times of India.

CENSUS RETURNS.—The total population of Bombay, according to the census returns, is 773,000, against 644,405 in 1872.—Ibid.

SENIOR SCOTCH CHAPLAINCY.—The Rev. T. H. Greig has been promoted to the senior chaplaincy of the Scotch Church in the Bombay Presidency, vice the late Rev. Dr. Macpherson.—Bombay Gazette.

THE P. AND O.—From Jan. 1 next the P. and O. steamers from Bombay will proceed direct to London instead of calling at Southampton as at present.—Ibid.

CRICKET IN BOMBAY.—The great cricket match of the season in Bombay, between twelve local players and a similar number from the Mofussil, was played in Bombay, the stumps being drawn in favour of neither team.—Times of India.

BOMBAY FREIGHTS.—The native piece goods dealers of Bombay have entered into a combination against the rate of freight charged by the large steamer companies, and arranged with the Inch Line to run fortnightly steamers to Bombay for one year.—Ibid.

THE CHOLERA EPIDEMIC.—The cholera epidemic has slightly abated in virulence during the past week; but the mortality is still great.—Ibid.

INSTALLATION OF THE GAEKWAR.—The Government of Bombay has been requested by the Viceroy to represent him at the forthcoming installation of the Gaekwar of Baroda.—Ibid.

THE CHOLERA.—The number of deaths throughout the Bombay Presidency reported during the week ended August 26 was 1,399, as compared to 1,020 in the preceding week. And in some cases, as at Nasik and the Haveli taluka, near Puna, it is merely stated in the district reports that there have been some deaths from cholera, without figures being given. The disease appears still to be worst in the Khandesh district, where 402 deaths and 909 cases were reported. The Ahmednagar district comes next with a sad record of 369 deaths and 838 cases, and the Sholapore district third with 156 deaths and 349 cases. In four talukas of the Surat district where the disease is still prevalent 132 deaths and 213 cases were reported. In Baroda city there were 32 cases and 59 deaths; in Ratnagiri district, 32 deaths (number of cases not mentioned); in Thana district (Kalyan, Bassein, Salsette, &c.), 31 deaths and 55 cases; in Ahmedabad, 12 deaths and 29 cases; in Puna city, 3 deaths; and in Mehmabad (Kaira) and Ankleswar (Broach), each 2 deaths. In Bombay city there were last week 18 deaths, as compared to 22 the week before. Cholera is also causing a large number of deaths in Lahore, Jullundur, and several other stations in the Punjab.—Bombay Gazette.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPT. 26, 1881.

ORIENTAL LEARNING IN ENGLAND.

WE English are not in the habit of looking to Government for aid in the encouragement of literature, or science, or art. Of the vast endowments that maintain our universities, and that cover the land with a network of scholarships and exhibitions, some—and these not the least famous—owe their origin to the munificence of Sovereigns, but the munificence was that of the individual, not that of the Government. Until quite recently all our great literary, scientific, and artistic enterprises have been undertaken and carried out by private effort, or by a combination of private efforts; receiving not unfrequently countenance and patronage from Royalty, and more rarely material assistance from the Government of the day, but substantially depending on the contributions of individuals or companies. Nor was the magnificent patronage accorded to Oriental literature by the East India Company really an exception to this general rule; for the Honourable Court, in voting the liberal grants it was accustomed to allot to this purpose, was dealing with its own money, and not exercising a cheap generosity out of the public purse.

It may with some reason be alleged that this public parsimony, as contrasted with our private munificence, is an honourable testimony to the integrity of our public men, in dealing with the revenues of which they are merely the trustees. But it must be confessed that the results of this tendency have been in many respects unfortunate, even when its motive and cause have been honourable. For instance, it can hardly be doubted that, since the rule of the Crown has succeeded that of the Company Bahadur in India, Oriental scholarship has not received that amount of attention in England or in India that it formerly received, or that it still receives in Germany. So far, then, Professor Max Müller was well within his right when, speaking at Berlin as the representative of the University of Oxford in the Congress of Orientalists, he loudly bewailed English apathy, and the difficulty of getting help here even in such a small matter as the cost of printing the results of Oriental research. We cannot doubt that good will flow from his outspoken complaint.

At the same time it is quite possible that this indictment may be pressed, in public opinion, further than is just. Whilst much has been left undone by Government that might have been hoped for by Oriental scholars, it is only fair to remember that much has been done; and we have much pleasure in reproducing from the Times the testimony to this effect of Professor Monier Williams and Sir Lawrence Peel. It may be that undue prominence was given, at the Berlin meetings, to English national shortcomings in this respect. The recent triumph of the Indian Survey Department at the Geographical Congress in Venice is good evidence of the liberality of the Indian Government in one branch of science. The surveys of the Indian Marine Department have done more for marine hydrography than those of any other body. The Geological Survey, the Archaeological Survey, the preparation of the "Imperial Gazetteer," the work of the Meteorological Department, all these attest the willingness of the Indian Government to accept its scientific responsibilities where a good case for them has been made out. And the letters we publish to-day show that its patronage of Oriental literature and learning, if less marked—doubtless because the material advantages to be derived from such work are less—is still given with liberality and discernment.

THE PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.

WE are glad to learn that at last the Secretary of State has accorded his sanction to the immediate introduction of the necessary legislation that is to raise the Punjab University College to the status of a university. We do not believe in the multiplication of Indian universities; Germany is a warning against this. But the Punjab has special claims for the establishment of such a university as that which is now to be created. The Rases of the province have shown an earnest desire for it. They have justified the gratification of their wish by the energy with which they have worked for it, and by the liberality with which they have subscribed to aid the movement. And, lastly, the Punjab University College has worked out for itself a special sphere of usefulness in the encouragement of Oriental literature, both classical and vernacular, side by side with the Western learning which it has pledged itself not to neglect. We heartily congratulate the Rases of the Punjab, and in particular the Anjuman-i-Punjab and its energetic President and Committee, on the attainment of the object they have so bravely and perseveringly fought for. And we doubt not that they will turn to advantage, not only the privileges now to be given them, but also the long and at times somewhat heated discussion that the subject has evoked. The chief objections that have been urged against the Punjab University have been—(1) that it will compete unduly with the Calcutta University, and thereby lower the value of the degrees of both; and (2) that it will retard the advance of Western civilisation in the Punjab by its excessive devotion to orientalism. These objections will serve the Punjab Education Department and the Senate of the new University as beacons to warn them off dangers that might otherwise have proved fatal to the success of their scheme. Their endeavour must be not to rival but to co-operate with, and, if possible, to supplement the work of the Calcutta University in Northern India. And further, they must beware of allowing their devotion to oriental studies—in itself most valuable—to draw their University into anything like antagonism to English learning. The directors of the movement have, on more than one occasion, most earnestly professed their entire adhesion to the policy here suggested; and the perseverance and discretion with which they have fought their battle to a successful issue are the best guarantee that they will firmly and wisely carry out the programme they have accepted for their guidance.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Junna left Portsmouth for Bombay on the 22nd, calling at Queenstown to-day. She embarked at Portsmouth seven conductors and staff-sergeants, twenty women, and twenty-eight children, and the following officers:—Lieut. Col. Hole, 2nd Warwick; Lieut. Col. Gossett, 2nd Dorset; Quartermaster Lewis, 13th Hussars; Lieut. Barton, 2nd Lancashire; Major Harvey, 1st King's Own Borderers; Capt. Roche, 2nd S. W. Borderers; Capt. Davies, P. W. At Queenstown the Junna will embark Capt.

Deverell, Dickinson, and Allcard, and eighty-six men of the 2nd Norfolk Regiment; Lieut. Baines and 104 men of the 2nd Gloucester Regiment; Lieut. Palmes and Grimston and 278 men of the 2nd North Lancashire Regiment; Capt. Romanes and Hewat, Lieut. Mayne, and sixty-four men of the 1st King's Own Borderers; Major Dalgety, Lieut. Gray, and seventy-seven men 1st York Regiment; Major Frend, Lieut. St. Leger, and 207 men of the King's Royal Rifles; Lieut. St. John Mildmay and 180 men 4th Rifle Brigade, eight women, and eleven children; and Lieut. Way, 2nd East York; Major Newbolt, 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers; Major Egerton, 2nd Liverpool; Surgs. Glover and Kettle, Veterinary Department; Major Bellis, 2nd Somerset; Lieut. Beresford, 2nd S. W. Borderers; and Surg. Arches, Army Medical Department. Previous to her departure the Junna underwent a thorough repair and refit at Portsmouth, and made a satisfactory trial of her machinery on Saturday, Sept. 17, the run on the previous day having proved a failure in consequence of the heating and eventual biting of an eccentric pin belonging to the after link motion. The ship has received new decks and been provided with steam-steering gear, while the engines have had the high-pressure slide valve and cylinder face filed and refaced, and been fitted with a new eccentric rod and pin. The ventilation of the stokehole has also been improved, and it is understood that new engines will be supplied next year. The trial was conducted by Mr. Charles Icely and Mr. Morcom, and resulted in the following data being obtained as the means of a two hours' full power steaming, the draught of the ship being 17ft. 8in. forward and 22ft. 5in. aft:—Steam in boilers, 60·7lb; vacuum, 25·3in. forward and 25·5in. aft; revolutions, 47·64 per minute; indicated horse-power, high pressure, 955·99, low pressure, 1,644·59; total, 2,600·58 horses; speed, 11·56 knots per hour. As in the case of the Malabar, the new steering gear was tested in turning against the old hand system with twelve men at the wheel. Steering by steam, and circling to starboard and port respectively, the angle of rudder was 33 and 33½ degrees, and it took 14 and 13 seconds to put the helm over. The half circles were made in 3 min. 18 sec. and 3 min. 37 sec. to starboard, and 3 min. 5 sec. and 3 min. 23 sec. to port, the full circles being completed in 6 min. 55 sec. and 6 min. 28 sec., having diameters of 763 and 717 yards respectively. Steering by hand, the angle of starboard rudder was 28 degrees, and of port rudder 31½ degrees, the time occupied in putting the helm over being 2 min. and 1 min. 20 sec. The starboard half circles were made in 3 min. 43 sec. and 3 min. 55 sec., and the port half circles in 3 min. 13 sec. and 3 min. 5 sec., and the full circles in 7 min. 38 sec. (starboard) and 6 min. 18 sec. (port). The diameters were 916 and 739 yards. As the ship was leaving the jetty her steam-steering machinery was carried away, and she was steered out of harbour by her hand-steering gear. Some dockyard artificers were sent out to Spithead to remedy the defects before sailing.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were to Calcutta, Rs. 17,80,000; Bombay, Rs. 17,10,000; Madras, Rs. 10,000; average rate, 1s. 7 8-12d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 7 13-16d. will receive about 98 per cent. The sum of Rs. 35,00,000 is to be offered again next Wednesday.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the Silver Market showed no symptoms of improvement. On the contrary, the tone in bars was decidedly weaker at 51 11-16d., Mexican Dollars being unaltered at 51d. per ounce. The entire amount of Council drafts offered was allotted, the tenders this week receiving 98 per cent. of the total applied for, against 24 per cent. at the previous issue. This result is regarded in some quarters as a proof that the policy of the Council in raising the rates for the drafts upon the value of silver is justified. The probability is, however, that the Exchange Banks simply were in want of remittances, and for that reason only tendered at a figure which happened to prove acceptable to the Council. Exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta recovered 1-16d. to 1s. 8½d. respectively, Hong Kong being 3s. 8½d., and Shanghai 5s. 1½d. Rupee Paper advanced ¼, to 91¼. On Thursday business in silver was inactive, though the price of bars was unaltered at 51 11-16d. per ounce. Mexican dollars were flat at a decline, the price being ¼d. lower, at 51d. The Eastern exchanges remain unchanged.—On Friday no transactions worthy of record took place in the market, bars being quoted as previously, at 51 11-16d., and Mexican dollars at 50½d. per ounce. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents. receded ½, to 90½ to 1¼. The exchange from Bombay was telegraphed at 1s. 8½d., but the day was observed as a holiday in Calcutta. From Hong Kong the figure was 3s. 8½d., and from Shanghai 5s. 1½d.—On Saturday the market was quite featureless, bars being quoted at 51 11-16d., and Mexican dollars at 50½d. The Eastern exchanges were as follow:—Bombay and Calcutta, 1s. 8½d. respectively; Hong Kong, 3s. 8½d.; and Shanghai, 5s. 1½d.

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.—The directors announce that the net profits for the half-year ended June 30 last, including the balance brought forward, amount to £19,414, and that they have declared the usual interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, carrying forward £7,783.

VISCOUNT COMBERMERE.—The marble bust of the late Field Marshal Viscount Combermere, executed by Mr. Theed, and presented to the Household Cavalry Brigade by his widow, has been placed in the mess-room of Knightsbridge Barracks. It is admirably executed, and all the details of the uniform accurately produced. On the marble pedestal are enumerated the principal battles and actions in which the Field Marshal was engaged—his services having extended over a period of seventy-five years—commencing with "Flanders, 1793, Cape of Good Hope, Malavelly, Seringapatam, Douro, Talavera, Busaco, Sevia, Villa Garcia, Fuentes d'Onor, El Bodon, Castrejon, Salamanca, Orthes, Toulouse, and Bhurtapore, 1826."

THE NEW TWIN SCREW STEAMER "TOWER HILL."—This steamer, which is the second built for the Twin Screw Steamship Company of Liverpool, made her trial trip on the Firth of Clyde on Friday. The Tower Hill is a steel vessel of 4,100 tons, is fitted with twin screws, worked by independent sets of engines, and will carry 5,000 tons dead weight of cargo at a speed of about thirteen knots. Her length is 420ft., breadth 45ft., and depth 26½ft. She has been constructed to suit both the eastern and western trade, being fitted with punkahs for the east and with heating apparatus for cold climates. The twin screw, as has been shown in her sister ship, the Notting Hill, effects safety and economy. The consumption of fuel by the Notting Hill on her voyage to Calcutta is said to have been 1½lb. per indicated horse-power, which is the most economical on record. The new vessel has ten of Turner's patent boilers, her crank shafts are made of Vicker's cast steel, and she is fitted with steam steering gear by Harrison, of Manchester. Besides having all the most modern improvements in shipbuilding the Tower Hill has passed the Admiralty Department for the transport of troops, having eleven water-tight compartments, all of which extend to the deck, and can be fitted as a cruiser in the event of war, the boilers and engines being protected by coal armour. On the 'tween decks she could carry 1,000 troops. As a trading vessel she can carry 1,000 head of cattle. There is accommodation for thirty-cabin passengers, but that accommodation could be indefinitely extended. The Tower Hill, which is built on the same lines as her sister ship, the Notting Hill, was built by Messrs. Dobie and Company, of Govan, who have also another vessel of the same description, the Ludgate Hill, on the stocks for the same company. The engines, of which there are two sets, were supplied by Messrs. James Howden and Company, of Glasgow. They are inverted cylinder compound surface-condensing (tandem), the high pressure having a stroke of 33½ inches, and the low pressure 48, and can be worked up to a steam pressure of 125lb. The managing owners of the company are Mr. W. H. Nott and Mr. W. Becket Hill, of Liverpool. The Tower Hill ran over the measured mile three times, and the mean speed obtained was about 14½ knots. It should be added that the propellers were not entirely under water. After the trial had been made the company sat down to luncheon, which was purveyed by Mr. Forrester, Gordon-street, Glasgow, in the saloon. Mr. Young, of Dobie and Co., presided. In reply to the toast of success to the Tower Hill, Mr. Nott, after referring to the advantages of the twin screw, said the company had started at a rate of insurance lower than had yet been made in shipping. Mr. Hill also spoke of the advantages of such construction of vessels as in the Tower Hill, and pointed to the fact that the Notting Hill, during her voyage to Calcutta, had behaved most admirably in all weathers, and consumed 25 per cent. less fuel than the ordinary ocean-going steamers.—Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.—The third annual dinner of the officers who took part in the relief of Lucknow under Generals Outram and Havelock was given on Saturday night, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. Lord Napier of Magdala presided, and there were also present Lieut. Col. Batting, Major General J. Gordon, Capt. J. Robertson, Lieut. Col. Blake, Major General Dodgson, Capt. P. L. Phipps, Col. Neville Shute, Col. Delaposses, Col. Spurgin, Lieut. Gen. Olpherts, V.C., Col. Barker, General Willis, Major Woolhouse, Col. Stewart, and Major Savory. Each member of the company wore the colours of the ribband belonging to the Indian Mutiny medal. After the loyal toasts the chairman said it was his duty to propose a tribute to the memory of their departed comrades, coupled with the names of their commanders, Generals Havelock and Outram and Brigadier Neill. He had served under General Outram when he commenced his march to Cawnpore. He was requested to convey to General Outram that the Government expected that he would lead the forces to Lucknow. The general appeared to be much distressed about it, and was angry with him for having been the medium of the message. Suddenly he felt some one pull him by the elbow, and the general said, "I have it now; I will go in my political capacity." The general was struck with distress at the idea of having to fill the place of General Havelock, so much so that he could scarcely speak a word. All who were connected with the conflict must remember the generous nature of Sir James Outram; how anxious he was to preserve and reserve his soldiers as far as he could. He always endeavoured to give them every comfort he possibly could until the very moment they were wanted for service. They must all remember the determination of General Havelock; how sternly he dealt with himself, and how determined he was to force his way through to Lucknow. On one occasion there had been some momentary coolness between General Havelock and himself; but while he (the speaker) was preparing some holes for the mines, and his hands were all black and greasy, the general held out his hand and insisted on shaking hands with him. Most of them, too, would remember the cool determination of Neill. He marched on to Lucknow with that bravery which marked his career to the end. He was quietly and calmly watching the advance of the troops at the very moment when he was struck. Memories of such men as those were their great treasures—examples for future generations of soldiers. They could not do better than preserve, in the most sacred manner, the memories of those great men and of those brave comrades who fell nobly in the performance of their duty. He asked them to drink to the memory of their departed comrades. The toast was drunk in solemn silence. Lieut. General Olpherts proposed the health of their living, though absent, comrades; and Major Savory responded to the toast of "The Hon. Secretary," and the proceedings closed with "The health of the Chairman," which was cordially received.

HONOURS AND REWARDS.—Indian good service pensions have been conferred upon the following officers:—Col. H. N. D. Prendergast, V.C., C.B., Royal (late Madras) Engineers; Col. Robert A. Clephane, Madras Staff Corps, and Col. Francis Dawson, Madras Staff Corps.

COOTACOVIL GOLD MINING COMPANY.—The statutory meeting of shareholders was held on Monday, Sept. 12, at the Cannon-street Hotel; Mr. James Labouchere in the chair. The Chairman said they had, no doubt, all read the circular which had been sent round, which treated pretty fully of what they had come here to do. This was a statutory meeting, at which it was very difficult, as a rule, to say much; but he was glad to think that they were further advanced in this company than in many other companies which were started at the same time or before. As usual, when a company was formed they had to get a conveyance, which, as usual, had been delayed. It so happened that the exact sketch map of the estates came in a little late; but, in due course, the property had been handed over to the Cootacovil Company by the vendors, the Tambracherry Company, and the money had been paid over by the Cootacovil Company. The directors had called only 10s. per share, which had been sufficient for the purpose of getting into possession, and there was no intention on the part of the directors to call more money just now; but, perhaps, the time might come when they might want more money. But if it should so happen that there was any little pinch for money, they had a powerful man in Tambracherry, who would assist them with a little money. At any rate, the directors did not consider it necessary to make any more calls at present. The price which they had given for the property was a very moderate one. The reef ran through it, and it had been surveyed by Mr. Harvey, who, from the surface, took samples which had been analysed. It had also been tested by an adit, which was driven 60 ft. below the surface, and further tested by another adit, and finally by what was called a main level or bottom of the hill, where they intended to put up the machinery. They could gain the same reef exactly in the line of all the places where it had been seen on the hill in other places. They had proved the reef to the depth of 250ft., nearly through the hill. More would have been done if possible, but since June they had the monsoon, and it was dangerous to work underground until the tunnels were supported by wood work in a correct manner. It would no doubt happen, from the enormous quantity of rain which had fallen, that the water would filter through. One adit had caved in, but no one was injured, which was fortunate, because if half a dozen men had been injured it would have probably had an unfortunate effect upon the native labour, which the directors looked upon as important in the carrying on of the workings. The company had a superintendent who understood native labour, and had been in the district twenty years, who knew the value of such labour, and was fairly training a set of men to work under the Cornish miners who were to be sent out. As regarded the progress which had been made, the directors had ordered twenty heads of the revolving perpendicular stamps approved by Mr. Harvey, which would be supplied by the last week in October, or the first week in October. Those stamps would arrive in India about the middle of December, and by the time they reached there Mr. Harvey would have arrived on the spot with engineers and mechanics, and would be prepared to put up the machinery. The choosing and preparing of ground was a matter of very great importance, for if they put the mill a little too high or a little too low, they would incur expenses which would be avoided by a more judicious selection of the site. A spot would be chosen where they had the best part of water—namely, the bottom of the hill, and in future, when they had gone down 250 feet from the top of the hill to the bottom level they might have to go lower down, but in the meantime he hoped there would be force enough to work without troubling them with water or anything in the way of pumping. There was the 60-feet adit, which had caved in, and the superintendent was now cutting another almost next to it. He was also engaged in making an adit 120 to 130 below the surface, which would give a distance of eighty feet to stope afterwards; and finally they were cutting away on the main level 250 ft. from the surface, where they were energetically carrying on the work and opening out the reef. The directors had sent over a man (who must have arrived by this time), who had had some years' experience in India, who would be employed in putting up buildings, and making himself generally useful. The Cornish miner left for India last Monday; he had served in India in former years, so the directors had secured men who would at once set to work. Finally, but not least important, they had engaged, under the superintendence of Mr. Harvey, a mine captain, who had to hold a place of great responsibility. In all they had done the directors had tried to avoid needless expense. They hoped that by the time the stamps were up, there would be many tons of quartz ready to be crushed. The directors considered that they possessed a most excellent adviser in Mr. Harvey, and he was very glad indeed to take this opportunity of expressing the entire satisfaction of the board at the way in which Mr. Harvey had commenced operations. It only remained for the shareholders to give him fair time, and he hoped in a few months they would receive excellent telegrams about the progress of the company. He did not think there was a company started under fairer auspices, and there was not one in which the expenditure had been more carefully watched, or where things had worked more smoothly from the beginning. A shareholder asked whether they were likely to have a settlement and quotation of the Stock Exchange? The chairman said the papers and documents, which were all in perfect order, were now before the Stock Exchange Committee, and there was every reason to believe it would be granted very shortly—probably in about a fortnight. A shareholder said that probably the meeting would like to hear a few words from Mr. Harvey. Mr. C. J. Harvey said that, after the explicit manner in which the chairman had given all the necessary details, there was really very little for him to say. But he might mention that everything possible had been done, not only in regard to economy in the present, but also having regard to the future. At considerable inconvenience to himself he was about to take a trip round the world, in order that he might secure for the company the right class of men to put the machinery in order with as little delay as possible; and he hoped, on his return, to tell them that it was at work. The class of men he would secure in Australia were men who would take it in hand and put the machinery to work, and by that means he hoped to gain some months on those who had started before them on the race for wealth. He was not surprised that one adit had been destroyed; nor would anyone who knew what Indian rains were be surprised that, in the absence of timber, one level had caved in. He had advised the manager not to interfere with it, but to start a fresh adit and in dry weather the old adit could be secured. In the meantime the cross-cut be proceeded with, so they would have three points of operation, which were driven at right angles of the vein, but in the bottom, when they would drive on the vein. All they had got to do was to push on as rapidly as possible, and then they would soon have eight ends at work, by which time they would have plenty of stuff for the machinery when erected. It would give about 100 dwts. to the ton, and if they got that they would be exceedingly well paid, and would have a splendid property. (Cheers.) All he had seen of the property led him to the belief that it was better than he had stated. As he had said, he would push on as rapidly as possible, but the shareholders must have a little patience. The directors were pushing the mine legitimately, fairly, and honestly, and he himself was doing all he could to further the interests of the company. (Cheers.) In reply to a shareholder, Mr. Harvey said he believed the vein on the estate was a true fissure vein. A vote of thanks to the chairman and directors closed the proceedings.

THE DUTCH INDIES.—A telegram from the Hague states that the Indian Budget for 1882 has been laid before the Second Chamber. The expenditure is estimated at about 148,000,000 gulden, and the revenue 138,000,000. The deficit of 10,000,000 thus created being added to the accumulated deficits of 1880 and 1881, a total of 28,500,000 gulden is reached, which it is proposed to meet by means of a loan to be concluded jointly with a new loan for the mother country, which will also be shortly required. The deficit of 1882 is ascribed principally to the diminished production and the price of coffee. The sum of 3,500,000 gulden is set apart for the abolition of certain seigniorial rights, the improvement of the eastern mouth of Sourabaya harbour, public works in Acheen, and the expenses of the State railways.

OPIUM AND INDIAN TRADE.—A correspondent at Hong Kong says "Li Hung Chang, the imperial commissioner who signed the Chefoo convention, has sent a confidential agent, the Taotai Ma Kinchung, to Simla, to ascertain how far the Government of India would be inclined to open negotiations with the Chinese Government respecting the opium trade. As Hong Kong is the depot to which the opium goes from India, and from whence it is distributed to the treaty ports in foreign steamers and along the coast of China in native junks, the Taotai remained for a few days in the colony, and obtained from the Government the details of the local trade. It is well known that the Governor desires to put down the smuggling in opium, on the ground that it is injurious to legitimate trade, and that the smugglers who infest the waters of Hong Kong are objectionable from a police point of view. The Taotai left Hong Kong in the French mail steamer on August 11, and has probably had an audience with the Marquis of Ripon before this. It is understood that in addition to the opium question there are two others which Li Hung Chang thinks might be profitably discussed between the Governments of India and China, the general trade now so rapidly developing, and especially the trade in Indian yarns, and the political question respecting the relative interests in Asia of China, British India, and Russia. The conquests of General Tso, and the treaty so successfully negotiated by the Marquis Tseng, have established a formidable wedge of Chinese territory between Russia and the North of British India of more practical value perhaps to us than the so-called scientific frontier."—Times.

THE FLAG OF MYSORE.—The popular idea that the national emblem of Mysore is a double-headed peacock is refuted by a correspondent of a Madras paper, who writes as follows:—"The emblem on the flag of Mysore is the fabulous bird of Hindoo mythology, called in Sanskrit the 'Gunda Bhairoonda,' and the Canarese name for it is 'Gund Warroonda pukshhee.' This fabulous bird has been the principal crest of the Royal family of the Wodeyars of Mysore since A.D. 1399. Regarding the Gunda Bhairoonda, Benfey, in his Sanskrit Dictionary, simply says it is 'the name of a fabulous bird.' 'Gunda' signifies the temple of an elephant.

'Bhairoonda,' in its adjective form, means formidable. As a nominative it signifies a form of Siva, and is also the name of one of the attendants of Durga. This fabulous bird has, in the animal kingdom of Hindoo mythology, the foremost place. The most powerful elephant ranks below a lion, which ranks below the Sarabha, a fabulous animal; which again is inferior to the Gunda Bhairoonda. The emblems of the Maharajahs of Mysore are the sankh, or conch shell; the chara, or quoit of war; the ankusa, or elephant goad; the kuthara, or dagger; the makara, or alligator; the matsya, or fish; the sarabha, a fabulous animal; the salva, or lion, and the fabulous bird above noticed."

THE VERNACULAR PRESS.—The commissioner of the Presidency division, Bengal, remarks in a recent report that, within the territory he administers, the Vernacular Press has no influence of any kind on the mass of the people. The ryot takes little interest in what goes on in the world. The educated tradesman who lives in Calcutta, or in the large towns of the division, reads the newspapers, but more out of curiosity than with a view to getting opinions on affairs of the day. The commissioner, Mr. F. B. Peacock, also reports that the tone of the Vernacular Press, which used to be so objectionable, has moderated since the passing of the Vernacular Press Acts of 1878. "It remains to be seen," says Mr. Peacock, "whether this salutary change will be maintained, if those Acts are repealed."—Pioneer.

EXCHANGE.—Serious attention is being paid, we understand, by influential Anglo-Indian students of the great currency question to a proposal which has latterly been evolved from discussions on bi-metallism. This is a very simple proposal, and its realisation would not accomplish great results at once; but its tendency would be beneficial, and it might pave the way for further steps in the right direction. The proposal is that both the Indian and the English mints should coin a new silver piece equal in value to 34 annas. This piece would not import any new estimate of the value of silver into the Indian currency. It would contain just as much silver as properly belongs now to the value, two rupees two annas. But the piece would, as a matter of fact, be worth just one-fifth of a sovereign at the bi-metallic ratio of 15½ to one. Now in England, for the present, the coin would be merely a subsidiary coin. It would not be legal tender for more than a very limited sum; and therefore it would not in any way disturb the orthodox monometallic position of the British currency. But to begin with, it would offer great facilities to the Bank of England if that institution were willing to exercise its right to hold a certain portion of its metallic reserve in silver. By keeping this silver reserve in the shape of coined 34 anna pieces, merchants in London would always be able to get silver in the most convenient form for remittance to India. This alone would conduce to steady exchange, and would be a great convenience to Indo-British trade. Furthermore, a certain sphere of employment would be opened to silver which would partially relieve the pressure on gold and the congestion of the silver market. For the new coin would be—on the hypothesis of the proposal in view—permitted to circulate in England as a subsidiary four-shilling piece. No new principle of which the orthodox need be afraid would be introduced so far. They could not honestly raise any objection to that arrangement. Nor should they object to permitting the amount for which silver is a legal tender at present to be raised a little—say up to £5 instead of 40s. No principle adverse to mono-metallism would be involved in such a concession, but an important practical lesson in its favour would be taught. People would gradually come to find that they were in no way incommoded in the ordinary transactions of life by being constrained to accept a bag of silver coins when they preferred sovereigns; and by degrees they would come to see that the limit of the legal tender for silver might be raised to infinity without giving them practical inconvenience. Whenever, or if ever, such a feeling should be generated, bi-metallism would get itself established quietly without any shock to the nervous system of the commercial world; and the 34-anna piece would be already familiar as a 4s. piece, which would play the same part in the British currency that the five-franc piece played in France. The coincidence with the fifth part of a pound on the bimetallic ratio is the important point. Once get it introduced as a subsidiary coin, and it stands ready to assume its proper and more dignified position as a standard coin as soon as the stupid prejudice of the monometallists at home may be finally broken down.—Ibid.

THE THEOSOPHISTS.—A new departure has taken place in the working of the society with which Madame de Blavatsky's name is so prominently associated. A branch has been formed at Simla, which its founders call the Simla Eclectic Theosophical Society. Its objects are, first, to help on the Theosophical movement by demonstrating that many educated European gentlemen are desirous of promoting it; and, second, to acquire, through the assistance of the Adept Brothers of the First Section an insight into the psychological truths which they claim to have experimentally ascertained. We confess we cannot make much meaning out of the second of these objects, and our inability to do so prevents us from seeing any particular value in the first object. However, here are the names of the officers of the society for the current year:—President, A. O. Hume, C.B., C.S.; vice-president, A. P. Sinnett; corresponding secretary, Ross Scott, C.S.—Englishman.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo. 288 pp. Cloth, 5s. "Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers over the greater portion of our North-American possessions. The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive, and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chains of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North-West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the Field for such help as is afforded by its pages."

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT AND MALT WINE

(COLEMAN'S).

A DELICIOUS BEVERAGE AND TONIC.

Strongly recommended by the Medical Faculty. An Immediate Benefit is experienced after taking it; the Frame is invigorated, and no ill effects follow.

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT AND MALT WINE (COLEMAN'S).

TESTIMONIALS.

SIR,—A short time since I was induced by the novelty of the title to send for a bottle of your Liebig's Extract of Meat and Malt Wine. I was perfectly acquainted with the value of the Extractum Carnis, and not quite a stranger to the invigorating and fortifying properties of malt wine, and, therefore, felt a natural curiosity to test them when combined.

Men who work hard as I do, not muscular hard work but that which is quite as exhausting, viz., brain work very often experience the need of, and I have sometimes, an almost irresistible craving for a "pick me up," and very often the panacea for a time for lassitude, and that state of mind which renders work irksome, are alcoholic stimulants, the use of which must sooner or later end disastrously.

The man who can furnish a remedy sure, certain, and harmless, for the lassitude which follows constant brain work is a benefactor of his species, and may be said to have added many years of usefulness to the lives of useful men.

Your extract is a success, and when more generally known will be used by all toilers of the mind.—Yours faithfully,

O. D. RAY.

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT AND MALT WINE (COLEMAN'S).

Queen's-crescent, Haverstock-hill,

London, March 5, 1881.

DEAR SIR,—Some time since, being greatly fatigued with over-work and long hours at business, my health (being naturally delicate) became very indifferent. I lost all energy, strength, and appetite, and was so weak as to be scarcely able to walk.

As you are aware, I sent for a dozen of your Extract of Meat and Malt Wine, which in a few days pulled me up marvellously. Three or four glasses of it daily have quite altered and restored me to better health than ever "without the assistance of a doctor."

I am now giving it to my son, twelve years of age, whom we have always thought consumptive, and from a puny, ailing boy he seems to be fast growing into a strong, healthy lad.

Enclosed you have cheque. Please send me two dozen of the "Extract." With thanks for your prompt attention to my last.—Yours truly, I am, Sir,

GEORGE A. TYLER.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

A RIDE TO KHIVA BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

THE SUNDERLAND LIBRARY.

MESSRS. PUTTICK and SIMPSON have received instructions to prepare for SALE by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, London, England, the very large and most important COLLECTION OF BOOKS known as the SUNDERLAND or BLENHEIM LIBRARY. The Library contains about 50,000 volumes, the larger portion of which consists of the Works of the ANCIENT GREEK and ROMAN CLASSIC WRITERS. These are found either in the first or very early editions issued from the presses of the inventors and introducers of the typographic art, or in special editions produced by celebrated printers, which are now treasured either as chefs-d'œuvre of the printing press, or for some peculiar literary interest connected with the text. Many of them are printed upon vellum, and nearly all are of a very high degree of rarity. Another principal and most important feature in the Library is the LARGE NUMBER of EARLY PRINTED and RARE BIBLES. Thus we have the Polyglots of Card. Ximenes, Plantin, Brian Walton, Le Jay, Wold'r, and others—rare Editions of the Hebrew Scriptures and the Septuagint Versions—nearly a Hundred Editions of the Vulgate, including Fust and Scheffer's of 1462, printed on vellum—the rare Edition of J. P. de Ferratis, Placentia, 1475, complete—Editions by B. Richel, Ant. Coburger, Nic. Jensen, Renner de Heilbrum, Georg. de Rivabenis, Nic. Kessler, and other Printers of the Fifteenth Century. Also many Editions from the later presses of I. Colin, R. and H. Stephens, C. Plautin, C. Froschover, Seb. Gryphus, and other less-known Printers. The Editions in English comprise those of 1541 and 1549, 1595 (Queen Elizabeth's copy), 1610 (James I.'s copy on large paper), 1688, large paper with the Visschei plates—the Vinegar Bible, printed on vellum—Macklin's and Baskerville's and other splendid Editions. Also the rare French Editions of 1520, 1531, 1535, 1544, and many others up to 1715—in Italian, 1481, 1502, 1545, &c.; and a few in Spanish, Slavonic, Grison, and other Languages. Most important, too, are the numerous and rare Editions of the early Italian Writers, and Makers and Consolidators of the Italian Language; these are represented by Dante, Boccaccio, and Petrarch, and later by Ariosto, Berni, Machiavelli, Aretino, Bionardo, Tasso, Fembo, &c. Of Dante there are about a Hundred Editions, dating from 1472 to 1583, and including a fine Manuscript of the Inferno, written in the first half of the Fifteenth Century. Of Boccaccio, also, there are numerous Editions, including the famous first one of Valdarfer, 1473, that of Adam de Michaelibus, 1472, De la Ruine des Nobles Hommes, from the press of Colard Mansion, of Bruges, others from the presses of Verard and other early French Printers, &c. Of Petrarch the number of Editions is about the same, and includes many very rare. There are numerous rare Works relating to America, including De Bry's Voyages, the Relations of Vespucius and Cortes, several rare Tracts relating to Virginia, by Bullock and others—Captain Smith's Virginia, Hakluytus Posthumous—Purchas, his Pilgrimages, and many others. There will also be found many rare Spanish and Portuguese Chronicles—a few important English Antiquarian Works, and Historical Works by Dugdale, Clarendon, Burnet, Hearne, &c.—County Histories by Atkyns, Harris, Thoresby, Wood, Skelton, Somner, Thoroton, Plot, Leigh Ware, Grose, Hutchinson, King, Prince, and others, mostly on large paper—Chronicles of Caxton, Hollinshed, Hall, Grafton, &c.—Early Editions of Chaucer, &c.—many Collections of Councils, Lives of Saints, Antiquities—a vast number of Tracts relating to England and France in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries—Old Romances—a large number of Books on Canon and Civil Law, Ecclesiastical History, Statutes and Ordinances, &c.

It is proposed to divide this Sale into three or four portions of ten days each, and the First Portion will commence on THURSDAY, the First of December in the present year.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Corporation will first direct its efforts to the establishment of a Conservative Halfpenny Evening Paper. Experience has shown that an Evening Paper at a low price, vigorously worked, commands a very large circulation, and under proper commercial management, and well edited, proves a thriving and dividend-paying concern.

There are no contracts, and no promotion money will be paid. No allotment will be made, nor will the new Paper appear until £15,000 has been bona fide subscribed, which, from promises already received, the Directors hope will be shortly forthcoming.

In the event of no allotment being made the deposit will be returned without deduction. Prospectuses may be obtained on application to the Secretary or Bankers of the Corporation.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 13; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 11; Calcutta, Sept. 10.

THE official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 30, 1881, says that there has been good and general rain in the Madras Presidency and in the Mysor State; and prospects in Southern India have thus further improved. In some districts, however, particularly Shimoga and Chitaldrug, more rain would be an advantage. Copious rainfall is also wanted in the Nizam's territories; but here, too, some rain fell, with benefit to the standing autumn crops. In the Bombay Presidency drought continues in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country; but in Guzerat and Baroda there has been a favourable break in the rains. In Bengal excessive rain and floods have done some injury to crops in several places, but beneficial, though not in all cases sufficient, showers have occurred in the east, north east, and elsewhere in parts where rain has hitherto been needed. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh the rain was general, but lighter than in the previous week; a break is still required in several places. In the Central Provinces also the weather continues to be too wet. In the Punjab, two districts being excepted, the rainfall was general, and prospects are good as before. In the Central India and Rajputana States prospects are satisfactory; and, although damage is feared, or has been done, in some States from too much rain, in others the crops have been improved by an interval of fine weather. In Assam and British Burma, in Berar and Coorg, prospects remain generally good. The reports of the week, on the whole, show an improvement. The rains have throughout been heavy in the centre of the country, but in some instances a much needed break has now come. Except in parts of the Bombay Presidency where rain is urgently wanted, and perhaps in some Bengal districts which have suffered either from floods or from deficient rainfall, there is good promise almost everywhere of a satisfactory autumn harvest.

WE regret to observe that cholera, at the date of departure of the mail, was causing many deaths daily in Lahore and Meean Meer, and also in Umballa. In the Khandesh, Amednuggur, Sholapur, and the Surat districts of the Bombay Presidency the disease had abated slightly, but still caused several hundreds of deaths in the course of a week. On September 4 and 5 two Europeans and sixty-two natives died of cholera in Lahore and Meean Meer; and thirty had been about the daily average of deaths. Cholera had appeared at Aden, owing to which several days' quarantine had been imposed on arrivals from that port at Suez. For steamers that required to coal only at Aden arrangements had been made to supply their wants without their entering the harbour, and these vessels are allowed free pratique at Suez. So the mail steamers will not be delayed.

WE are glad to observe that telegraphic advices, up to yesterday, continue to be satisfactory in regard to the general prospects in Mysor. The Times Calcutta correspondent says:—"The Mysor harvest reports continue to be good, except the Maidan subdivision of the Shimoga district, where more rain is much wanted."

WE are enabled to state that the Lieutenant Governorship of the Punjab, about to become vacant by the retirement of Sir R. Egerton, which it was reported was to be filled by Sir Henry Norman, has been offered to and accepted by Sir Charles Aitchison, K.C.S.I., who has acted for several years past as Chief Commissioner of British Burma.

THE most important news of the week, telegraphed yesterday by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, is that of the selection of a native envoy to represent us permanently at Cabul when the Ameer returns there. The Viceroy's choice has fallen on Sirdar Muhammad Afzul Khan, C.I.E., the native officer who has risen to fame by the happy chance that selected him as a native orderly officer to the Prince of Wales. The post is one—if its duties are honestly performed—requiring greater tact, ability, and experience than almost any that we could name under the British Crown; and it may therefore be presumed that Lord Ripon has satisfied himself that of all the able men brought to the fore under the British regime in India the officer named possesses those qualifications in a higher degree than any other. The public has absolutely no information on the point. General Muhammad Khan, the Afghan Envoy now at Simla, will remain in India in that capacity.

THE Ameer, after gaining possession of Kandahar, as a result of his victory, devoted to plunder the "Farsiwan friends" of the British in that city. After this proof of his friendly spirit towards us, we now hear that Lord Ripon has determined to "withdraw" the British troops from the Chaman and Khojak outposts, and to reduce the garrison of Quetta! The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs under date of October 2:—

"At a special Council meeting held on Tuesday it was decided to withdraw the British troops from the Chaman and Khojak outposts and reduce the Quetta garrison to its original strength, plus one European regiment, and possibly an extra battery of artillery. This decision seems to show confidence on the part of the Government as to the effect of the recent battle pacifying Afghanistan, which the actual facts hardly justify. Pishin is, however, to be retained for the present."

OTHERWISE, the situation in Afghanistan has not materially changed. Ayub has probably got safely off to Herat; at least, we have heard nothing more about his movements. His next appearance may possibly be in the interesting role of "the Russian trump card," or he may find himself strong enough, on arriving at his natural headquarters in Herat, to do as he did last year after Sir Frederick Roberts's victory—setting himself to organise victory out of defeat.

THE curiously sanguine people, who expected the Ameer to be able at once to start off in pursuit of Ayub, have of course been disappointed. The more detailed accounts of his victory, now received, show that it was won by the merest chance—and largely (if we are to believe the narrative of the Times correspondent with Col. St. John) by a most unaccountable treachery, the desertion of some Herati regiments from Ayub at a critical moment. On this point there is a discrepancy between the Killa Abdulla correspondent and the Calcutta correspondent of the Times; and the account of the latter, that the Heratis broke and fled on the defection of Cabuli regiments, seems a priori far more probable than that sent from Col. St. John's headquarters.

So far from being able to pursue Ayub at once it now appears that Abdul Rahman finds it all he can do to secure the fruits of his victory in the Kandahar territory. And the proposition now before the Government of India is, shall we once more subsidise our Ameer to enable him to follow up his rival and establish his power throughout Afghanistan?

THE hopeless feeling of the whole world of Indian official, civil and military, in regard to the policy—or rather no policy—of the present Government in Afghanistan, is well illustrated by the despairing cry of the Times correspondent with Col. St. John. He hopes to persuade the Ministry to step in now and give their Ameer substantial assistance, by the argument that "any policy is good if you will only stick to it"—possibly true, but certainly not very complimentary to the masterly-inactivity folly. So we are now reduced to debate the question, which is the less pestilent, a policy of masterly inactivity, or a policy that apparently depends on the toss of a Viceregal or Ministerial coin?

The correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from Killa Abdulla on October 2, says:—

"The details of the Ameer's victory telegraphed last Sunday are generally correct, but it was not quite so easily won as at first reported. The Kandahari regiments who formed Ayub's front line at first repulsed the Ameer's attack and even captured three of his guns, when one Cabuli and three Herati regiments in the reserve opened fire on them and the irregulars. The Kandaharis even then withdrew in good order and were intrenching themselves in the old city of Kandahar to make a final stand when the two Cabuli regiments, which had been with Ayub's baggage, attacked them in the rear. The cavalry on both sides took little or no part in the fight. Twenty-one guns fell into the victor's hands, exactly the number we gave him last April. Of the sirdars with Ayub, only Gholam Muhaiddeen-Khan has remained in the city, but several others, among them the Sirtip, Nur-Mahomed-Khan, are in the vicinity hoping to make terms with the Ameer. Certain of the bazaars and some houses of the rich Afghan merchants and of our Farsiwan friends were plundered by the mob and stray soldiers, but the damage done was not great. On the other hand, the villages for a considerable distance round the city were given over to the troops to plunder until noon on the 24th ult., when the plundering ceased by the Ameer's orders. On Friday, the 23rd, the Ameer went to say prayers in the great Mosque, and there, fastened to the door, he discovered a proclamation to which eleven of the principal mollahs had affixed their seals, calling on all Mussulmans to make a religious war against him as an ally of the infidels, and, therefore, an infidel himself. At this he was much enraged, and finding that several of the mollahs who had sealed the proclamation were in a sanctuary in the neighbouring shrine of the Khirka-i-Sharif, so called from containing the cloak of Mahomet, he went there and had them brought before him. Two, in reply to his question, gave him insolent answers, on which he drew his sword, cut one down and ordered both to be bayoneted to death. This was at once done, and the bodies were dragged through the bazaar by horses and exposed in a public place. The other mollahs were let off with a fine. No other act of severity has been committed, but the people of the city are still in fear of its being given up to plunder. This is now very unlikely, but the Ameer will probably impose a considerable fine on the town. Conciliatory letters have been addressed to the chiefs of the Durani tribes, and governors have been appointed to the out districts. Caravans are going in numbers from Pishin to the city, but none are yet coming thence. Sirdar Muhamed Yusuf Khan and Muhamed Aziz Khan, with General Ghulam Haidar Khan—not he who was defeated at Karez-i-Atta, but another—have started for the Trans-Helmand districts with four regiments of infantry and other troops. The Ameer proclaims his intention of following in a few days; but he is said to have exhausted the money that he brought with him, and will hardly leave till he has replenished his exchequer, either from the already depleted pockets of the Kandaharis or by an additional subsidy from us. This, I think, he should have if he asks it. He has to a certain extent earned it, and, on the principle of any policy being good if you only stick to it, we should now support him thoroughly. All hope of a peaceable settlement between him and Ayub Khan is ended. Until he has driven Ayub out of Herat Afghanistan is still divided. Now is his best chance. Ayub's prestige is gone for the time, and the Ameer has a powerful army of Ghilzais, which he cannot keep together for long under any circumstances, and not at all if he is unable to pay them. It will be no more a breach of neutrality to give him money now than it was in April, and the best thing we can do for the Afghans is to give one of the rivals means to end the struggle at once."

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing yesterday, October 2, says:—

"The past week has not added much to our knowledge of the details of the battle near Kandahar. The fortune of the day seems to have been decided, after the usual Afghan fashion, by treachery. On the removal of the Ameer's camp to Karez-i-Niko, Ayub Khan occupied the old city. His rival thereupon attempted to seize the hills commanding that position, and thus brought himself under the fire of Ayub's guns. The action thus begun by the artillery soon became general and continued for some hours, till Ayub's baggage-guard, consisting of two Cabuli regiments, possibly the same which deserted to him at Karez-i-Atta, commenced to fire on the Ghazis. The Herati troops immediately broke and fled, leaving their guns, baggage, and about 250 killed. The Ameer's loss is unknown, but is believed to have been slight. The force on each side is supposed to have been about 15,000. Soon after the action the Cabul army took unopposed possession of the city. It is now rumoured that the Ameer will start shortly in the Herat direction; but he seems to be in no hurry to move.

Doubtless he finds the work of establishing himself at Kandahar and of pacifying the discordant elements there sufficient to occupy him for the present. Nothing has been heard of Ayub since the battle, and as there is good reason to doubt the correctness of the report of Abdul Kudas Khan's capture of Fort Taiwarra, it is not unlikely that the fugitive may reach Herat safely. It remains to be seen whether he will collect a fresh army and renew the war, or wait until driven out by the Ameer and then take refuge in Persia or with the Russians. The latter appears to be the more probable contingency. Meanwhile, the country is reported quiet, and so far as is known the Ameer is still pursuing a conciliatory policy."

THE "conciliatory" element in the Ameer's policy, however, seems to be strictly limited. So far as the friends of the British in Kandahar are concerned, Abdul Rahman is specially stated to have selected "our Farsiwan friends" for the privilege—nowadays so often reserved for the friends of the English—of being plundered. Then as regards the anti-English party—mainly confined to the fanatics—the Ameer has himself "cut down" one hostile mullah, and ordered another to be "bayoneted to death." And the villages around Kandahar have been delivered over to the tender mercies of the Ghilzais, to be plundered as long as there is any plunder to be extracted from them that was not taken by Ayub's people. This is the fate to which we have consigned the Kandaharis by our flight.

THE latest official telegram is dated Simla, September 30, and runs as follows:—

"St. John telegraphs on the 29th.—'No direct news from Kandahar last two days. Caravans are beginning to leave for Kandahar.'"

ANOTHER instance of the despair with which the frontier policy now in vogue is generally regarded in India is afforded by the telegram of the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated October 2:—

"One of the men implicated in the recent attack on a cavalry quarter guard at Kohat, who was severely wounded, has been secured. He belongs to the Malik Din section of the Afridi tribe, and states that the raid was made in revenge for certain executions ordered by the military in the Khyber. It is now generally recognised by the military authorities and the frontier politicians that the plan of paying allowances to the tribes for keeping the passes open and fining them for raids has proved an utter failure, and that so long as we confine ourselves to occasional blockades and military promenades through the hills our frontier difficulties will be unceasing. It is no less generally admitted that there is one simple means by which those difficulties could be settled once for all. A permanent occupation of the plateau of Tirah, in the heart of the Afridi country, would thoroughly overawe the tribes; would give us complete command of the Khyber and Kohat Passes; would afford a splendid strategic position for our operations in the direction of Cabul; and finally, would supply a magnificent hill station, to which most, if not the whole, of the Peshawur and Kohat garrisons might be removed. To take this plateau would not be difficult, and would soon recoup the cost by putting an end to the necessity for frontier subsidies and punitive expeditions. This step has long been urged upon the Government, and there could not be a better opportunity than the present for carrying it into effect. Whether the existing Government will seize the opportunity is more than doubtful."

THE Commission which was lately appointed to inquire into the transport and commissariat operations during the Afghan campaign are said to have discovered a vast system of bribery and corruption, and several influential native bankers have been arrested in India.

FROM the Calcutta telegram in to-day's Times, we learn that the excitement caused by the riots in Mooltan is now subsiding, and order has been completely restored. The shopkeepers have resumed business, although not until some pressure was put upon them. The troops were to have been withdrawn from the city yesterday, but a large extra force of police has been sent thither. Twenty-three Hindus and eighteen Mahomedans have been admitted to the hospital. Many fine buildings, including two mosques and seven Hindu temples, were set on fire and more or less injured. The damage to private property is roughly estimated at £10,000.

THE same authority announces that the Secretary of State has sanctioned, in a modified form, the Army Commission's recommendations regarding the term of regimental commands in the Native Army. The future tenure will be seven years, or till the incumbent attains the age of fifty-two, whichever happens first. The orders for carrying this out will be published shortly.

WE learn also, from the same source, that the Viceroy will hold a Chapter of the Bath at Simla on Tuesday, when he will invest General Greaves and present the Victoria Cross to Colonel White. The officers lately appointed C.B. cannot be invested on this occasion, as the badges have not yet arrived from England.

THE same authority makes the very important announcement that an educational "commission" (query, committee?) will assemble in Calcutta during the coming winter "to inquire into the working of the Educational Despatch of 1854. It will also consider the questions of the education of the masses and the encouragement of higher education by private enterprise." We trust that this measure does not indicate any immediate intention of the Government to contract the range of its operations in aid of the higher education of the country. We cannot yet awhile, at least, afford to withdraw from operations that have given to India the men who now are leading the van of civilisation in that country. For the intelligent development of the resources of the country we need a large number of highly-educated men, and the duty of producing them must not be resigned to "private enterprise" until we are quite sure that private enterprise is equal to the task. In view of the extreme unpopularity that must attend—and hitherto, we believe, has justly attended—any sudden advance in this direction, we trust that Lord Ripon's Government will exercise the greatest caution in making the nominations for this extremely important commission.

THE official and semi-official Russian Press is habitually far less reticent in its references to the Russian advances in the near future in Central Asia than English Russophiles would wish it to be. A Reuter's telegram from St. Petersburg, dated Oct. 2, quotes the semi-official Journal de St. Petersbourg of that day in regard to the position taken up by Russia in the Turcoman Steppes:—"Russia has felt the necessity of guaranteeing her safety in the Steppes in the first place against the Turcomans, and next against any other danger which might threaten her in that direction. It is, therefore, only natural that the Russian Government should concentrate its defensive strength upon that point of the frontier line where danger is likely to arise, and Askabad being the principal strategical point of this defensive position it is equally natural that the Russian troops should occupy the passes situated immediately in advance of it."

"THE passes in advance of" Askabad! The reader will hardly suppress a smile when he remembers Sir Charles Dilke's replies in Parliament a few weeks ago to questions on this subject.

It is announced that Lord William Beresford, V.C., has been offered and has accepted the military secretaryship to the Marquis of Ripon in India, which is about to fall vacant by the resignation of Col. White.

WE understand that Brigadier General T. G. Kennedy, C.B., has been selected to command the expeditionary forces to be employed during the winter on the Indian frontier for the punishment of the border tribes who have lately been making raids on the British territory.

THE new Governor of Madras and Mrs. Grant-Duff, accompanied by Major Spencer, Capt. Audrey, Lieut. Cavendish, and Surg. Major Mackenzie, will leave London to-morrow (Tuesday) for Gravesend, and embark on the P. and O. Company's steamer for Madras.

THE Government of India has under consideration a proposal to establish a Consular agency on the Red Sea coast for the protection of natives proceeding on pilgrimages to Mecca, complaints having been made several times lately of cruel treatment to which the pilgrims have been subjected.

It has been decided, on the recommendation of General Sir F. Roberts, to grant the Bronze Star, commemorating the march of General Roberts's force from Cabul to Kandahar in August, 1880, to the troops which formed the garrison of Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and accompanied General Roberts from that place to Kandahar.

THE names of Majors A. G. Hammond, Corps of Guides, and W. J. Vousden, 5th Punjab Cavalry, have been brought to the notice of the military authorities to receive the Victoria Cross in recognition of the distinguished gallantry displayed by them during the recent campaign in Afghanistan.

WE understand that the Government of India has decided to take immediate steps for the reorganisation of the Transport Department of the Indian Army, and that Col. C. R. Low, C.B., the newly appointed director of transport, is to be called upon to draw up a scheme, which will be submitted for the consideration of a selected committee of experienced officers.

"ART AND LETTERS" is the name of a new monthly magazine, profusely illustrated with engravings of the highest merit. It is "established with the view of offering to the public in a novel form the combined attractions of fine art and light literature." Published at the low price of one shilling, it is a marvel of cheapness, and marks a distinct advance in the art literature of England. The first number contains a large number of charming engravings, together with many interesting articles. We note, inter alia, excellent biographies of Jean François Millet and Frederick Walker, a capital account of the life and works of Mr. Du Maurier, the acknowledged representative of modern English caricature, an ingenious exposition of "Lacemaking at Burano," and the opening chapters of a story entitled "An Ill-considered Blow."

ON December 1 will commence one of the most remarkable book sales of the present century. The first portion of the sale catalogue of the famous "Sunderland Collection," now known as the "Blenheim Library," is before us, and is unquestionably one of the most interesting documents of the kind ever published. The sale will be conducted by Messrs. Puttick and Simpson, of 47, Leicester-square, and we observe that the second portion of this vast library will be sold on April 1, 1882, and following days. The number of books printed on vellum is probably larger than that in any other private library in Europe, and contains several hitherto unknown to bibliographers. But the most important feature in the list is, of course, the wonderful collection of editions—including a marvellous number of editiones principes—of the Greek and Roman classic authors; also the large series of bibles and testaments—editions of the great Italian writers—fathers and councils—English county histories—early English poets—and the well-known and unique collection of French controversial and historical tracts of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. We cordially commend this wonderful catalogue to the notice of those of our readers who are lovers of books.

THE TWIN SCREW STEAMER "TOWER HILL."—This splendid steamer, which has been at Cardiff the last few days, and of which we gave a full description in our last issue, has been visited by large crowds of people. On Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 24 and 25, the ship was full from nine o'clock until late in the afternoon of each day. People swarmed all over her, down to the stokehole, up the rigging, and even to the mast heads. It is computed that upwards of 10,000 visited the vessel, and many were unable to get admission. She was again open for inspection on Monday, Sept. 26, and was visited by great numbers of people, who were loud in their praise of the new steamer. She finished loading 5,500 tons coal on the Tuesday, and left Cardiff next morning for Calcutta. It is expected the voyage will be accomplished in twenty-nine days. The Tower Hill is the property of the Twin Screw Steamship Company of Liverpool, of which Mr. W. H. Nott and Mr. W. Becket Hill are the managing owners.

ENGLISH CAPTIVES IN CENTRAL ASIA.

FROM THE "TIMES."

THE statement telegraphed by our correspondent in India, and made by the native sepoy of Jacob's Rifles who has just escaped from Afghanistan, to the effect that he was one of seven survivors who, after the disaster at Maiwand, fell into the hands of the Afghans and were sold into slavery, seems to have been a good deal canvassed. As the man was tried for desertion, the invention of a plausible story was to be expected. On the whole, however, judging from the telegram from our correspondent, the statement appears to be credited, and if so it will not fail to arouse widespread commiseration for the hard fate of those unfortunate men who remained defending their national honour to the last on the fatal plain of Kushk-i-Nakhud. The story told by this native soldier is that he shared with them a common slavery of more than twelve months, but had the good fortune to free himself from his fetters. Two considerations suggest themselves for immediate attention, and these are, first, the part which Ayub Khan has played throughout the whole of our transactions with him; and, secondly, the possibility of ascertaining the whereabouts and of effecting the ransom of our unhappy countrymen who are lingering out a wretched existence in a state of captivity. If the story be true, there can now be little doubt that Ayub has never desired to act towards us as becomes a fair foe, even as tried by the loose morality of Afghan honour. The murder of Lieutenant MacLaine in cold blood left a dark stain on his reputation, from which he strove at the time to clear himself, although his excuses were at the best no more than plausible. It would now seem that he allowed English captives of war to be sold into an almost hopeless slavery, although he well knew the value England sets on her children, and how anxious our Government would have been to ransom them. But to have given any intimation of their existence would have implied some friendly feeling towards us on his part, and he was resolved on an attitude of unqualified hostility. As to what means lie within our power for effecting the release of these captives, different opinions will probably be held; but some description of what captivity in Central Asia has meant for Englishmen may throw light on the present case. We are able to do this and to turn to the past for guidance, because if these four privates of the 66th Regiment are captives, they are not the first Englishmen who have undergone slavery in Central Asia.

Forty years ago the heart of England was thrilled by the frequent narrative of the butchery of her sons by the despotic rulers or fanatic peoples of the countries beyond the Indian frontier, among whom our countrymen had gone with far from unfriendly intentions. The fate of Colonel Stoddart and Captain Conolly, whose sufferings in the Black Well of Bokhara surpass description, still excites a tremor of indignation whenever recalled, and the close of their career affords a striking contrast with the bright promise under which their mission into Central Asia began. Those officers were deputed to the Courts of Khiva, Khokand, and Bokhara for the purpose of strengthening the ties of friendship with those States, and Captain Conolly met with considerable success in the case of the two first mentioned. But his satisfactory progress at Khiva and Khokand only made the task before Colonel Stoddart at Bokhara more difficult, and the personal animosity of its Ameer soon showed that it was practically a hopeless one. Captain Conolly was induced by an artfully-framed invitation to visit Bokhara, where he was shortly afterwards imprisoned with his comrade, Colonel Stoddart. After being subjected to six months' indignity and harsh treatment, they were both "put to death like sheep," and the black debt of vengeance for this crime still remains unpaid. Much has been written on the subject, but little has been done, although Dr. Wolfe undertook, a short time after its perpetration, an adventurous journey to Bokhara in order to see if there were any hope of either of the officers having been spared. There were other crimes on the same scene at that period to distract attention from one which was so remote. The murders of Alexander Burnes and Macnaghten at Cabul naturally occupied a larger share of the public mind, and the impression they left was not to be obliterated by the successful journeys of Abbott and Shakespear to Merv and Khiva. The case of Dr. Ford, who was put to death at the instigation of the Beluch chief Ibrahim of Chaknasur, who is one of the few survivors of that period, and who still holds his castle among the reedy marshes of Seistan, adds another to the already long list of English victims. Nor must the murder of Lieutenant Loveday at Khelat be excluded from the list, which might be considerably extended were we to include those who, like Mr. Moorcroft and his companions, had to submit to personal indignity and temporary confinement at the hands of the chief of Kundus. But from the time of the first war in Afghanistan to the present day, when the massacres of Sir Louis Cavagnari, his gallant comrades, and of Lieutenant MacLaine remind us that very much the same condition of things still exists there, it is clear that a captive Englishman would be certainly subjected to innumerable indignities and hardships among the fanatical Mahomedan peoples, and might even reckon himself fortunate if his life was spared.

There will be but one opinion—that it is our bounden duty to spare no exertion and to use every means in our power to procure the release of these captives. And we are fortunately far from being powerless in the matter. The possession of a white slave is not a matter that can be long kept secret even in the solitudes of Central Asia or in the remote districts of Afghanistan. These soldiers are said to have been sold in the market-place at Herat. Their purchasers would be well known, and their fate could be traced step by step. It is improbable that they have been removed to any great distance from Herat, for we should have heard through Russian sources had they been sent to either Khiva or Bokhara; nor does our latest information allow of the supposition that they can have been secretly conveyed to the Turcomans' stronghold of Merv. By a process of elimination we are therefore led to conjecture that their place of servitude is somewhere in the country west of the Helmund, between Maimene on the north and Beluchistan on the south. There are two ways of instituting inquiries with the view of obtaining more direct information. We could not apply to Ayub himself, now with his sirdars in full flight towards Herat, but we could instruct the native news writers at Meshed, who have constant intercourse with Herat, to make the necessary investigations for us. There would also be little difficulty in acquiring much fuller details as to the story told by the sepoy through the means of our Minister at Teheran, who has numerous and independent sources of information under his control. We may hope that it will only require well-directed energy to effect the release of these unfortunate soldiers, if they are still living. To have rescued Stoddart and Conolly from the shambles of Bokhara, or even to have obtained due reparation for their murder, would have required the despatch of an army; but here we may fairly expect to achieve our purpose and perform what is nothing less than a duty by the display of some tact and resolution.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—The writer of the interesting article on 'English Captives in Central Asia' has omitted one victim whose unhappy fate in that region excited the commiseration of the late Lord Beaconsfield when Mr. Disraeli, who moved the Government to institute inquiries. In 1835, Lieutenant W. H. Wyburd, of the Indian Navy, an accomplished linguist, who filled the office of interpreter to the Commodore in the Persian Gulf, was despatched by the British Envoy at the Court of Persia on an important mission to Khiva. Ten years later it transpired that he had never reached Khiva, but that, like our unhappy countrymen, Colonel Stoddart and Captain Conolly, he was seized by the Ameer of Bokhara. Wyburd's sisters many times entreated the Government to recognise and claim their brother as a British subject and servant, but their request was always met by the unwarrantable assumption of his death. Thirteen years after Lieutenant Wyburd was sent on his mission to Khiva it came to light that he had escaped from Bokhara and was in slavery in the khanate of Khokand, and in the latter part of 1849 the discovery was made that he was still alive. The Khan of Khokand despatched a letter to Colonel (now General) Sir George Lawrence, Deputy Commissioner in charge at Peshawur, in which he said, 'I have seized a Sahib at the fort of Huzrat Sultan, who came by the road of Tajkund and Dusht-i-Kazak. His name is Wypart, an Englishman, he says, and not a Russian, and that he has been travelling for many years; he has two Persians with him named Mohammed and Hussein, who say they were formerly in Stoddart's service, and were sold at Bokhara and purchased by Wypart. These men say their master is English. Now I have sent Allahdad to ascertain from you whether he is really English or not, that should he be so, I may treat him with honour, but if Russian that I may punish him.' Colonel Lawrence treated the agent of the Khan of Khokand with honour, and gave him letters for his master and Lieutenant Wyburd, but received no reply, though he had promised to depute trustworthy agents at Khokand with funds to effect the liberation of the unfortunate officer. In 1851 Mr. Disraeli brought his case before the House of Commons, and presented a petition from Wyburd's sisters, in which these ladies declared that they had no confidence in native agents, and that they again appealed to the Government and the East India Company, and offered to send out an officer to inquire after their brother provided the Government would invest him with proper authority. They had received no satisfactory answer to a former petition, and they, therefore, appealed to the House to take steps to have Lieutenant Wyburd formally recognised as a British subject and servant, and his restoration demanded. Mr. Disraeli, having stated the facts of the case, asked the Secretary to the Board of Control, and Sir James Weir Hogg, deputy chairman of the Court of Directors, if they would give any information as to what had been done, and what steps it was proposed to take in the matter. In reply these officials stated that every exertion had been made during the past two years in the way of inquiry and remonstrance that was possible, but without effect. Everything had been tried 'short of assembling an army,' a measure which they considered was scarcely to be justified on the score of saving one human life. So nothing more was done to effect the release of this unfortunate officer, who had been sent by Government on a special mission, or even to ascertain his fate, which is shrouded in impenetrable obscurity.—Yours faithfully, C. R. Low.—Kensington, Sept. 27."

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—Will you permit me personally and on behalf of thirteen brothers and sisters, the surviving nephews and nieces of Lieutenant Wyburd, to thank your correspondent Mr. Low for the concise and truthful account of my uncle's case? It is quite true that my mother, lately deceased, spent the best years of her life in a hopeless endeavour to obtain her brother's release from captivity in Bokhara, and offered, in vain, to provide an officer in every way suited for the mission to proceed to Central Asia to effect that object, the Government refusing to clothe him with the mantle of their authority. The lapse of time, however, convincing her that her brother's life had been sacrificed, she could never be induced to take adequate measures to recover the pay and allowances promised to him by the Government, and it will hardly be believed that, although Sir George Lawrence, then Deputy Commissioner at Peshawur, has expressed himself as perfectly satisfied that Lieutenant Wyburd was alive at Khokand in 1848, the Government have persistently refused to pay anything to his family upon the technical ground that they are unable to prove his death. Such is the manner in which the services of a gallant and unfortunate officer have been rewarded—one who, had it not been for the very secrecy of his mission, would have held an honourable position in history, and such is the encouragement offered to the hundreds of brave men who daily risk their lives in the service of their country.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, WILLIAM HENRY WYBURD FURRELL, Sunning House, West Kensington, W., Sept. 29."

OPIMUM IN CHINA.

THE following communication on the above subject has been addressed to the editor of the Times by Mr. F. Storrs Turner, secretary of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade:—

"Sir,—Indebted to the courtesy of the Inspector General of the Imperial Maritime Customs of China for a copy of a Yellow-book on opium, which consists of reports and statistical tables collected from commissioners of customs in all the nineteen treaty ports of China, prefaced by an introductory note from his own pen, I venture to request permission to offer a few remarks upon it. Every one who is honestly interested in this vexed question must be grateful to Mr. Hart for so clear and solid a contribution towards the settlement of disputed points. Absolute certainty in the nature of the case could not be attained, and some difference of opinion as to the inferences to be drawn from these statistics must be expected; but I anticipate that, after some discussion, the general conclusion will be that Mr. Hart is probably not very far wrong, and that at all events we have nothing better upon which to proceed as a basis of argument. Mr. Hart's first object was to ascertain how many smokers of opium the import from abroad supplies; and his answer is, in round numbers, one million, or one-third of 1 per cent. of the population. In the calculations which lead to this result it is overlooked that the opium can be smoked twice over, and that the ashes of the pipes are carefully scraped for this second use. Besides this, the amount taken as the average daily consumption is high—viz., three mace—4.10 of an ounce avoirdupois. Dr. Lockhart and Sir Rutherford Alcock in their calculations took one mace as the average daily allowance—a difference which trebles the number of smokers. But Mr. Hart appears to have followed the tables sent up to him, and he is as likely to be right as another. Passing to Chinese opium, Mr. Hart is confronted by returns varying from 12,000 to 265,000 piculs. Accepting, though with diffidence, the average result, which is supported by the most numerous and sober of the estimates, he assumes that the native product about equals the foreign import. Examined in this way the result arrived at is that 200,000 chests, or almost 12,000 tons, of unprepared opium are consumed annually by 2,000,000 opium smokers—that these smokers expend £25,000,000 on opium; that this is an expenditure of, say, from 5d. to 11d. daily by individual smokers; and that all the smokers amount to only two-thirds of 1 per cent. of the population. This, in the opinion of probably as an impartial and well-informed authority as can be found, is the utmost extent of the mischief. Adopting, then, Mr. Hart's conclusion, let us see whither it leads us. In the first place, it altogether sweeps away the defence of the opium trade, based on the supposed almost universal prevalence of the habit of opium smoking among the Chinese. This took two forms. One was that since nearly everybody in China used the drug, and ocular evidence assured Englishmen who went there that the Chinese are a muscular, healthy, and hard-working race, therefore opium does no harm on the whole, though there may be exceptional cases of abuse. The other form was this: As we know that the total amount of Indian opium imported could only supply a mere fraction of the 300,000,000 of China, we must regard the trade as pretty much on a par with the introduction of French brandy into England, the stoppage of which would have no appreciable effect upon our drinking habits. These fallacies are now thoroughly exposed. It is clear from Mr. Hart's paper that we have to do, not with the innocent custom of a whole population running in extreme cases into a vice, but with an inherently vicious habit, the effects of which are so palpable that even a comparatively small number of cases can produce that general horror and alarm which we know to exist in the national mind. Equally clear is it that the Indian drug is still the most important source of supply. Equal in quantity to the native production, it is more costly, more poisonous, and, while it enters under treaty obligations, it practically neutralises the efforts of the Chinese Government to put down the internal growth. Only last week a gentleman connected with the China Inland Mission told me that the farmers in Shansi accounted for the energetic action of their governor against the poppy by supposing that he was bribed by the foreigners. Manifestly, while this can plausibly be said, while every diminution of the native growth enhances the price of the Indian drug, China has a poor chance of getting rid of the poppy cultivation within her borders. I may not trespass further on your space, except to transcribe Mr. Hart's testimony to the effect of these figures upon the Chinese themselves. They admit all his statistics; but 'Chinese who have studied the opium question are opposed to a traffic which more or less harms smokers, now numbering, say, over 2,000,000, and annually increasing. . . . They admit all this, but they do not find in either the revenue produced or the statistical demonstration of its percentage innocuousness any sufficient reason for welcoming the growth of the trade or for desisting from the attempt to check the consumption of opium.'

A CORRESPONDENT points out that, in the above letter, the Rev. E. S. Turner "quotes for his purpose only one portion of Mr. Hart's introductory note to the reports and statistics on opium and opium smoking." The whole of the note is as follows:—

"1. Opium in China; how many smokers does the drug supply? The following pages contain the result of an inquiry instituted to answer this question.

"2. The commissioners of customs at a score of ports along the coast on the Yangtze were instructed by circular to make inquiry in their respective districts and draw up replies to questions appended. That circular and the commissioners' reports are given here in full, and in a separate table the answers to the questions will be found brought together for greater convenience. With these questions and answers to start from an answer to the question at the head of this introductory note can be easily worked out.

"3. In round numbers, the annual importation of foreign opium may be said to amount to 100,000 chests, or, allowing 100 catties to each chest, 10,000,000 catties (the catty is the Chinese pound; one catty is equal to one pound and a third avoirdupois). When boiled down and converted into what is known as prepared opium the raw drug loses about 30 per cent. in weight; accordingly, 10,000,000 catties of the unprepared drug imported reach the hands of retailers, as, say, 7,000,000 catties of prepared opium. The catty is divided into sixteen liang (ounces), and the liang into tenths called mace; in 7,000,000 catties there are, therefore, 1,120,000,000 mace of prepared opium for smokers.

"4. Before reaching the smoker, opium pays the Chinese Government import duty and likin taxes amounting to, say, 100 taels, and is then sold at, say, 800 taels of Chinese sycee or silver (£3=10 taels) per 100 catties; thus the total quantity retailed—i.e., imported—may be said to be paid for with 56,000,000 taels, or £16,800,000, and one mace of prepared opium is consequently worth, say, about 3½d. (English).

"5. Divided by the number of days in the year, the quantity of prepared opium smoked daily may be said to be 3,068,413 mace, and the value 11,046,573d., or £46,027.

"6. Average smokers consume three mace of prepared opium, and spend about 10¾d. daily. This quantity is the same as 6-15ths of an ounce avoirdupois, and suffices for from thirty to forty pipes—i.e., whiffs, 'draws,' or inhalations. If we divide the total number of mace consumed daily by the total quantity each average smoker consumes daily, we find that there are in round numbers above 1,000,000 smokers of foreign opium.

"7. The population of China is spoken of as amounting to more than 400,000,000, and may fairly be pronounced to be something above 300,000,000. Estimating population at 300,000,000 and opium smokers at 1,000,000, and proceeding with the calculation, the result is that 3-1-3 in every 1,000 smoke—that is, that opium smoking is practised by one-third of 1 per cent. of the population.

"8. In addition to the foreign drug, there is also the native product. Reliable statistics cannot be obtained respecting the total quantity produced; Ichang, the port nearest Szechuan, the province which is generally believed to be the chief producer and chief consumer of native opium, estimates the total production of native opium at 25,000 chests annually; while another port, Ningpo, far away on the coast, estimates it at 265,000 chests. Treating all such replies as merely so many guesses, there are, it is to be remarked, two statements which may be taken as facts in this connection; the one is that, as far as we know to-day, the native opium produced does not exceed the foreign import in quantity, and the other that native opium was known, produced, and used long before any Europeans began the sale of the foreign drug along the coast. Granting, then, that the native product equals the foreign import, and that 100,000 chests are produced annually, and granting also that this quantity, when prepared, provides 1,120,000,000 mace of prepared opium for the annual consumption of 1,000,000 additional smokers, the number of smokers in China may be said to be in all 2,000,000, or two-thirds of 1 per cent. of the population. The native product sells for one-half the price obtained for the foreign drug, and may be estimated to be paid for with, say, £8,400,000 by 1,000,000 smokers, who spend about 5½d. apiece daily. The total amount spent by China on this luxury produced at home and imported from abroad is thus, say, £25,000,000 annually.

"9. Examined in this way the results arrived at are that 200,000 chests, or almost 12,000 tons (1,680 catties, equal to one ton), of unprepared opium are consumed annually by 2,000,000 opium smokers; that these smokers expend £25,000,000 on opium; that this is an expenditure of, say, from 5d. to 11d. daily by individual smokers; and that all the smokers amount to only two-thirds of 1 per cent. of the population. If more than three mace apiece is consumed daily by smokers, then smokers are less numerous; if less than three mace, then smokers are more numerous, and smoking individually less harmful. The truth is that many smoke more than three mace and many less, and from the statistical point of view it is safe to say that opium smokers in China constitute simply two-thirds of 1 per cent. of the population. On the supposition even that the quantity of native opium produced is ten times that of the foreign opium imported, the total will not yet suffice for the consumption of even 4 per cent. of the population. Four per cent. is a small percentage, but in China it means twelve millions of people. It is hardly credible, however, that native opium is produced in such quantity; but whatever the number of opium smokers may really be—and allowing that many people smoke without injury—there must in any case be a percentage of smokers for whom the habit works nothing but evil.

"10. Chinese who have studied the opium question are opposed to a traffic which more or less harms smokers now numbering, say, over two millions, and annually increasing; at the same time they admit that opium provides a large revenue, that expenditure for opium and liability to the incidence of opium taxation touch an infinitesimally small percentage of the population, and that neither the finances of the State, nor the wealth of its people, nor the growth of its population, can be specially damaged by a luxury which only draws from 5d. to 11d. apiece a day from the pockets of those who indulge in it, and which is indulged in by only two-thirds of 1 per cent. of the population. They admit all this, but they do not find in either the revenue produced or the statistical demonstration of its percentage innocuousness and sufficient reason for welcoming the growth of the trade or for desisting from the attempt to check the consumption of opium."

THE following, on the same subject has also been published:—

"Sir,—The belief implied in Mr. Hart's note, published in the Times of to-day, that the number of Chinamen who smoke opium to excess has been much exaggerated, finds full confirmation in the superabundant population of the empire. It is well known that an inveterate opium smoker is never the father of a family. If the general conditions in China were favourable to infant life, this, even if the numbers of inveterate opium smokers were greater than it is, would be of less account. But, as in all Eastern countries, the rate of infant mortality in China is very high. Bad hygienic surroundings, the carelessness of parents, the ignorance of the doctors, the prevalence of epidemics, and in some few districts the practice of female infanticide, are destructive causes which would tell more perceptibly on the census returns than they do if they were supplemented on the other hand by a noticeable failure of productiveness.—I am, Sir, yours obediently, ROBERT K. DOUGLAS, 5, College-gardens, Dulwich, Sept. 30."

THE LATE SIR VINCENT EYRE.

MR. C. R. Low writes, in regard to the late Sir Vincent Eyre, of whom a brief notice appeared in our columns last week:—"As an intimate friend and the biographer of the late Sir Vincent Eyre, I should esteem it a favour if you would permit me to place on record his sterling worth and the great services he rendered his country in more than one momentous crisis in the history of our Indian Empire. During the siege of the Cabul cantonment, in 1841, and until he was severely wounded, Vincent Eyre was one of the most active officers of the force, and when some of the bravest spirits began to despond he was ever cheerful, and his advice to General Elphinstone was for resistance to the last. When that weak and ill-fated commander resolved on negotiating with the Afghan sirdars, and they demanded four married hostages, with their wives and children, Vincent Eyre offered himself and his young wife and child as a sacrifice on the altar of public duty, but no other officers could be induced to risk the safety of their families and the proposal as regarded the latter fell through. In his graphic narrative of the events at Cabul, which the Duke of Wellington declared was of so thrilling a character that the perusal of it had the unwelcome effect of depriving him of a night's rest, the gallant author makes no mention of this noble act of self-abnegation. The late Sir Vincent Eyre's services during the Indian Mutiny were second only to those of the great leaders of our armies in that struggle. His relief of Arrah, with only 200 European soldiers and three guns, an operation effected at a time when great discouragement existed owing to the extermination a few days before of a column of 400 British troops despatched from Dinapore to effect this object, was one of the most brilliant episodes of the war. Sir James Outram recommended him to Sir Colin Campbell for the Victoria Cross, and to Eyre he wrote:—"It acts of devotion to one's country entitle to the Cross, then, surely, the devotion you displayed at Arrah to your country and the advantage that resulted to the country from that act ought to secure it to you, of all men." Again, in the advance from Allahabad to Cawnpore, Outram selected Eyre for an independent command, and on the 11th September, with only 150 men and two guns, he intercepted a body of the rebels when crossing the Ganges near Futtehpore, and utterly annihilated them. Outram wrote to Government of the advantages resulting from this exploit:—"I now consider my communications secure, which otherwise must certainly have been cut off during our operations in Oudh." Very meritorious were the services of Eyre during the memorable first relief of Lucknow on the 25th of September, when, on the death of Brigadier Cooper, he succeeded to the command of the artillery of Havelock's force, and again at the defence of the Alumbagh position between September, 1857, and March, 1858, under his old chief, Outram, who wrote to him when leaving for England:—"I avail myself of one of the few leisure moments allowed me to thank you for the able, zealous, and invaluable service you have rendered me, to give utterance to the strong feelings of admiration with which I regard you as a man, a soldier, and an officer, and to assure you of the warm affection which I bear to you as a friend." So high was the opinion Sir James Outram had formed of Vincent Eyre that he recommended him and Lord Napier of Magdala to the Secretary of State for India as the two most capable officers of the Indian army. Finally, it should be recorded of Sir Vincent Eyre that, during the Franco-German war, he undertook the duties of visiting commissioner of the Boulogne Society for relieving the sick and wounded soldiers in the north of France, and some of his reports were published in your columns. To his generous nature and high character, and the amiable qualities which endeared him to troops of friends, many can testify besides he who pens these few lines in memoriam."

CALCUTTA TEA SYNDICATE.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE OPERATIONS OF SEASON 1880.

Although closed accounts for the whole of the tea shipped through the syndicate last season have not yet been received, the committee are of opinion that the time has arrived for the publication of a short report on the operations of the past season for the information of those interested, together with audited accounts, showing the receipts and expenditure, and the financial position of the syndicate at the close of the season, viz., May 31. Mr. Sibthorp's salary and expenses have been charged to the American venture since his departure for America, and the other expenses will be divided between that account and the shipments to Australia this season. Annexed hereto will be found the following accounts, viz.:—Balance-sheet, revenue account, statement of advances made, subscriptions received, syndicate charges account, consignors' charges account, all of which the committee trust will be found clear and satisfactory. The total quantity of tea shipped through the syndicate agency was as follows:—

5,691 packages	...	276,551 lb. to Melbourne.
227 "	...	10,640 " " Auckland.
Total ...	5,918 "	287,198 lb.
The following were the contributions from the various districts:—
Assam ...	...	78,320 lb.
Cachar ...	...	126,978 "
Darjiling ...	...	55,379 "
Kangra Valley ...	...	19,290 "
Dehra Doon ...	...	2,721 "
Kumaon ...	...	1,135 "
Chittagong ...	...	3,582 "
		287,405 lb.
Less samples, &c.	...	207 "
Total ..	...	287,198

Small consignments were forwarded from Melbourne to Adelaide, Dunedin, Brisbane, and Sydney, in order that the tea might be introduced as far as possible throughout the colonies, but the bulk of the tea has been sold in Melbourne, where it has met with a good reception, and no difficulty has been experienced in moving off all the consignments on their arrival. The favourable reception accorded to the syndicate shipments induced numerous shipments on private account, and some idea of the impetus given to the trade by the syndicate operations may be gained by comparison of the exports of last season with those of the previous year, viz.:—

Exported to Australia, May, 1879, to May, 1880	...	86,628 lb.
Do. do. May, 1880, to May, 1881	...	621,128 "
Increase ...	...	534,500 "

Advices of sale of the whole of the tea shipped have now been received. There appears to be no difficulty in disposing of a large quantity of tea at fair prices in the Melbourne market, and if the trade with the other colonies becomes further developed a steadily increasing demand for Indian tea in the colonies may confidently be anticipated. No prejudice exists against the tea, and its superiority to China growth is universally admitted wherever it has been tried. It only requires to be known to make its way, and to ensure this result the syndicate have wisely determined to continue regular shipments during the current year. The following shipments have already been made this season:—

597 packages	...	24,613 lb. per	Rollo.
363 "	...	18,690 " per steamer	Venetia.
1,264 "	...	53,322 " per	Cathay. and the judicious distribution of the total quantity promised, together with shipments on private account, will be sufficient to keep the tea constantly before the colonial public. A good deal of correspondence lately appearing in the colonial papers on the subject of adulteration of China tea has been caused by the seizure of a shipment of so-called tea from China, which was declared by the authorities unfit for human consumption, and the attention of the public has thus been forcibly drawn to the comparative purity of Indian and China teas to the great advantage of the former. Advices from America, extracts of which were forwarded to you with the circular of August 12, are very encouraging, and the committee are strongly of opinion that if the movement in that direction receives the same measure of support in the shape of contributions of tea, as that given to the Australian market, the ultimate result cannot fail to be successful. There is a very large field in America, where the consumption of tea is about 70,000,000 lb. yearly, and a vigorous effort should be made to secure a fair share of this trade. Mr. Sibthorp, who is now travelling in America on behalf of the syndicate, is provided with a large number of samples, and the information received from him, therefore, is based on the most thorough investigation of the requirements of the trade after comparison of samples with the leading houses. After visiting the principal cities of America and Canada, and arranging therein with influential houses to conduct the syndicate agencies, his duties will be complete, and it only remains for all interested in tea to aid in carrying out the business he has so ably inaugurated. The Government of India have liberally assisted the movement by a contribution of Rs. 6,000 towards the expenses incurred, which have been very heavy, and the funds remaining at the disposal of the committee will be applied to advertising and assisting the introduction of Indian teas in America and Canada by every possible means. A large quantity has been promised for shipment to America, but several of the leading houses have waited further information before deciding on the quantity they will contribute. This information is fully supplied in the circular of August 12, referred to above, and the committee now request the favour of an early statement of their intentions, in order that proper arrangements may be made for the division of the various consignments. The period during which the committee have held office having now extended over a year, it is desirable that subscribers to the syndicate should have an opportunity of making a fresh election at the meeting to be held on Monday, Sept. 5, of which notice is hereto annexed. They therefore tender their resignation, and at the same time venture to express a hope that the operations undertaken by them will have your approval and confirmation. By order of the committee, R. B. MAGOR, honorary secretary.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

CAPTAIN JOCELYN ON FIELD ARTILLERY EQUIPMENT.

THE Prize Essay that has this year won the R.A. Institution Gold Medal is one of more than ordinary interest. It is on "The Equipment of Field Artillery," by Capt. J. R. Jocelyn, R.A.; and deserves, and will doubtless receive, the thoughtful attention of all those who follow, either from professional duty or as amateurs, the marvellous progress of modern science as applied to this very interesting and important subject.

Capt. Jocelyn adopts for the motto of his essay Col. Fox Strangways' dictum—"The first essential of an efficient field artillery is to shoot well; everything else is but a means to an end." But he shows that, to attain this end in the best manner possible, a very large number of conditions are requisite; and into these conditions he enters with the most careful detail. The author has the very great advantage of a thorough scientific acquaintance with all the innumerable improvements that have lately been adopted in the artillery services of the various Continental Powers. Most of the European services have been entirely remodelled by the light of recent experience—especially by the experience of the Franco-German War, and by the suggestions afforded by Plevna; and Capt. Jocelyn describes and criticises all the improvements, real or supposed, with great force and judgment. He considers the three kinds of equipment broadly needed for field purposes, to obtain respectively (1), high speed with comparatively light weight; (2), the greatest possible amount of weight, with comparatively slow pace; and (3) as much weight as may be compatible with a fair speed; and thus considers the various equipment required respectively for (1), horse artillery; (2), guns of position; and (3), field artillery proper. The weight of metal permissible in the guns of the three kinds of equipment is first dealt with; and, in connection with this, the weight of ammunition carried with the gun, the relative weight of the steel carriage, as compared with that of the gun, the advantage of breech-loading guns. Then comes means of checking recoil, the best form of axle-tree boxes of wheels, the trail, the elevating apparatus, the limbers, and so on. A very interesting part is the discussion of the value of gun shields, for the use of which Capt. Jocelyn adduces arguments that seem irresistible; and for very many other improvements he makes out a thoroughly good case. But, to our thinking, the most striking part of the essay is that in which the author describes the important rôle that is to be played by the machine-gun of the future—showing how, when, and where it will be used, and for what purposes. The gun which Capt. Jocelyn adopts as in all respects the best one yet produced of this kind is the Hotchkiss. In this remarkable gun there are only eleven parts, as contrasted with the eighty parts of which the Gardiner machine-gun consists; and our author says of it that its mechanism is "so manifestly simple that any trained gunner could work it almost intuitively, and any intelligent man, after a quarter of an hour's instruction, could take it to pieces and put it together again in a few minutes." We will quote the chief points which induce Capt. Jocelyn so emphatically to demand the introduction of the Hotchkiss gun:—

"But in considering this question we must remember that the impending introduction into European warfare of a magazine rifle will greatly develop the fire-power of the infantry which at present is very great, and may be taken as thirty Martini-Henry rifles—one Gatling. It may be assumed that with the magazine rifle we should get the same result from a smaller number of men, the loss of any one or any five of whom would not cripple altogether the efficiency of the whole; whereas if we seek to obtain the same effect from a machine, the equipment of which, composed of men, horses, and material, must be cumbersome compared to that of an individual, we are liable to a loss of the whole effect from an accident to one of the parts. In addition, a machine-gun, the range of which is only equal to that of a small army, can always be effectively opposed by telling off several marksmen to fire at it. These considerations point to the conclusion that it should partake more of the nature of the cannon than the rifle, that is, that it should possess ballistic power and long range so as to produce an effect not to be equalled by any number of infantry-rifles. As far as we know there is only one machine gun of the kind in existence, and without asserting that it is the best gun, or the one we ought to adopt, it certainly represents a system which for field purposes is as far superior to any other machine-gun system as the Martini-Henry is to the Snider. The gun we refer to is the Hotchkiss revolving cannon, fully described in the Proceedings of the United Service Institution, under date March 1880. It has a range equal to that of field guns, and fires an explosive shell (1 1/4 lb. in weight) with a percussion fuze. It consists of a group of five barrels which revolve in front of a solid breech-piece; there is only one spring in the gun, which is a strong flat one; eighty rounds per minute can be fired, or sixty with deliberation, each shell bursting as a rule into twenty dangerous fragments, 'so that a continuous and deadly fire of 75 lb. of metal or 1,200 hits per minute can be produced'; thus, though the number of dangerous fragments caused by this weapon compares favourably with other systems, the rate of fire is much slower and a greater effect is produced by a slower moving mechanism, resulting in great simplicity and strength. A jam is almost impossible; if one did occur the system could be righted in a second by moving the crank the 1-100 part of a revolution the reverse way. Should the point of the firing pin be broken off (as has once occurred) it will fall clean through a hole drilled for the purpose, and a new one can be put in in three or four seconds; there is nothing else frangible in the gun; the extreme range of this gun is stated in the official reports of the French Government to be 5,000 metres, that is, about 5,460 yards, up to which range it is stated to have 'a capacity for effective fire,' it can therefore not be stigmatised as an 'incumbrance.' In America exhaustive trials were carried out in 1878-79, at ranges from 200 to 2,000 yards, and the official report states 'it is evident that the system gives promise of proving a valuable auxiliary to the light artillery of our service; its equality in range, its greater capacity for delivering a deadly, incessant and wide-spread fire at all field ranges, and with decided superior rapidity, its stability when fired' (the gun has no recoil) 'and its evident superiority in pursuing retreating columns, give it some decided advantages over ordinary field guns.' Mere local effect is avoided by means of a traversing saddle."

OCTROI.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the Allahabad Pioneer Mail published on the 28th ult. you will find an edifying article on the system of octroi exactions at present in full play within the Bombay Presidency. And first with reference to the province of Sindh, which the British conquered in 1843, chiefly on the plea that trade could not be properly developed on the Indus River so long as the lower Indus was misgoverned by the Mahomedans. In fact, our plea then was very similar to what is now adopted by the French in Tunis. Now, it is in this very province of Sindh that the municipalities, created and fostered by the Viceroy, are doing so much mischief. Trade is throttled when transit duties are allowed in every town; and the Bombay Government has recently placed on record its opinion that in Sindh almost every municipality levies a transit duty on some article or another. In Sukkur, which was formerly a great grain depot, an octroi tax is now imposed eight times as great as the amount allowed by the British Government. Nearer Bombay matters are just as bad. In Nassick the taxation on cloth has become chiefly a transit imposition. Nassick being on the high road from Bombay to Northern India, the peasantry of more than one province have to pay to the extortioners in Nassick, and foolish impediments.

are thus placed on the sale of Manchester cloths. The trade returns indicate that Manchester cloths have to be sent for sale hundreds of miles round via Calcutta. How is it possible that each poor soul in Nassick should, on an average, spend Rs.84 a-year on clothing? The whole income of a whole family is often less than half of this sum. If the men of Manchester could be made to understand how many municipalities grasp a percentage before a poor family can be clothed they would soon sweep away the iniquitous octroi system.—Your obedient servant, Sept. 26. T.

TRANSIT DUTIES IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—Is it possible to induce her Majesty's Ministers, who profess to be Liberals, and are fond of talking of their adherence to the principles of free trade, to put a stop to the present objectionable system of levying transit duties in India under the name of octroi? I solicit your attention to an article in the Pioneer Mail of Allahabad on the subject of Bombay municipalities (published on the 28th ult.). The editor supports his arguments by reference to reports published by Government; and he states facts which can leave no doubt that transit duties are extensively levied. The largest receipts are from octroi on grain, the food of the people, and Government has permitted octroi on grain to be levied to the extent of the estimated consumption by the inhabitants of each town. It is calculated that each soul (including infants) consumes on an average seven maunds, or 575lb. of grain in a year. But in sixteen municipalities within the Bombay Presidency the quantity of grain taxed is nearly three times the estimate, and it may safely be calculated that two-thirds of the taxation represents the transit duty on corn passing through these towns. The important town of Sukkur, in Sind, was formerly a great grain depot, and even at the present time the octroi levied on grain there is eight times as much as should be levied on the grain required for local consumption. It would be interesting to ascertain the extent to which our trade with Central Asia is being injured by our foolish passion for octroi in Sind. The Bombay Government has recently recorded that in that province almost every municipality levies a transit duty on some article or another. And so with reference to the trade in Manchester and other cloths. In Nassick, which some of our statesmen propose should be made the political capital of our Indian Empire, the taxation of cloth is so heavy as to reach an average of eighty-four rupees worth of cloth per head in one year—a supply sufficient to clothe the inhabitants for thirty years to come; in twenty-five municipalities in the Bombay Presidency the quantity of cloth taxed by octroi exceeds the maximum of legal taxation. In short, trade is unprotected from official extortion, and the orders, which for twelve years past have been so frequently and so placidly enunciated by Government, have been contemptuously disregarded. The mischief committed by selfish municipalities in seizing a percentage on goods coming within their grasp is incalculable, and affords a very bad example to native States who have always been inclined to levy transit duties. Trade in Oudh before annexation was paralysed owing to the habit of the barons of realising customary dues.—Your obedient servant,
ST. GEORGE TUCKER.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.

As there is considerable misunderstanding on the subject, we might as well give a few facts here. In his despatch to the Government of India of February last the Secretary of State said that there were several points connected with the question which required very full consideration. Lord Hartington asked if the V.P. Act needed amendment on the subject generally. The question was referred to the local Governments, and, as the Pioneer stated last week, their opinions are going in to the Government of India, who will come to a decision most probably in January next when the Council meets at Calcutta. There is one point in this connection which seems to have escaped the notice of the Indian Press. The object of the legislation is two-fold—its primary object being to stop the influx of seditious or fanatical matter from other countries, and the subordinate object being to regulate the conduct of the indigenous native Press. Public writers must recognise the importance of the first object. We have sometimes seen Hindustani papers published in Turkey circulated in our bazaars, more in Northern India than another part, containing religious articles about the head of Moslem, the Calif, which are calculated to do harm among an illiterate and fanatical population. Of this we gave notice as early as in December last in our article "Rocks Ahead." Thus it may be observed that the whole question is a very difficult one, requiring careful treatment, irrespective of the V.P. Act per se.—Indian Spectator.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE TELEPHONE COMPANY.—We understand that the Oriental Telephone Company (Limited) has at last arranged terms with the Government for the introduction of telephone exchanges into the three Presidencies, and now only awaits the issue of licenses which are nearly ready.—Englishman.

PROPHETIC.—There is a distant rustling in officialdom which tells of a possible change in the chief commissionership of British Burma. If Mr. Bernard is to govern one of the minor provinces permanently, he would, I hear, prefer any other to his present one. There will be a more acceptable post available before very long in the Central Provinces, and, as he came from those provinces, to those provinces he is likely to return. His successor at Rangoon is probably not thought of yet, but I venture to assign the place to Mr. Plowden, at present census commissioner. It was even whispered at one time that he would step on to the North West throne when Sir George Couper stepped off. But, apparently, that is not to be, nor was it ever seriously contemplated. Mr. Plowden is a safe man, and will do more good than harm to any administration. Added to this, there is in his favour that Mr. Gladstone is Lord Ripon's patron, that Mr. Bass is one of Mr. Gladstone's firmest and most influential supporters, and that Mr. Plowden is fortunate enough to be Mr. Bass's son in law.—Ibid.

BURMA.—Communication by telegraph with Mandalay is again interrupted.—Ibid.

THE "STATESMAN" AND SIR RICHARD MEADE.—The subjoined passage, which appears on page 465 of the July number of the monthly Statesman, edited in London by Mr. Robert Knight, has been widely quoted and commented upon by the Indian journals:—"At this very critical conjuncture (about Sept. 22, 1877) Sir Richard Meade took a trip by railway to a junction station about 120 miles from Hyderabad, to pay a flying visit to Lord Lytton, who was on his way to Mysor. On the Resident's return a message was conveyed to Sir Salar Jung, we may be sure by an indirect channel, to the effect that, full powers having now been obtained from the Viceroy, if he again refused to acquiesce in the 'final orders,' his arrest and deportation to Madras by a special train, on the Nizam's own State railway would follow. When one of these master strokes of political cajolery or coercion is undertaken, the communication is always verbal if possible, or, if anything must be written, a private and familiar note from an inferior hand is chosen and the official form avoided. We are not, therefore, in a position to give absolute proof of the authenticity or authority of this disgraceful threat, the reality of which was widely talked of in Hyderabad; but although we do not believe the actual perpetration of the outrage to have been intended, Sir Salar Jung himself undoubtedly believed it. His Excellency Sir Salar Jung has informed the Resident at Hyderabad that neither directly nor indirectly did he receive from the residency any threat of deportation; and Sir Salar Jung has also authorised the publication of his statement." [The above extract and comment are published at the request of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department].—Pioneer.

THE FOREIGN SECRETARY.—Sir A. C. Lyall, K.C.B., who was relieved in the Foreign Secretaryship on the 6th ult. by the Hon. Charles Grant, C.S.I., leaves for England on furlough on the 20th. The Viceroy gave a farewell dinner to Sir Alfred and afterwards invested him with the insignia of his K.C.B.—Ibid.

THE LEGAL MEMBER.—Mr. Whitley Stokes, the legal member, has answered the criticisms passed upon his work in India by the Quarterly Review. He stated that while he could afford to treat the Indian press with contempt, he felt bound to answer an English review which had a certain standing on account of its respectability, age, and dulness.—Ibid.

THE POLITICAL TRIAL.—Mahomed Hyat Khan, C.S.I., charged with bribery and extortion in his capacity of assistant political officer at Cabul, will probably be tried at Lahore.—Ibid.

THE RAINS.—There has been a break in the rains in Northern India, and the prospects of the crops generally are reported to be excellent.—Ibid.

A NEW PIONEER CORPS.—The Punjab Government will probably raise another pioneer corps from among the criminal tribes of the province.—Ibid.

A CHINAMAN IN INDIA.—A Chinese Ambassador has arrived here to meet his Excellency the Viceroy. He was for some years in Paris and London. He proceeds shortly to Simla. We believe his mission is connected with the opium question. We believe he was the writer of a recent letter to the Times on that question. He was entertained by his Honour the Lieutenant Governor on Tuesday last. He seems to be intelligent and shrewd.—Hindu Patriot.

THE SAME.—A Chinaman, named Mah Taotai, has arrived in Simla, bent upon gleaning facts relating to opium. He was supposed to be an envoy from Pekin, but it now appears that he is merely an interpreter in the employment of the Viceroy of Tientsin.—Pioneer.

THE R.A. DEPARTMENT.—Mr. T. W. Holderness, of the N.W.P. Board of Revenue Secretariat, officiates at Simla in the Under Secretaryship of the Revenue and Agricultural Department, in the room of Mr. Tupper, who is required to perform some special work in connection with the Rent Bill which the Bengal Government is sending up to headquarters for consideration.—

Ibid.

THE BISHOP OF RANGOON.—Ill health having compelled the Bishop of Rangoon to go home for six months on sick leave, the Archdeacon of Rangoon has been appointed the Bishop's commissary. Rangoon has been singularly unfortunate in this way; for Bishop Titcombe has twice been obliged to leave his diocese for domestic reasons.—Pioneer.

EDUCATION IN BRITISH BURMA.—The Chief Commissioner of British Burma has founded, under the presidentship of Mr. John Jardine, C.S., an educational syndicate for Burma, the duties of which will be to direct and control public examinations which will be held under certain new rules, designed to promote the study of medicine, law, engineering, and technical arts.—Ibid.

OBITUARY.—Mr. Woodward, judicial assistant commissioner of Umritsur, died at Kalka when on his way to Simla. He had been suffering from fever.—Ibid.

MR. BUCK.—Mr. E. C. Buck, Secretary to the Government of India in the new Revenue and Agriculture Department, will visit the N.W.P. shortly to confer with the local Government on the further development of the department, and the best way of carrying out the recommendations of the Famine Commission.—Ibid.

THE 9TH BENGAL CAVALRY.—The command of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, which has been left vacant by the death of Col. H. L. Campbell, at Brighton last month, is expected to go to Lieut. Col. A. P. Palmer, assistant adjutant general, Meerut Division.—Ibid.

THE 6TH B.N.I.—By the retirement of Col. Thompson, the command of the 6th Native Infantry has fallen to Lieut. Col. Inglis, the 2nd in command.—Ibid.

MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.—Major F. W. Major, of the Military Accounts Department, has recently been transferred from Madras to the office of the controller of military accounts, Calcutta.—Ibid.

EMIGRANTS FOR NATAL.—In the month of May last 392 emigrants left the port of Calcutta for Natal.—Ibid.

RETIREMENTS.—Captains A. Jobling, R. K. Brereton, C. J. Buller, and W. H. E. Ridsdale are about to proceed to England preparatory to being placed on the retired list.—Ibid.

RAIN IN MARWAR.—In the week ending Aug. 26 the rains in Marwar were the heaviest on record. Hundreds of houses fell down in Jodhpore, and much damage was done.—Ibid.

THE VICEROY IN AGRA.—The 1st King's Dragoon Guards and E-A R.H.A. from Meerut, the 14th Sikhs from Umballa, the 2nd N.I., the 14th Bengal-Lancers, and the 6th Company Sappers and Miners are to be sent to Agra on the occasion of the Viceroy's visit.—Ibid.

THE LATE NAWAB GHOLAM HUSAIN KHAN.—It is notified in the Gazette of India that his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General has been pleased to select Hafiz Abdulla Khan, Alizai, from among the lineal heirs of his father, Nawab Gholam Husain Khan, K.C.S.I., to succeed to the hereditary title of Nawab.—Ibid.

THE MAHARAJA OF BURDWAN.—It is stated that the young Maharaja of Burdwan will be installed in the first week in December next by his Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. At his own request his Highness will be installed at Burdwan, and not at Darjiling.—Ibid.

CASH BALANCES.—The following were the balances held in cash in the civil treasuries of the Government of India and at credit of Government in the presidency banks and their branches on the last day of August:—1879, Rs.15,59,31,000; 1880, Rs.12,64,69,000; 1881, Rs.13,93,87,000.—Ibid.

MADRAS.

THE LATE CAPT. MONTAGUE SAUNDERS.—There will be a general feeling of deep regret among all classes of Madras society at the death, at the early age of forty-one, of Capt. Montague Saunders, from the effects of an accident while riding at Quetta. He was the youngest son of the late Mr. Charles Alexander Saunders, who for thirty years was secretary to the Great Western Railway in England; and he was the brother of the popular agent and manager of the Madras Railway, and of Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.B., late Chief Commissioner of Mysor. Educated at Charter House, he obtained a commission in the 20th Hussars, with whom he remained till he got his troop. He was on the staff through the Abyssinian campaign. When the Afghan war broke out he volunteered his services, and was placed in the transport service. His last hours were, therefore, spent among many of the traditions of the profession to which he was attached. A short year ago his was a familiar figure in Madras; and while many will remember and deplore the kindly heart and ready hand that were ever willing to do a friend a service, something more than the conventional expression of sympathy will be tendered by society to his brother, Mr. Arthur Saunders.—Madras Times.

COTTON MILLS IN MADRAS.—The Madras Standard tells us that it is proposed to start a fourth cotton mill in Madras, and offers an opinion that there is room for two or three more. There can be no doubt of this, the Indian Agriculturist thinks. "Besides the quantity of twist which Madras exports, there are no fewer than 247,877 private looms for cotton cloth in the Presidency, the owners of which will never use hand-made twist when the machine-made article is placed within their reach, the latter article being much more regular as to count—an important matter in the manufacture of cloth."—Pioneer.

THE RAMPA OUTBREAK.—Appeals against the sentences passed by Mr. B. Horsburgh, the session judge of the District of Godavery, came on for hearing on September 2 before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Muthusawmy Iyer, on the appellate side of the High Court. The prisoners in these connected cases are four in number. Linga Pedda, Tambudu Somiah, Bavuda Rajah, and Pallala Chinna Reddi. The case relates to the outbreak in the Rampa and Rekapalli Taluks. The first charge against the prisoners was that they were members of a gang which plundered the village of Chintur. The second charge was that they were members of an unlawful assembly. The first witness stated that he had been captured by a party of men and taken to a place called Yekur, where there was a gang of sixty armed men under the leadership of Caram Tamman Dora, and certain reddies; that he was placed under the guard of the first prisoner, and was carried to several places, and kept outside the village; the houses were forcibly broken open and plundered, and prisoners carried off grain and fowls, clothes and brass vessels. They always carried guns and other deadly weapons. The prisoners' defence in the High Court was that they were asked to join the Fitoriders, and, owing to a grudge on the part of a Pandu Dora and others, who had been the leading men, and who had recently gone over to the Government, this case had been concocted against them. Their lordships, after hearing the arguments of Mr. Wedderburn for the Government pleader, reduced the sentence from seven years' rigorous imprisonment to three years' rigorous imprisonment.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD.—"Dr Birdwood" is such a household word in Bombay that most of us will take some time to change it for Sir George, and will be apt to regret the necessity there is for doing so. Otherwise the compliment paid an old Bombay citizen is very welcome.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MONSOON.—There has, as we expected, been more rain on the Konkan and Malabar coasts during the past week than in the previous one. In comparison with only three instances of falls of half an inch in the week ending Sept. 3 there have been eleven instances of falls of about half an inch, one of an inch at Mangalore, and one of above two inches at Karwar. In the interior of Western India, with the exception of the district within the line of the Ghate, the weather has been generally fine during the week ending with the 5th. From Belgaum to Satara, however, there was light rain nearly every day; and from Puna showers were reported on each of two days.—Ibid.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.—We shall receive a few weeks hence a new electric light machine on the Brush system (now on its way out) capable of supplying lights to the extent of 50,000 candle power. A feature of the Brush system is that branch lights may be worked successfully at considerable distance from the motive power; and when we get the new machine out we shall be able to meet the wishes of several firms who have applied to us to give them each one or two branch lights. Another great advantage of the Brush light is that its intensity may be increased or diminished at will; it is almost as much under control as the gas burner, which may be made to give a dim or bright light as required, by merely turning a key attached to the bracket or chandelier. The Brush system is that which is employed on the Thames Embankment. The Gramme machine with Jablochkoff candles, which we have had in operation for more than twelve months, has worked very satisfactorily. The brilliant illumination from our street lamp, and its pleasant contrast to the dim gas lamps which "pale their inefficual fires" before it, has no doubt been missed by many during the past few days. Some repairs were necessary, which could not be done in Bombay, and the machine had to be sent to the Indian Electric Light Company's headquarters in Calcutta.—Ibid.

THE REHABILITATION OF SILVER.

It is generally understood that negotiations are at present in progress between the Powers that were represented at the Paris Monetary Conference, in reference to a proposed international agreement for the rehabilitation of silver, drawn up and supported by the Italian Government. We believe that a very small further concession on the part of England—perfectly innocuous in itself, and that could in no sense be regarded as in the slightest degree “tampering with the currency”—would suffice to induce the Powers most interested in the question to come to such an arrangement as would ensure the desired rehabilitation. We would therefore call on all those who think, with us, that the interests both of England and of India are vitally concerned in the success of this movement, to exert themselves betimes—to spread abroad a knowledge of the facts and arguments that have convinced them, and to strengthen the hands of Government in the attempt which we trust it will make to meet the views of the silver countries. Valuable aid has been rendered to the good cause by Mr. A. Cotterell Tupp, of the Bengal Civil Service, the Accountant General of Madras, who has published (P. S. King, London) a careful translation of the official proces verbaux of the Paris Conference, together with admirable notes of his own, and a series of appendices which give all the facts and statistics of the subject. As Mr. Tupp well points out, every Anglo-Indian has a direct and personal interest in the matter, both in his private capacity and as a citizen of a commonwealth that must suffer disastrously if remedial measures are not soon adopted. Mr. Tupp's translation of the Paris Proceedings, with his notes and appendices, will furnish every student of the question with ample materials for studying the leading features of its present aspect; and we sincerely hope that many of our readers who have not hitherto devoted their attention to the subject will now provide themselves with argumentative weapons out of this excellent armoury, and become worthy champions of the good cause.

The adjournment of the Monetary Conference to April next was a very wise and discreet measure. The delay has enabled the various Governments concerned to reconsider the position by the light of the discussions of the Conference, and of the very important facts and conclusions there elicited; and, above all, it has given time for these facts and arguments to sink down into the minds of the people, to influence public opinion in the various States, and to pave the way for such mutual concessions as may lead to general agreement and a successful issue for the next meeting of the Conference. England, whose peculiar position in relation to this controversy has throughout been recognised, has never been asked to make any concessions in regard to the fundamental nature of her currency. All she has been asked to do by the bi-metallic States is to aid in the rehabilitation of silver only so far as might be practicable without either the smallest sacrifice of principle or the faintest suspicion of interfering in the most distant way with her standard. The law now permits the Bank of England to hold one-fifth of its reserve against notes in silver; and the subsidiary silver coinage of England is legal tender up to £2. It is clear that there is no special virtue in the particular amount, £2; and all that the bi-metallic countries have asked England to do is to change the limit of silver legal tender from £2 to £5—the Bank of England at the same time to hold the full amount of silver as reserve against notes that it is permitted to hold by law. The last-mentioned concession has already been made; subject to certain conditions the Bank of England has professed itself ready to hold one-fifth of its reserve in silver. Nothing more is now wanted except that the limit of silver legal tender should be raised to £5. The further advance indicated therein is a very slight one indeed, for the difference between a limit of £2 and one of £5 is obviously one of degree, not of kind or principle—nor is it possible to conceive of any interest suffering from the higher limit being now adopted. That England must suffer, hardly less than India, from a continued depreciation of silver and contraction of the currency, is admirably shown in the memorandum by Mr. R. B. Chapman, C.S.I., late Financial Secretary to the Government of India, which was submitted by him to the Conference; and that India will soon cease to absorb the silver which she has hitherto been able to take is proved beyond doubt in an interesting letter from the same authority to Professor Nasse, of Bonn, printed by Mr. Tupp among his appendices. Mr. Chapman says, in page 67 of his memorandum—“According to all available information, we have now to contemplate the probability of a progressive contraction of the supply of these metals (gold and silver). If so, it is particularly important just now to prevent the further disuse of the less valuable metal; and it would be just now especially disastrous if mankind should finally resolve to use gold alone for the storage of value and decree the destruction of the value of silver.” Mr. Chapman goes on to show that, “in this matter at least, the interest of each country is identical with the interests of the whole world.” In view of the undoubtedly imminent contraction of the currency which is here foreshadowed, it seems incredible that any considerable financial authority in England should persist in opposing the very trifling concession which would be so fruitful in remedying the threatened evils.

GOLD MINING IN INDIA.

A CIRCULAR, of which the following is a copy, has been sent to the shareholders in the Indian Gold Mines Company (Limited) of Glasgow:—

"The Indian Gold Mines Company (Limited), 65, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow, Sept. 20, 1881.

"Sir,—I am instructed by the directors to send you the annexed extract from a letter received to-day from Mr. Severn, the company's engineer in India, dated August 25 last. Although the report of the crushing therein referred to is not so satisfactory as the directors anticipated, they have no reason to alter the opinion which they have formed of the value of the company's property. It has been repeatedly explained that these preliminary crushings of small quantities—which are only trials—are not in any way to be depended upon, and the directors have resolved not to publish any further information on this point until reliable results have been obtained. It has been in deference to the wish of the shareholders that the information already given has been circulated, as the directors did not feel themselves warranted in incurring the responsibility of withholding it. I am happy to inform you that a highly qualified assistant engineer has been appointed, and that he immediately proceeds to India.—Yours obedient servant,

(Signed) "J. WYLLIE GUILD, Secretary."

EXTRACT REFERRED TO.

"The works in general are going on well, and I am truly glad to say the first section tunnel road, from the receiving shed to past the tunnel bridge (including both inclines), is railed, and all effort is being made to push on to mill site. The mill site is also being prepared; but of course I can't do anything in re the mill until the road throughout is railed, as the mill is at the far end. The slides that fell are cleared away, and four temporary timber bridges are being thrown over the gaps in road. On Saturday last, August 20, the state of the several drives were as follows:—No. 1. Total length, 113ft.; 2. 101ft. 6in.; 3. 84ft.—heavy quartz; 4. 29ft.—heavy quartz; 5 and 6. all ready for sending stone to big mill site. No work doing; 7. work going on—(Southern Alpha boundary); 8. timbered and driving. Driving open cutting (as yet) on Hamlin reef. Building stone being sent up to dam, and sand-washing going on. The first building for six Eurasians is just finished, and the six men will be up next week under a regular agreement. They are to start at Rs. 30. Second building now erecting near the top of the long self-acting incline. Third building going up on Alpha Ground. The amalgam obtained from the last crushing, amounting to 10 oz. 15 dwts. of amalgam on retorting, fell to 1 oz. 5 dwts. As it is imperative that I make an analysis of this product, I have stopped the mill until we are further into the lode, as it is impossible that any results, good or bad, can, from where we are now working, be of any value. I am in an exceedingly difficult position as to crushings—if the stone runs poor I am abused all round by the shareholders, and I trust the board will do me the kindness (as indeed they have already done) to give me the full weight of their confidence. The sinking in No. 5 goes on, and we have about five tons on grass—this work must be slow. I do not think proper to crush this stone, for it may go well, and then we shall be credited with working the market; on the other hand, it may run poor, then we shall be abused. My own wish is to crush where I think the result (good or bad) will be of value to me. When (in a few days) we are thoroughly in the lode and driving on it (in No. 3), then I would crush steady—but it may not pay—and for steady work I cannot, as yet, send down stone from No. 5; it is too distant."

The following is a copy of a notice from the South East Wynaad Estates and Gold Mining Company (Limited), which has been posted up in the Stock Exchange:—

"The following telegram has this day been received from our managing engineer, Mr. John Jeken Cooper:—'Fifteen tons Tea Reef contained one ton pyrites; assay 2 oz. 12 dwts. 5 grs. Thirteen tons tailings, 3 dwts. 4 grs. Fair sample, 10 tons, No. 5 tunnel El'zabeth Estate, 12 dwts. 22 grs. per ton. Writing regarding machinery; prospects are encouraging.' Respecting the above 15 tons Tea Reef, Mr. Cooper had previously telegraphed:—'Amalgamating results 18 grs. per ton; tables new; not fair test; assay pyrites and tailings next week.'"

THE KOLAR FIELDS.—The crushing of auriferous quartz at the Kolar gold field was inaugurated by the Maharaja of Mysor. His Highness left Bangalore by special train, accompanied by his brother, his Dewan, the Resident, and thirty-five European gentlemen. Along the route were crowds of natives who exhibited a keen interest. At the Kolar Road Station guards of the Sillidar Horse and a strong body of the Mysor Police were waiting. The crowd was very great and enthusiastic. His Highness was driven from the station to the gold fields in a carriage and pair, escorted by the Sillidar Horse, and followed by a stream of running people, whose excitement was very remarkable. General Berestord conducted his Highness and the other visitors over the field. They first visited the claim of the Bombay Company, the Kaiser-i-Hind, where trial shafts are being sunk. They then went to the Nunddydroog Company, which was earlier in the field, and consequently is in a more advanced stage. They then proceeded to the Ooregum Company's claim, where some washed dirt was washed in the presence of his Highness and yielded good specimens of gold. Then to the Mysor Company's, a mile distant. Arrived at the Mysor Company's works, his Highness proceeded on foot to the elephant stamp house near the main shaft, turned a handle and set the crushing machinery going. After witnessing for half an hour the reduction of the quartz to powder his Highness descended the main shaft. The mining captain descended with him. Most of the European guests, as well as the Dewan, followed his Highness. The galleries below, cut in auriferous quartz, were illuminated with lamps and candles. His Highness was shown everything below. He then ascended the shaft, and shortly afterwards the homeward journey was commenced, and Bangalore was reached at seven o'clock. The day was brilliantly fine and the air cool. His Highness expressed the pleasure he had derived from the journey and inspection. The Mysor Company commences crushing in earnest to-morrow, and the future of the industry in the Kolar field is believed to depend on the result. The company has the good fortune to possess a thoroughly efficient mining captain, and the works have a workmanlike air about them that strengthens the belief that if gold exists in a remunerative quantity in the quartz the captain is sure to obtain it. The company took possession of the field last October, and has now all its machinery on the ground. Most of the proposed buildings are erected. Twelve shafts have been sunk to a depth of from 50 to 73 feet with five galleries, from 12 to 80 feet long, opening on what Captain Rogers believes is payable quartz. One thousand tons of quartz are now on the surface awaiting crushing. Four well-defined reefs are being worked, including the Champion, which is clearly traceable two miles in this company's property. The elephant stamp, which his Highness started, is capable of crushing twenty tons a day. Another similar stamp is in course of erection, and also thirty head of Californian gravitation stamps, which will be ready in three months, when the quartz will be available in sufficient quantity to keep all constantly employed. Five hauling and pumping engines are already working. Six bunded tanks have been formed to store rain water and receive pumpings from shafts. Labour and fuel from the vicinity are abundant. The situation of the camp is healthy, and there has been no case of sickness to date, though the late hot season was unusually oppressive. The result of the crushings will not be known until four hundred tons have been crushed. Five square miles of Kolar are now being worked by nine independent companies, seven of which are directed from London, one from Bombay, and one from Madras.—Times of India, Sept. 5.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday, concurrently with the increased firmness in the rate at which the Indian Council drafts were allotted, the price of bar silver was maintained at 51 1/4d. per ounce, without, however, any business of importance being reported. The nearest figure for Mexican dollars was 51d., a moderate inquiry for these coins being observable. The Rupee-Four per Cents. were quoted at 83 3/4 to 3/8, and Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being 90 15-16 to 1. The exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta were telegraphed at 1s. 8 1/4d., Hong Kong being 3s. 9d., and Shanghai 5s. 1 1/4d.—On Thursday bar silver was dealt in at 51 13-16d., an improvement of 1-16d. In Mexican dollars no business was transacted, and the price remained at 51d. The exchange from Bombay was steady at 1s. 8 1/4d., but from Calcutta there was no quotation, owing to the observance of the Doorgu Pooja holidays. The rate from Shanghai was telegraphed at 5s. 1 1/4d., and from Hong Kong at 3s. 9d.—On Saturday the silver market was firm, but in the absence of supplies no business in bars was transacted, the quotation for the uncoined metal being unaltered at 51 13-16d. per ounce. Rupee Four per Cents. were a shade firmer at 83 3/4 to 3/8, the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being unchanged. Improvement was noticeable in the exchange from Bombay, and was telegraphed at 1s. 8 3-16d. The holiday in Calcutta prevented any rate being sent from that centre. But from Hong Kong the figure was 3s. 9d., and from Shanghai 5s. 1 1/4d.

OBITUARY.—Colonel George James Dalrymple-Hay, of the Bengal Staff Corps, whose death at Puna, in his fifty-first year, has just been announced, was the eldest son of the late Sir James Dalrymple-Hay, of Park Place, Wigtownshire. He entered the military service of the East India Company on their Bengal establishment as an ensign in 1847, and was posted to the 57th Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry (locally known as "Lord Maira-Ka-Pultun") on February 12, 1848. His regiment arrived at Lahore in 1850, and he was promoted to lieutenantancy on November 4, 1852. Having passed a district examination in the Persian and Hindustani languages, he was soon after selected for staff employment and appointed adjutant of the 18th Irregular Cavalry on February 10, 1854. This corps arrived in Peshawur in December, 1855, and was stationed there at the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny in 1857. He was promoted to be second in command of the 18th Irregular Cavalry on Oct. 27, 1858, and attained the rank of captain on Nov. 21 of the same year. In 1861 he joined the Bengal Staff Corps, and on March 7, 1862, he was appointed to the Pay Department as paymaster at Rawul Pindi, in the Punjab, for the Trans-Ravee Circle, and was promoted to the rank of major in the Staff Corps on March 20, 1867. On March 20, 1873, he was duly promoted to the grade of lieutenant colonel, and on April 1, 1876, he was classified as a military accountant of the second class, first grade, in the department of military accounts. He was gazetted a brevet colonel in the army on Jan. 20, 1878, and, on the ensuing 14th of June, he was promoted to be a military accountant of the first class, second grade, receiving the appointment of examiner of commissariat and stud accounts in the department. The late Colonel Dalrymple-Hay married, in 1855, Emily, daughter of Colonel Frederick Maitland, of the Bengal Army.

Delafosse, C.B., and other comrades of the deceased. The coffin was almost covered with wreaths and crosses of flowers, some of which had been sent by friends from a distance. Lord Napier of Magdala and Sir Bartle Frere were prevented from being present.

TRIAL TRIP OF THE "CROCODILE."—The Indian troopship Crocodile, Capt. Cardale, which is the last on the trooping roster, and which will leave Portsmouth on Oct. 7 for Bombay with troops, made a successful trial of her machinery at sea on Thursday, in charge of the steam reserve and factory officers. Very little has been done to the main engines since they were put on board by Messrs. Humphrys and Tennant, of Deptford, but as the ship has during the present refit had her manual steering appliances supplemented by steam-steering gear, it was necessary to put it to a severe test for the purpose of discovering defects and weaknesses. As the Crocodile is in every respect ready for sea except having her troops on board—the absence of whom, however, was represented by an equivalent of several hundred friends of the officers and crew—her draught on the occasion was 17ft. 3in. forward and 23ft. 3in. aft. The average pressure in the boilers during the two hours' full-power steaming was 55·8lb., with an extraordinary vacuum of 28·37 and 28·50 inches in the forward and aft condensers respectively. With a mean of 51·39 revolutions per minute, a pressure was recorded of 30·85lb. and 8·71lb. in the high and low pressure cylinders, representing a horse-power of 1,479·62 and 1,554·6 horses, and giving a total indicated power of 3,034·29, or about a thousand horses less than was realised at the contractors' trial with a mean boiler pressure of 59lb. The average speed per hour attained during the trial was thirteen knots. With one man in charge of the steam-steering machine and thirteen at the wheel, the helm was got over in twenty seconds by the former and a little short of two minutes by the latter. The starboard half-circles were made under steam in 2 min. 47 sec. and 2 min. 58 sec., and by hand in 2 min. 57 sec. and 3 min. 4 sec., the difference not being so great as in the Malabar and Yumna. The port half-circles in each case took a little more time. The full circles were completed in 5 min. 48 sec. (starboard) and 6 min. 46 sec. (port) by steam, and 3 min. 30 sec. by hand, the diameters in the former being 638 and 644 yards, and in the latter 713 and 758 yards. After swinging for the adjustment of her compasses, the Crocodile returned into harbour. It is intended to fit all the troopships with the siren. The Crocodile is fixed to leave Portsmouth on the 7th inst., for Bombay, with the 7th and 9th Batteries of the 9th Brigade Royal Artillery, the 6th and 7th Batteries 10th Brigade, and drafts for the 2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey Regiment, 1st Battalion Royal Irish Regiment, 1st Battalion East Lancashire Regiment, 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment, 1st Battalion South Lancashire Regiment, 2nd Battalion East Surrey Regiment, and sundry individuals, making a total of seventy-eight officers, 1,081 men, seventy-one women, and seventy-two children. From Plymouth she will take Major Jones, 1st Manchester Regiment; Lieutenants Abdy and Smyth, R.A.; Capt. Baker, 1st King's Own Borderers; and Lieut. Triscott, R.A.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

Two splendid steamships, the Rome and the Clyde, which have just been added to the fleet of vessels, upwards of sixty in number, belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, were inspected on Thursday by the directors. The steamers are berthed in the new and spacious Royal Albert Dock, which is at present the easternmost, and consequently nearest to the Channel, of the series of great docks on the north bank of the Thames. At the dock the visitors were received by several officials of the company, and the captains and chief officers of the new ships. The visitors included Mr. T. Sutherland (Chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Company), Sir A. Blyth, Mr. A. M. Bathune, Dr. A. Beattie, Sir G. Chambers, Mr. Dodds, M.P., Admiral Hewett, Sir Lewis Jackson, Colonel Martindale, Admiral Sir William Mends, Mr. Du Plat Taylor, Sir T. White, Mr. Kemp-Welch, and Mr. J. P. Knight (London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway). The visitors were shown over the two vessels, and their dimensions, passenger accommodation, and general appointments were pointed out by the officials of the company.

With the sailing of one of the new ships, the Rome, on Wednesday next for Australia, the change of the port of embarkation for outward-bound passengers will commence, and from that day the company's steamers will cease to go to Southampton, and passengers will be put on board at Gravesend. Arrangements have already been made with the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway Company for the despatch of a special train from the Liverpool-street station of the Great Eastern Railway for the conveyance of passengers to each steamer on the day of sailing. From the Tilbury riverside terminus of the railway, passengers will be taken to the company's vessels in a river steamer. On the homeward voyage the company's steamers will call at Plymouth, so as to give passengers an opportunity of saving a few hours by taking train to London. A feature in the internal arrangements of the Rome which will commend itself at once to most travellers, is the place of the best state-rooms—the saloon and the music room forward instead of aft of the engine-room. An arrangement which had its advantages in a sailing vessel, since the wind as the propelling force must, either through the stern ports or through the port-holes on one side or the other, reach the saloon fresh and untainted by the often malodorous air from between decks in the forward part of the ship, is so evidently unsuitable to the conditions under which steamers frequently make their way against a head wind or during a calm, that it is rather matter for surprise that passenger-carrying steamship companies have not generally adopted the plan of putting their best customers where they are least likely to be annoyed by the smell of cargo and engine oil. The Rome has accommodation for 160 first-class passengers, and it may be added that the fitting-up of the parts of the ship devoted to them appears to be all that could be reasonably wished for. The great dining saloon on the main deck, 50ft. long, and the full width of the ship, 44ft. across, is well lighted and ventilated. The decoration of the walls with large square panels of Italian walnut, elaborately carved by Signor C. Cambi, of Siena, is something novel in a steamship. Instead of fixed bench seats, there are chairs which turn on pivots, so that passengers can take their seats or leave them, which is perhaps to most of more importance in the early days of the voyage, without disturbing others at the table. Over the dining saloon is the music room, an apartment 40ft. long, very handsomely decorated and furnished, and, also on the upper deck, a comfortable smoking room. The state rooms are on the main deck, and near them are the bath rooms, with marble baths, and a constant supply of hot and cold water. Immediately aft of the engine rooms are saloons and cabins affording accommodation for fifty second-class passengers, for whose comfort, indeed, the provision made in the Rome is more complete than in the first-class quarters of the older vessels on many steamship lines. The great width of the upper deck leaves room on each side of the deck-houses for a broad promenade, which will be reserved for the use of first-class passengers. The vessel has many watertight compartments, and nine separate pumps in the engine room, and there are nine boats, of which four are lifeboats and one a steam launch. Special provision, too, is made for extinguishing a fire. The principal dimensions of the Rome are—length, 430ft.; breadth, 44ft.; depth, 36ft.; gross tonnage, 5,100 tons; with cargo-carrying capacity of 4,000 tons. She is practically a four decker, for there is a hurricane deck. This is 300ft. long, and is connected with the full poop and forecabin by portable bridges. On the forecabin is a steam windlass for raising the anchor, and on the poop a steam warping engine, in addition to steam winches, four powerful steam cranes, and other appliances for rapidly taking in or discharging cargo. Messrs. Muir and Caldwell's steam gear is employed for steering. A refrigerating machine on the Bell-Coleman principle is carried. The ship is engined with two pairs of compound tandem engines of 1,000 horse-power nominal and over 5,000 horse-power indicated. There are two low pressure cylinders, each measuring 82in. diameter, and two high pressure cylinders of 44in. diameter. The steam pressure is 90lb. to the square inch. Each piston rod weighs four tons, is 13in. in diameter, and has a five-foot stroke. The massive crank shaft, of Vicher's steel, weighs thirty tons. Steam is generated in four double-ended and two single-ended boilers heated by thirty furnaces. She is fitted with four masts and two funnels. The builders and makers of the engines were Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock.

The other new ship, the Clyde, which has been built and engaged by Messrs. Denny Brothers, of Dumbarton, is, in general arrangement, similar to the Rome. She is, however, rather smaller, her dimensions being—length, 390ft.; breadth, 42ft.; depth, 35ft.; gross tonnage, 4,200 tons; and cargo capacity, 3,500 tons; with room for 1,100 tons of coal. She is fitted with ten watertight compartments. Her engines are of 800 horse-power nominal and 4,900 horse-power indicated. Accommodation is provided for 120 first-class and 48 second-class passengers. The saloon has been decorated from designs by Mr. Burgess, jun., of Glasgow.

After the inspection the visitors were entertained at a luncheon on board the Rome. Mr. T. Sutherland presided. In response to a toast proposed by Sir L. Jackson wishing prosperity to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Mr. Sutherland mentioned, amongst other interesting facts in connection with the fleet of the company, that two other vessels similar to the Rome are in course of construction, to be called the Carthage and the Shannon, and that three more new vessels are to follow, to be called the Ganges, the Sutlej, and the Thames. These new vessels would give a total tonnage of 50,000. The company had sold within the last ten or eleven years vessels of about 80,000 tons, and they had constructed during the same period, including the new ships he had mentioned, between 130,000 and 140,000 shipping tonnage. The Rome was the first of their ships that was to go direct from London to India. She would only stop at Gravesend to take in passengers by special train to Thames Haven. She would sail on her first trip next Tuesday, bound for Australia, via Bombay, to Adelaide, Melbourne, and Sydney.—During the luncheon Capt. Cates, commander of the Rome, was complimented on the excellent arrangements of his vessel, particularly in reference to the passenger comforts provided, and was cordially shaken hands with and wished a prosperous voyage by a crowd of friends sufficiently numerous to be almost embarrassing.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

COFFEE.—The market continues dull, and, except for colory qualities, plantation Ceylon sold 1s. per cwt. lower. Of 562 casks, 231 barrels and bags, only about two-thirds sold, low small and low middling, 69s. to 77s.; middling, 83s. to 87s.; good to fine middling, 90s. 6d. to 94s.; bold, 101s. 6d. to 112s.; 286 bags East India, 71s. 6d. to 82s. 6d.; 103 packages Mocha partly sold at 110s.

SPICES.—The sales went slowly. White pepper easy; part of 1,014 bags Singapore selling at 7½d. to 7¾d.; and of 2,650 bags black, about 300 bags Penang at 5¾d. for Acheen.

COTTON.—The market is firm, with very little doing. Sales about 1,000 bales, including Tinnevely at 4½d. to 5¾d.; Bengal at 4½d. to 4¾d.; and Persian at 4¾d. per lb. forward delivery. American September 7 7-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that demand for China tea last referred to has further increased, common to fair grades of Congou up to 1s. per lb. selling at firmer rates. Indian has been well competed for at better prices for low to medium. Other kinds are unchanged. Burma rice cargoes are now slow of sale at prices equal to the lowest current during the recent period of depression. At the spice sales the tone was slow. Zanzibar cloves again sold at easier rates, but holders generally showed less disposition to realise at the reduction, and several parcels were taken in. Black pepper dull, and can be bought for arrival at some decline. White is quiet and easier.

COFFEE is dull and unsettled. 151 casks, 46 barrels and bags plantation sold at previous rates of 1s. decline. Low middling, 78s. to 80s. 6d.; middling, 86s. to 87s.; good middling to bold, 89s. to 111s. 324 cases, 510 barrels and bags East India chiefly bought in, a few lots selling lower at 73s. to 89s. Of 4,499 bags Costa Rica, only a small part sold at some further reduction in price. Fine ordinary greenish, 62s. to 63s. 6d.; grayish to color, 73s. 6d. to 80s. per cwt. 1,389 bags other foreign withdrawn or bought in.

RICE.—A considerable business on the spot, including low Bengal at 7s. 1½d. to 8s. 3d. per cwt.

COTTON.—A quiet market, without quotable change. Sales about 500 bales, including Tinnevely, at 5½d., and Coconada at 4¼d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely September-October, 5 7-16d. for g.f.c.; Western Madras, July-August, 4 11-16d. per lb. for fully good fair.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—Demand continues strong, and the lower grades of leaf and broken, which are somewhat scarce, have improved in value. Good medium to fine grades are unaltered, except for specially desirable marks, for which prices have favoured sellers. The auctions have comprised 13,500 packages. Arrivals 15,000 packages. Telegrams from Calcutta report the market strong and advancing.

COFFEE.—Plantation Ceylon easier, being generally 2s. down for the week and rather lower for colour kinds. 311 casks, 17 tierces, 16 barrels, and 90 bags sold by auction to-day, small to low middling at 66s. 6d. to 79s. 6d., middling to good middling colour at 83s. to 90s. 6d., fine middling to bold at 93s. to 111s. 6d.

RICE.—The Brokers' Association weekly circular reports more activity on the spot, and for Bengal kinds better prices paid. Floating cargoes difficult of sale, at late rates. To-day one of 1,160 tons Rangoon sold at 8s. 4½d. per cwt., ex quay Liverpool.

COTTON.—The market is firm for East India kinds, with little or nothing in American futures, which close at 1-32d. decline. Sales about 800 bales, including Western at 4½d. 4¾d.; Sind at 4d.; Bengal at 5 1-16d.; Persian at 4½d., and Salem at 4¼d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely August Cape and Canal 5¾d. for good fair. Forward delivery, American December-January 6 17-32d., March-April 6 9-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

SATURDAY EVENING.

COTTON.—Messrs. Robert Barbour and Brother's report, dated Manchester, Sept. 30, states that trade in that district has been languid throughout the month. The reported activity and hardening value of the raw material, while seriously prejudicing the interests of the manufacturer, has not stimulated the demand for either twist or cloth, and, save in certain yarns for home consumption, little or no advance has been paid; the comparatively small business having been arranged for the most part at prices very slightly exceeding those of May. Quotations have shown considerable irregularity, having been to a great extent purely nominal, and the highest rates obtainable, being as a rule much under the parity of cost, were only accepted as a necessity, in limited quantity. As values of staple fabrics have thus shown no response to the upward movement in Liverpool, there seems no reason to anticipate a fall when the "corner" dies out.

THE MYSOR TOMBS AT VELLORE.—Some repairs being required for the tombs of the family and retainers of Hyder Ali and Tippoo Sultan, it has been ascertained by the Government that, for the tombs of Fatima Khanam, widow of Hyder, and Padsha Begum, widow of Tippoo Sultan, monthly allowances of Rs.50 each are paid respectively to Muhammad Beg, the grand nephew of the former lady, and Muhammad Abdulla Hussain Thayer, the husband of Padsha Begum's grand niece. The tomb of Bakshi Begum is the same building as that in which Fatima Khanam lies, and for maintaining which the above mentioned monthly allowance of Rs.50 is made. For the six remaining principal tombs (containing the remains of a daughter, "some of the wives," and a son-in-law of Tippoo, and the remains of three chief eunuchs) for the mosque, choultry, and other structures built on the occasion of Bakshi Begum's death, and for the large number of minor tombs of dependants and adherents of the Muhammad dynasty, who desired in death to lie near the graves of their masters' widow or children, there is no specific allowance; but a sum of about Rs.244 per annum, representing the net proceeds of the landed inam, is all that is available, in addition to the fund allowances of Rs.50 before mentioned for maintaining all these tombs and buildings. To supplement this inadequate income the restoration of the allowances, totalling some Rs.400 yearly on account of ceremonies at Bakshi Begum's tomb, was recently sought. These last allowances were discontinued under the orders of the Government of 1861, after Nananer Begum's death, on the assumption that the allowances were solely for fateahs, or ceremonies, and not for the maintenance of the tombs. From this point of view it was considered that the further continuance of the allowances was not reasonably to be expected from Government. The Government now consider that the existing allowances of Rs.50 for the tombs of Fatima Khanam (cum Bakshi Begum) and Padsha Begum, though doubtless expended to a considerable extent on fateahs, may reasonably be regarded as adequate for all purposes connected with these two tombs, including the ordinary maintenance of the structures; but that for keeping in good order, some further claim beyond the continuance of the inam may reasonably be entertained by the State. The Government have therefore directed that the necessary repairs be executed at the expense of the State.—Madras Mail.

INDIAN GLENROCK GOLD MINING COMPANY.—The reef on Glenrosa has been intersected by another trench put across its course, and proves after all to be the Yellumballay Reef, evidently slightly turned from its main direction, and following the sweep of the hill, which accounts for our missing it in the first trench. We have also got quartz in the trial shaft, which I am inclined to think is the reef, and No. 3 tunnel appears now to be on the course of the reef, which tends to prove my theory of the change of direction. This reef is a very masterly one, lying in bands, and about fifteen feet thick over all. In the open cutting I have picked stones out of it myself containing visible gold, but it was of rather poor quality, being highly alloyed with silver; nevertheless, it will, I think, be a paying lode, and when struck in depth should be rich, as the old native miners went down a considerable distance on the underlie after stuff that must have repaid them well for their troublesome and dangerous work. I informed you in my last I had set Mr. Tom Coward on to clear up the hill at the back of Glenrock bungalow, the top and western slope of Chic Hadiabetta. I ordered a trench to be cut across an outcrop, and I think we have here proved another reef. Mr. Coward writes me this morning that he has obtained excellent "prospects" at both points of work being carried on, and he thinks the quartz is of a "good paying quality." As he was inclined to be sceptical, I think this was very encouraging. If this should turn out well there is every opportunity of making a good and cheaply worked mine of this part of the property alone.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 6s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and naturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

A DELICIOUS BEVERAGE AND TONIC.

tract of Malt: Nutritious, Strengthening, Stimulating Health, as well as the Invalid. Strongly recommended by the Medical Faculty. An Immediate Remedy; experienced

TESTIMONIALS.

SIR,—A short time since I was induced by the novelty the title to send for a bottle of your Liebig's Extract of Meat and Malt Wine. I was perfectly acquainted with the value of the Extractum Carnis, and not quite a stranger to the invigorating and fortifying properties of malt wine, and, therefore, felt a natural curiosity to test them when combined.

Men who work hard as I do, not muscular hard work but that which is quite as exhausting, viz., brain work very often experience the need of, and have sometimes, an almost irresistible craving for a "pick me up," and very often the panacea for a time for lassitude, and that state of mind which renders work irksome, are alcoholic stimulants, the use of which must sooner or later end disastrously.

The man who can furnish a remedy sure, certain, and harmless, for the lassitude which follows constant brain work is a benefactor of his species, and may be said to have added many years of usefulness to the lives of useful men.

Your extract is a success, and when more generally known will be used by all tellers of the mind.—Yours faithfully,

O. D. RAY.

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT AND MALT WINE (COLEMAN'S).

Queen's-crescent, Haverstock-hill,

London, March 5, 1881.

DEAR SIR,—Some time since, being greatly fatigued with over-work and long hours at business, my health (being naturally delicate) became very indifferent. I lost all energy, strength, and appetite, and was so weak as to be scarcely able to walk.

As you are aware, I sent for a dozen of your Extract of Meat and Malt Wine, which in a few days pulled me up marvellously. Three or four glasses of it daily have quite altered and restored me to better health than ever "without the assistance of a doctor."

I am now giving it to my son, twelve years of age, whom we have always thought consumptive, and from a puny, ailing boy he seems to be fast growing into a strong, healthy lad.

Enclosed you have cheque. Please send me two dozen of the "Extract." With thanks for your prompt attention to my last.—Yours truly, I am, Sir,

GEORGE A. TYLER.

good one. Mrs. C. encloses twelve stamps for basket

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour. Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 20; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 18; Calcutta, Sept. 17. This is, we presume, the last of the monsoon mails; on and after the 29th Sept. the mail steamers for Europe leave Bombay on Thursday instead of on Tuesday.

THE official reports of the state of the season and the prospects of the crops throughout India for the week ending Sept. 6 says that the want of rain continues to be felt in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country; elsewhere in the Bombay Presidency the weather has been favourable and the crops are good. In the Nizam's territories the recent rainfall has improved the prospects of the autumn harvest, but spring sowings are retarded for want of water in tanks, and short pasturage is causing mortality amongst cattle. Excepting in a few limited tracts, where more rain is required, prospects are now good, or fair, throughout the Madras Presidency and the Mysor State. In several districts of Bengal which had been suffering, more or less, from drought, good rain has fallen with much benefit to the crops, which are now generally promising, except in a few places where damage has been done by floods. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh a general break in the wet weather has set in, and crops are, on the whole, in excellent condition. In the Punjab agricultural prospects are favourable, as they have been for some time. In the Central Provinces, where a break in the rains was very much wanted, there has been much less rain than there was last week; the prospects of the rice crops are good, and those of other crops are fair. In the Rajputana and Central India States, in Berar, Coorg, Assam, and British Burma, the weather has been seasonable and crops are thriving, although in some parts of Central India injury has occurred from excessive rain. The reports of the week are generally satisfactory. Except in the Bombay Deccan and in the Southern Mahratta Country, good rain has fallen in places where it was particularly needed; whilst in many tracts, where the rains have hitherto been too heavy, some clear weather has done good to the crops.

DURING the period preceding the date of the departure of the mail the widespread outbreak of cholera seems to have been at its worst. Colonel F. J. Millar, deputy commissioner of Gurdaspore, died of cholera on Sept. 11. During the months of June, July, and August seventy Europeans and upwards of 1,200 natives died from cholera at Lahore and the adjoining military station, Meean Meer. But we are glad to note that before the mail left the epidemic was abating. The Times of India of Sept. 20 says:—"The mortality from cholera, both in Northern and Western India, shows a satisfactory diminution, and hopes are entertained that the outbreak has seen its worst phase."

WE regret, however, to observe that the telegraphic advices of the Times, dated October 9, speak of a severe fever epidemic that is raging at Amritsar. The mortality is 200 to 300 daily. The total deaths for eleven days ended on October 1 were 2,265, of which 1,138 were children. The pestilence is believed to be due to the late abnormally heavy rainfall. The Punjab Government is making every endeavour to cope with the disease by sending extra medical aid and opening dispensaries.

THE weekly Calcutta correspondence of the Times, to which all Anglo-Indians look forward with so much interest, is this week dated from Darjiling. Our Bengal readers will understand the meaning of this without further explanation. But for others it may be well to note that yesterday was the last Sunday in the Durga Puja holidays, the twelve days of which will henceforward be spent in Darjiling by a large number of Calcutta citizens, now that Sir Ashley Eden has brought the hills within a few hours' run of the metropolis. Four years ago, when the same correspondent took advantage of these holidays to make a trip to Simla, the fact of his telegram being dated from Simla was put forward by some Opposition orators and journals as a proof that he had been "got at" by Lord Lytton.

THE Empire is, we think, to be congratulated on the fact that the most important Indian news of the week is that of the complete and loyal adoption, by the present Government, of the financial policy of Lord Lytton and Sir John Strachey. The Times correspondent, in a telegram dated Oct. 9, summarises a financial notification in the Gazette of the highest importance; wherein that policy, in regard to the decentralisation of finance, is carried to the full and legitimate conclusion for which Lord Lytton's financial measures prepared the way, and which was the ultimate goal aimed at in the measures initiated by Sir John Strachey and Sir Richard Temple under Lord Mayo's auspices. The telegram runs as follows:—

"The official Gazette announces an important extension of the financial decentralisation policy. In the first place, it is proposed to apply to the whole of India the principle upon which the most recent settlement—namely, that with Burma in 1879—was framed. That principle is that, instead of giving to the local Governments a fixed sum to make good any excess in the provincial expenditure over the provincial receipts, a certain proportion of the imperial revenue of each province should be devoted to this object. Certain heads of the revenue will be reserved as imperial, others divided between imperial and provincial, and the rest made wholly provincial. The balance of the transfers being against the provinces will be rectified by assigning to each province a fixed percentage on its land revenue. In Bengal this will amount to 38 per cent.; in Madras, 26 per cent.; in Bombay, 50 per cent.; in the North West Provinces, 22 per cent.; in the Punjab, 43 per cent.; in the Central Provinces, 48 per cent.; in Assam, 49 per cent.; and in Burma, 33 per cent. It is hoped that the result of this system will be to give to the Provincial Governments a direct interest in the most important item of the imperial revenue raised within their own province.

"The second proposal is to modify the existing arrangements between the Imperial and Provincial Governments regarding the resources granted in the event of fiscal misfortune, such as a heavy loss on the opium revenue, or a national disaster, such as a war or a severe famine. It is declared on the one hand that the local Governments must look for no special aid except in case of severe famine, and then only within certain limits; and, on the other hand, that the Imperial Government will make no demand on them except in case of a disaster so abnormal as to exhaust the imperial reserves and necessitate the suspension of the entire machinery of public improvement. Aid will be given to the provinces in a severe famine only if the current provincial income during the period of the distress has been exhausted, and if the accumulated savings of the past year in excess of the ordinary working balance have been drawn upon to the extent of two-thirds of the total amount. The margin of the provincial income over the expenditure in normal years will be made liable for the completion of the relief works begun during the famine, or will be chargeable to the extent of one-fourth for the payment of the interest on the imperial loans contracted to meet the cost of the famine. The Imperial Government expresses the hope that if a sufficient surplus accrues at the close of the current financial year it may be able to restore to the Provincial Governments the contributions, aggregating 67 lakhs, made by them for the Afghan war, on the receipt of satisfactory assurances that these amounts will be devoted to productive public works.

"The Governor General in Council believes that the time has now arrived when a further practical development may be afforded to the intentions of Lord Mayo's Government, and hopes that the extension of this scheme for the decentralisation of the finances will develop local self-government. To this end the Provincial Governments will be instructed to make a careful scrutiny of their accounts, with a view of ascertaining what items of receipt and charge can be transferred from the provincial to the local heads for administration by a committee comprising non-official and, wherever possible, elected members, and also what measures are necessary for the purpose of introducing more local self-government, equalising local and municipal taxation throughout the Empire, checking severe or unsuitable imposts, and favouring forms most accordant with the popular opinion or sentiment. Then follow details regarding the treatment of the principal heads of the receipts and charges, the general result being that nearly three-fifths of the revenue and about one-fourth of the expenditure of British India will be provincialised."

THE news from Afghanistan is, as might be expected, by no means of such a satisfactory nature. Imprimis, the Wardaks and the Hazaras of the Logar Valley are said to have risen in the rear of the Ameer's army and plundered Ghazni. Next, the Ameer himself is behaving with extreme severity in Kandahar; and one of the chief objects of his enmity, whose house he has ostentatiously burnt, is our protégé, the Wali Sher Ali—the late British Wali of Kandahar, in whose defence we fought at Maiwand. Needless to say, nothing is as yet heard of the Ameer going on to Herat. He has, however, sent on a sirdar with some troops; and there is some good news from the westward, of tribesmen having invaded the Herat Valley, who may possibly make it too hot for Ayub, in which case he will probably make for Russian or Persian territory.

THE worst news is yet to be told. It is, that we are “probably” going to confide the care of the Khojak Pass to “a few native levies!” By “native,” of course, “Afghan” is meant, for in Afghanistan no distinction need be maintained between British and Indian troops; and the meaning of the telegram is, that we are once more going to “scuttle.”

THE Times telegram from Quetta, dated October 9, to which we have referred above, says:—

“Beyond the fact that the Ameer has despatched a force to Girishk there is little news from Kandahar. The column which is commanded by Sirdar Mahomed Yusaf Khan consists of four infantry regiments, 1,500 cavalry, and six guns. It marched on the 2nd inst. Rumours of serious disturbances at Ghazni prevail in Kandahar. The Joguri Hazaras and Wardaks are said to have assembled in large numbers, laid waste the country, and plundered the city. The Ameer is sending troops from Kandahar to put down the rising. As this must have commenced before the tidings of Ayub's defeat reached the north, and has apparently not been joined in by Ghilzais, it is probably only serious in delaying the Ameer's march on Herat, in which every day lost is to be regretted. From the West we hear that the Char-Aimak and other tribes, joined by the Saloh Turcomans, have invaded the Herat Valley, and it may be that Ayub, who is known to have reached Farah, may be unable to enter the city.

“The Ameer made a triumphal entry into Kandahar on the 30th ult. and ordered the town to be illuminated for three nights. He promised the people immunity for past offences, but refused to recognise the receipts for taxation granted by Ayub's officers, and insisted on payment in full. In addition, he has ordered all persons who received pay from his governor or from Ayub to refund it. He has also refused all the overtures made by the sirdars, has confiscated the lands and houses of all of Ayub's principal adherents, and has ordered the house of the Wali Shere Ali, his inveterate enemy, to be pulled down. The villages for several miles round Kandahar have been completely gutted and all the cattle carried off; but, nevertheless, the Ghilzais complain that the Ameer has broken faith with them in withholding his promised permission to plunder the city for seven days. The compensation he is declared to have promised them is three lakhs of rupees. He is raising three Kandahari regiments by forcible enlistment and sending them to Cabul. In short, he is reading the Duranis a very severe lesson, and they are paying heavily for the incapacity of the Ameer's generals and the faithlessness of his troops. They are thoroughly broken, and declare that in the memory of man the Ghilzais have not enjoyed so great a triumph over them.

“Here in Quetta and Pishin we are in daily hope of orders for a move. Nothing certain is known, but it is understood that the 13th Hussars, two batteries of artillery, and one British infantry regiment will move to India very shortly. The garrison of Quetta and Pishin will probably be further reduced by a regiment of native infantry and one of native cavalry, a second infantry regiment being withdrawn from the Harnai route. This will probably involve the evacuation of Chaman and one or more of the Pishin posts, but not the abandonment of Pishin generally, which, however, could be easily held without a garrison at all. The Chaman post and the Khojak Pass will probably be guarded by a few native levies.

“The cold weather has fairly set in, and the health of the troops in Quetta, which has been very sickly for some time, is improving.

THE Quetta correspondent of the Times is growing diplomatic. He does not tell us who it is, among our gallant troops at Quetta, who is “in daily hope” of being ordered back to slippers and an easy chair at home; and we more than suspect that some of the Quetta garrison would deny the soft, very soft, impeachment. But his attempt to pooh-pooh the sentimental objections of “the Indian papers”—and he might have included others—to English soldiers being abandoned to the horrible fate of Central Asian slavery is capital; he declares that there is slender “hope” of any English prisoners being still alive in Herat! “Hope!”—we thank thee, poor orphan boy, for that innocent word. This is the telegram:—

“The Indian papers have lately contained stories about British prisoners in Herat. They rest on a very slender foundation, which is as follows:—Some months ago a sepoy of Jacob's regiment, who had been missing since the battle of Maiwand, appeared at the headquarters of his regiment. On his trial by court-martial he declared that he was taken prisoner after the battle with two native and four British soldiers. What became of the latter he did not know, but he and the other natives were made slaves and taken by their respective masters into a distant part of the country, whence he made his escape. This tale gives but a slender hope of any English prisoners being still alive in Herat, especially as no rumour of such has reached Kandahar or Quetta.”

THE Calcutta correspondent, telegraphing from Darjiling on Oct. 9, gives some further details regarding the last Afridi raid—that on our cavalry guard at Kohat. It now transpires that it was conducted, not merely by the “friends” of Kamal, the Afridi gentleman whose surrender we had just demanded with all the pomp and ceremony which the present Government knows so well how to use when making such demands, but under the leadership of Kamal himself! Such is the respect with which our pompous “demands” are now treated on the frontier:—

“Further details regarding the attack on the cavalry guard at Kohat show that the raiders numbered thirteen or fourteen Afridis, of whom four or five belonged to the Malik Din section, one to another section, and the remainder were Zakha Khels. The leader was the notorious Kumal, who headed the attack on a picquet at Peshawur in August last. It is clear that the raiders passed through the country of the so-called friendly tribes, who must have known their intention and could have given warning if so disposed. It is rumoured that a punitive expedition is under contemplation, but nothing short of the occupation of the Tiyah plateau will effectually stop these outrages.”

At Mooltan, we learn from the same source, an armed truce has been established. The correspondent well says of this most significant outbreak, that it is “another manifestation of the revival of that Hindu fanaticism which is now apparently passing over Northern India, and which, unless carefully watched, may give trouble to the Government.” For months past we have sounded a similar note of warning, at the risk of being stigmatised as alarmists. There is no more peaceable or generally loyal population than the great bulk of that of British India, including almost the whole of the educated classes. But we are too apt to forget that among peoples counted by hundreds of millions there must ever be a very large element of unrest, which can only be controlled either by an overwhelming display of force, or by the cordial co-operation of the orderly and law-abiding sections of the community. We have done our best to alienate from us the respect of the latter class by the unceasing vituperation that was poured, for party purposes, on the administration of Lord Lytton; whilst our numerous “withdrawals,” and the general timidity of our recent policy, has everywhere kindled the wildest hopes among the disaffected and lawless. We know that the views here expressed are held with great earnestness by some of the best and ablest men among our India fellow-subjects. The remainder of the telegram to which we have referred runs thus:—

“Mooltan remains quiet. The troops have now been withdrawn from the city, but heliographic communication has been established between the fort and the brigade headquarters in the cantonment, so that the military can be summoned in case of necessity. The damage to property is now estimated at three to four lakhs. No one was killed, but several were wounded. There can be no doubt that the riot was entirely due to an unprovoked aggression on the part of the Hindus. The Mahomedans gave no offence, and the slaughter of cattle has always been conducted under the rules which have been in force since Mooltan became British territory, and which were framed with the express object of avoiding all chance of hurting Hindu susceptibilities."

WE learn from the Englishman that the Government of India intend taking up practically and at once the subject of Eurasian education, and Archdeacon Baly, who has just returned to India, has been specially summoned to Simla in connection with the matter. One of the first steps likely to be taken is a measure for establishing a training college. We are glad to observe that tangible good is already springing out of the careful and thorough examination of the Eurasian education question that was recently made by the Bengal education Department, on the occasion of the publication of Archdeacon Baly's memoranda on the subject.

THE Secretary of State for India in Council has decided to introduce an important change in the present regulations as regards the pensions of senior officers of the Indian army. In future officers on the general list, who entered the service under the new conditions of appointment, and who have not since joined the Staff Corps, and officers who have entered the Staff Corps since Sept. 12, 1866, will succeed to colonels' allowances as soon as they have completed twelve years' service as substantive lieutenant colonels, until the number of officers in receipt of the allowances is equal to one-thirtieth of the whole of the officers in their respective lists in each Presidency; after which the number of colonels' allowances enjoyed by officers of this rank are to be considered as the fixed establishment to which officers will succeed by seniority. No colonels' allowances are to be granted to officers who entered the Staff Corps as probationers after July 1 of the present year.

THE Sunday Mirror believes "that Lord Ripon has it in contemplation to revise the educational policy of Government, and that very soon the public may have before it the scheme for at least a partial remodelling of the educational machinery of the country. This paragraph, the first intimation of the proposals regarding an Educational Commission which were telegraphed last week by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, reaches us by to-day's mail. It appeared in Calcutta about a fortnight before the date of the Times telegram. We deal with the subject in our leading columns.

THE Times of India to hand by this mail gives an appreciative biography of Sir Alfred Lyall, apropos of his passing through Bombay on his way home; but the panegyric is not "led up to" with the tact usually displayed by our contemporary. After describing the circumstances under which Bombay was at the moment honoured by the august presence of the Foreign Secretary, the Times of India is weak enough to say, "This reminds us"—and then follows the anthem, of course.

THE European Congress of Orientalists lately sitting at Berlin has voted its thanks to Dr. W. W. Hunter, C.I.E., for his "Imperial Gazetteer of India." Professor Webber, in formally conveying the sentiments of the Congress, expressed "the high obligations which Orientalists owe to this grand and patient labour." The Geographical Congress sitting at Venice has also awarded its thanks, with its gold medal, to Dr. W. W. Hunter for the services which he has rendered to geographical science by this work.

THE Science and Art Department have commenced a very necessary, and it may prove to be an important, work in the India Museum. This is the translation of the inscriptions which are to be found on so many of the objects it contains. The work will be carried on under the direction of Mr. A. N. Wollaston, examiner in Persian at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and translator of the "Anvár-i-Suhali," who has secured the services of Mirza Muhammad Bakar as his assistant in making the translations. The Science and Art Department will begin the work of translation in the India Museum, but should it prove to be advantageous—of which there is not the slightest doubt—it will, it is anticipated, be continued until all the inscriptions on the various art objects in the Persian collection also have been rendered into English.

WE are glad to be able to announce that Mr. Horace Walpole, C.B., clerk of the Council at the India-office, has been appointed assistant to the Under Secretary of State for India, in succession to Sir Thomas Seecombe, K.C.S.I., C.B. Lord Hartington is always happy in his appointments; the present one will give universal satisfaction.

It has been finally decided that Sir William Muir, K.C.B., who has held the appointment of Director General of the Army Medical Department since 1874, shall retire from office on the 1st of April next, and that he shall be succeeded by Surgeon General T. Crawford, M.D., principal medical officer in India.

THE number of visitors to the Indian collections at the South Kensington Museum for the weeks ending Sept. 3 were 4,673; Sept. 10, 3,836; Sept. 17, 3,594; Sept. 24, 3,033; Oct. 1, 2,843. The total for the month of September was 14,580, and from the opening on May 15, 1880, 273,255.

MESSRS. MORAN AND Co.'s market report on indigo does not hold out more encouraging prospects for the season's crop. For Lower Bengal the outturn is definitely stated at 16,200 maunds. The khoontee mahai is progressing in Behar, but not so well as was anticipated—heavy rains have again shortened the yield. Floods are reported in Chuprah, and loss of plant is reported. Ravages of caterpillars are complained of at some factories. From the Benares Provinces and the Doab it is feared that previous heavy rains inflicted too much injury on the plant for the later fine weather to make up.

THE same authority gives the following report on the Calcutta tea market:—

"The remaining sale sheet of Thursday's (Sept. 5) tea sales having reached us, the following is the completed list. There were five sales, at which 8,543 chests were offered, and 1,417 withdrawn. The highest and lowest prices, and the number of chests for each district of the 7,126 chests sold were as follow:—

District.	No. of chests.	Highest, per lb.	Lowest, per lb.
Assam	3,604	1 0 6	0 5 3
Cachar	1,294	0 14 0	0 3 6
Darjiling	1,853	1 4 6	0 3 4
Doonars	345	1 3 6	0 8 5
Chittagong	30	0 12 2	0 5 8

Total 7,126 chests.

Season's export to date September, 15,612,675lb."

WE take from the Times of India the following obituary for the fortnight ending Sept. 20:—Mr. A. F. Marques Pereira, Portuguese consul general; Mr. Woodward, judicial assistant commissioner of Umritsur; Mr. Herbert Turnor; Surgeon Major R. Murphy, A.M.D.; Major Dudgeon, late of the 40th Regiment; Col. Francis Jeffrey Millar, deputy commissioner of Gurdaspore; Mr. Syud Hussein Edroos, C.S.I.

THE SURVEY OF INDIA.

FROM the just-received report of the operations of the Survey of India for 1879-80 we learn that this stupendous work is now all but completed. The principal triangulation of all India, as originally designed by Colonel Everest about the year 1832, with the approval of the Court of Directors of the Honourable East India Company, was intended to consist of a system of meridional chains of triangles at intervals of about 1 deg. apart, tied together by longitudinal chains at about 6 deg. apart, the whole being enclosed within a periphery formed by chains of triangles carried along the frontier and coast lines. The operations have been carried on in general accordance with this design. But the distance between the principal meridional chains which have been executed within the last twenty years has been materially increased; for it was found that chains at intervals of 2 deg. to 3 deg. apart would suffice as a basis for the general topography of the country. For similar reasons a chain of principal triangles on the west coasts of the peninsula, from Cape Comorin to Mangalore, which show all that is wanted to complete the periphery of frontier and coast line triangulation, may be dispensed with; its completion is not necessary for geodesic purposes, as for them the present first-class chains of triangles in its neighbourhood will amply suffice. Consequently, as the chain of triangles along the east coast between Cape Comorin and Madras, which has been some years in progress, was completed during the present year, the principal triangulation may now be considered to be wholly finished in Southern India. In Northern India only a small portion of a single (meridional) chain of triangles remains for execution, which will probably be completed within the next few months, and then the whole of the principal triangulation of the regions between Afghanistan and Burma, the Himalayan Mountains, and the Indian Ocean, will be finished as regards the linear and angular measurements and the field operations generally. The reduction of observations is well advanced; but about one-half still remains for completion. The general outturn of the triangulation was as follows:—Three chains of principal triangles of an aggregate length of 165 miles, furnishing twenty-six new stations—at three of which verifactory astronomical determinations of azimuth have been made—and embracing an area of 3,949 square miles; also various chains of secondary triangles of an aggregate length of 150 miles, furnishing thirty-three new stations, and 172 points, in an area of about 5,000 square miles, exclusive of a large amount of secondary triangulation in Siam and Sikkim, of which complete details have not yet been received.

The regular topographical operations—mostly of the standard scale of one inch to the mile, and on the half-inch and two-inch scales—were carried on in continuation of the operations of the preceding year, in the same provinces and by the same parties. The general outturn of the topography was as follows:—220 square miles surveyed on the quarter-inch scale, 7,138 on the half-inch scale, 4,794 on the one-inch scale, 9,664 on the two-inch scale, and 117 on the four-inch scale. Two towns of an aggregate area of twenty square miles were surveyed, one on the six-inch, the other on the 12-inch scale.

The Mauzawar, or village survey of the Murri and Kahuta Tahsils, of the Rawul Pindi district, for the Forest Department has been completed; and the survey of another tract, the "Kala Chitta" range, also in the Rawul Pindi district, for the same department, has been commenced. The village survey operations in the Dera Ismail Khan district have been continued. The forest survey, on the four-inch scale, in the Banda district, has been completed. The Khorda estate survey party—reduced in strength after completion of its cadastral survey operations—has surveyed a hilly portion of the estate on the four-inch scale, where a cadastral survey was not required; and, at the same time, has completed the survey of the village boundaries in the area left for the measurement of the fields by the settlement survey area. No. 3 revenue party, which has been engaged chiefly on the topographical survey, has also carried on a village survey of the alluvial lands in the bed of the Jumna River. The total areas of these several operations are—2,118 square miles surveyed in detail on the scale of four inches=one mile; but including forty square miles of 32-inch survey in Khorda; 1,973 square miles of preliminary traversing.

A small area rejected from the forest reserves has been surveyed cadastrally in Banda, and the survey of the district has been completed. The cadastral surveys of district Jaunpur, Ghazipur, and Mirzapur have been continued, as during the previous seasons, on the 16-inch scale. The cadastral survey of district Hathawaddy, in Burma, has been continued on the 16-inch scale; but having the field as the unit of survey in the place of the holding. A new party has been raised for the cadastral survey of the Bassein district, for which the 16-inch scale and the unit of the field have been adopted, as for Hathawaddy. The total areas surveyed by the cadastral parties are—2,692 square miles surveyed in detail on the scale of 16 inches=one mile; 1,581 square miles of preliminary traversing.

Of other geographical operations, the most important were these which were conducted by the survey officers accompanying the several columns of the army in Afghanistan and Beluchistan during the second phase of the Afghan war. The survey has been taken for the most part, on the half-inch or quarter-inch scale, supplemented by rough reconnaissances and by native information in the less accessible places. Generally speaking, the detailed survey extends from Peshawur to Cabul, via the Khyber Pass and the Kuram Valley, but excluding Bara and Tira, and the Afridi country lying between the Peshawur district and a line drawn a little to the north of Thal. South west of the Kuram Valley it has taken in a great part of Khost. A radius of fifteen miles to the north and west of Cabul and of fifty miles to the south in the direction of the Logar Valley would approximately cover the rest of the country mapped in Northern Afghanistan. In Beluchistan and Southern Afghanistan the area delineated is much less compact. With some breaks, which were merely reconnoitred, it may be described as reaching Girishk on the west from Fort Munro on the Dera Ghazi Khan frontier. It includes Kushk-i-Nakhud, the country around Kandahar, a great part of the Khojak-Amran range, Pishin, a tract to the north and north east of Quetta, and the neighbourhood of Dada and Sibi along and to the west of the line of rail. The northern and southern surveys have been corrected by the survey of the route from Kandahar to Ghazni through the Khushk-i-kud, Tarnak, and Ghazni Valleys. The total area mapped during the season in Northern Afghanistan is estimated at 11,180 square miles.

The combined operations in Northern and Southern Afghanistan and in Beluchistan furnish a total area of 16,000 square miles of new geography.

The trans-frontier explorations of the year included in the report are not so full of exciting adventure as they usually are. In the early part of 1879 Capt. J. E. Sandeman, deputy superintendent in charge of the cadastral survey in the Hathawaddy district, British Burma, was requested, with the sanction of the Chief Commissioner, to train a native of Burma with a view of his being employed in exploring the upper course of the Irrawaddy River beyond Bamo. Towards the end of the year this man had acquired a sufficient knowledge of his duties to be started on a preliminary exploration. He started by steamer from Rangoon, with two companions of his own selection, and arrived at Bamo early in November 1879. Thence the party went up the river in boats, first to the village of Haw-ka, in latitude 25 deg. 6 min., and then to Ka-cho, once an important city, in latitude 25 deg. 20 min., at an elevation of about 1,000ft. above the sea. Thence he proceeded by land, pacing distances and taking bearings, up to Mo-goung-poon Maing koung, in latitude 26 deg. 8 min., at which place the exploration terminated. At the village of Maingna, about sixteen miles north of Ka-cho, the Burmese frontier was reached. The country beyond is inhabited by Kachins, or Kausa-Kachins, among whom no Shans reside, and the people pay no tribute to Burma. At the village of Pouk-san-poon a view was obtained of the junction of the eastern and western branches of the Irrawaddy River, about five miles to the north west. The western branch (called the Mali-ka) had previously been noticed to be considerably swollen and about 500 paces wide, while the eastern branch (called Meh-ka), which was now reached, was found to be low and flowing in a stream about 100 paces wide, down rapids and over large rocks. The people of the country stated that the great increase in the waters of the western branch was due to the melting of the snow at its sources, and there can be little doubt that the western branch is the larger of the two and rises in higher ranges. Such information as could be obtained from the natives of the country was to the effect that the eastern branch has two principal affluents, one flowing from the east, which is believed to have its source in the Naungsa Lake, and the other from the north, which is said to rise in the hills at six days' journey from Mo-goung-poon, the day's journey being reckoned at eight to ten miles. Of the western branch it was stated that its sources are in the "Kantee Country," at a distance of about twenty-three days' journey from Ka-cho. Thus, it is highly probable that this is the branch of the river reached by Wilcox in his journey from Assam in 1827, which is described in Volume XVII. of the "Researches of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta, 1832." The explorers' "Kantee" is obviously identical with Wilcox's "Khanti." Considerable discredit has, however, been thrown on the surveyor's statements, so that, until confirmed, they must be received with caution.

Some of the hardships which are sometimes endured in the prosecution of this great work may be obtained from the report in the surveys in the Darjiling district and in Sikkim. In July, 1879, it was believed that so little work remained to be done within the limits of the district itself that the survey of Sikkim might be commenced in the following field season. Arrangements were made accordingly, and early in October Lieutenant Harman started for Northern Sikkim, and sent Mr. Robert into Western Sikkim, leaving the remaining surveyors, European and native, to complete the field work in the Darjiling district. For the survey of Sikkim Lieutenant Harman had arranged to undertake in person the whole of the country lying to the east of the range running south east from Kanchinjunga, and assigned the country to the west to Mr. Robert. He proceeded, in the first instance, to the snowy ranges of the frontier between Sikkim and Tibet, hoping to survey them during the brief interval between the cessation of the rains and the setting in of the winter with its heavy snowfalls. Going up the main valley to the point of junction of the Lasing and the Lachung Rivers, he ascended the Lachung Valley, and reached the Donkia Pass on the boundary. Here his feet were badly frostbitten; but with most commendable persistence and energy he bravely continued his work under great difficulties, going about as best he could on coolies, or ponies, or crutches. On returning to the junction of the two rivers he ascended the Lasing Valley and reached the Kangra-Lama Pass, also on the boundary. He subsequently ascended the summits of Kinyong, Nochego, and other mountains, and penetrated into parts of Sikkim which no European had before visited. He was in Sikkim for about 3½ months, during which he surveyed an area of over 1,000 square miles on the scale of ¼ in. to the mile, determined the heights of about 300 positions of more or less importance by barometric and boiling point observations, and executed a large amount of triangulation.

The tidal observations are progressing very satisfactorily in accordance with the programme prescribed by the Government of India for obtaining a systematic record of tidal phenomena on Indian coasts. When the last annual report was submitted self-registering tidal instruments had been set up, and were in operation at eight ports—viz., Aden, Karachi, Bombay, Karwar, Beypore, Paumben, Madras, and Vizagapatam; similar instruments have also been set up and are now operating at False Point, Rangoon, Elephant Point, Amherst, Moulmein, and Port Blair. Self-registering aneroid barometers, aneroid barometers, and verifactory mercurial barometers have been erected at all the tidal stations, with the exception of Karachi, Bombay, and Madras, where there are meteorological observatories.

The issues of maps from the surveyor general's office in Calcutta increased from 28,737 maps, valued at Rs.38,274 in 1878-9, to 33,796 maps, of the value of Rs.57,005. There was a large demand for maps of Afghanistan and the North West frontier; and much new geographical material was utilised with great promptitude. A preliminary edition of the map of India, on the scale of one-inch=sixty-four miles, was published by the Lithographic Branch to meet immediate requirements. The number of cadastral maps of the North Western Provinces published during the year was 2,527. Many of these had been plotted during the field season of 1879-80, and the great majority of them were photozincographed. Numerous maps of the Khorda Government Estate were reproduced by the same process. The Mathematical Instrument Department issued during the year 14,103 instruments, valued at Rs.1,07,230.—Times.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAMERS.

THE new arrangements for the embarkation of passengers by the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company's ships in the Thames, instead of at Southampton, came into operation on Wednesday, when the Rome, a fine vessel recently added to the company's fleet, sailed from Gravesend. The actual point of embarkation is the terminus of the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway, opposite to Gravesend, and a little higher up the river than the old fort at Tilbury, which is always associated in the mind of the English schoolboy with the name of Queen Elizabeth, and close to the place chosen for the new docks of the East and West India Dock Company. The new arrangements worked not only without a hitch, but, considering that it was the trial trip, with remarkable smoothness. A long train, specially engaged for the P. and O. passengers and their friends, was ready at the main line departure platform of the Great Eastern Company's Liverpool-street station soon after half-past ten in the morning, so that those who were early were able to get comfortably seated at once. Some of our foreign friends would probably have been struck by the absence of any appearance of emotion or excitement, and, indeed, of even the ordinary signs of the setting out of people beginning a long voyage. The first of these matters for comment might be attributed to the national habit of self-control, the second to a sensible regulation of the P. and O. Company, by which hand luggage only was allowed to be taken by this train. A system which promises to save travellers inconvenience and expense has been organised for collecting all heavy baggage and conveying it to the company's ships at the docks for a moderate charge. The shortness of the journey to the steamer and, perhaps, the novelty of the occasion tempted so many friends of passengers to take the run down to the ship that there were even more visitors than passengers, between 300 and 400 first-class and about eighty second-class passengers travelling in the special train to Tilbury. By contract with the railway company, the fares are fixed for P. and O. passengers at 3s. 6d. first class and 2s. 6d. second class, while return tickets for passengers' friends are issued at 4s. 6d. first class. The train left Liverpool-street at eleven o'clock punctually, and, with only a few minutes' stoppage at Barking, made an uninterrupted run to Tilbury in forty-five minutes. Walking at once down a covered way to the floating pier, the passengers went on board a steamer which was in waiting, and in eight or ten minutes—the little steamer by that time having received her complement—they were steaming out to the Rome, which lay in the river off Gravesend. In six or eight minutes the tender was alongside, and within half-an-hour of the arrival of the train at Tilbury the first party were all on board the Rome. A few minutes later, those who had been left behind by the first tender arrived in a second, and by half-past twelve o'clock the whole party of passengers and their friends were on the great ship. The Rome, under the command of Captain Cates, and with Mr. T. Sutherland, chairman of the P. and O. Company, on board, had left the Albert Dock on the flood-tide, about ten o'clock, and had steamed slowly down the river to Gravesend, where she arrived about twenty minutes to twelve. She lay there, moored to a buoy, until the passengers were all on board. In half-an-hour—that is, about one o'clock—all going ashore were again on one of the tenders returning to Tilbury. With waving of hands and handkerchiefs the last adieux were made to those about to begin their long journey to the other side of the world, and before the tender reached the Tilbury Pier, the great ship—she is 430 feet long and of 5,100 tons burden—had, with the aid of two tugs, swung round and was steaming away to the Nore. Among her passengers—over 160 in number—are Mr. Grant-Duff, Governor of Madras, and Mrs. Grant-Duff, Captain Ambrose Awdry, secretary to the Governor, Dr. and Mrs. Mackenzie and their family, Colonel Sir C. P. Keyes and Lady Keyes, and Colonel Crichton, on the staff of the Governor of Malta, and Lady Margaret Crichton. The deputy chairman of the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway, Mr. Doughty Browne, and Mr. Stride, manager of the line, went with the special, and Mr. F. D. Barnes, manager of the P. and O. Company, and Mr. Pakeman superintended the embarkation of the passengers. The next outward bound steamer of the company to sail will be the new ship, the Clyde. She will leave Gravesend to-morrow, and succeeding vessels each on Wednesday, instead of Tuesday, as had been announced in the company's handbills.

TRANSIT DUTIES IN INDIA.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—The letter in the Times of this morning on transit duties in India calls attention to a matter which has not been overlooked by the local authorities in that country, and which needs constant watching, as being liable to the abuse which your correspondent notices—namely, an octroi tax becoming a transit duty. But in one point it is possible that the writer of the letter has made a mistake. The large quantity of grain received in towns, in excess of the estimated consumption, is not necessarily grain in transit. There are persons in every town who make it part of their business to store large quantities of grain against a time of scarcity, which is their time of profit. It is well that motives of self-interest lead to this provision for future wants, or Indian famines would be even more rapidly destructive than they are. It is a proceeding not to be lightly checked or interfered with, either when the food is being thus stored or when it comes to be sold. The high prices it then commands are the return for the speculator's outlay, long, it may be, unproductive, and for his risks and unavoidable losses.

"Oct. 1."

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—In reply to the letter of your correspondent 'R. M.' in the Times of to-day, there exists good evidence that the severity of famines in some provinces of India has been intensified by the exaction of octroi. Merchants will not store grain in octroi towns, where they have to prepay a percentage on the value of the grain, and may have to wait for years before they can profitably sell their property. The extortions practised in the collection of octroi, and the monopolies which have been created, have also greatly hindered the free storing of grain. If Government would publish returns of the quantities of corn at present stored in octroi towns it would be seen how unprepared we are to meet famines. Merchants find it very inconvenient to store grain in villages to which the octroi system has not been yet extended. This is partly owing to the want of good bridged roads to such villages. The whole subject has been treated in a masterly manner by Sir Charles Trevelyan, and if our statesmen would take the trouble to read his report, which has been reprinted by order of the Imperial Government, they would experience fewer doubts and less difficulty in preparing to meet famines in future. If we would honestly free the trade in corn it would no longer be necessary for Government to undertake the transport of grain in times of famine, which duty it does not understand, or to expend millions of money with the result of tempting speculators to make corners and monopolies in the corn trade.—Your obedient servant,

"ST. GEORGE TUCKER."

"Camberley, near Farnborough, Oct. 4."

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—Your correspondent 'R. M.' correctly points out in the Times of to-day that the private storage of grain renders famines less destructive than they would otherwise be, and that care should be taken not to interfere with this proceeding. It is, however, a strong argument against octroi duties, and one which has, I think, been advanced in the Times by Mr. St. George Tucker himself, that, besides operating as transit duties, they directly check the storage of grain in large Indian cities.—Your obedient servant, INDIAN MUSIC.

THE work which treats of the Rasas is entitled "The Eight Principal Rasas of the Hindus." The author says as follows in the preface to the book:—"A growing desire is now apparent among our countrymen and foreign friends to have a clear insight into the various elements which give to Hindu music and the Hindu drama such an interesting character. For this purpose it is necessary to have an accurate knowledge of the nature of the Rasas or other sentiments which are their veritable groundwork. I have attempted in these pages to furnish the reader with short accounts of the dramatic laws of the Hindus, as also with explanations of their various dramatic compositions. With the view of illustrating the subjects in this work I have selected well-known scenes from our classical writings, shaped them into tableaux, and composed short dramatic pieces showing their respective characteristics. I have also given descriptive songs set to such ragas and talas as have been declared appropriate by authorities. No one is better convinced of the imperfections of this work than myself. The only excuse for bringing it before the public is the steady encouragement which I have received in my several attempts to bring to light some relics of the untold and unknown musical and literary treasures bequeathed to us by our illustrious forefathers."

The first picture in the book represents Bharata Rishi, the father of the Hindu drama. He is a venerable old man, who meditates with an earnest and thoughtful countenance of what he is going to write.

The book itself commences with the description of the characters of the dramas. It is stated that "after Brahma had created the four Vedas he separated from them the fifth, and called it drama. The sage Bharata first learnt it from Brahma, and played it before Mahadeva. The drama (Nataka) itself consists of three parts—viz.

Natya (the drama proper), Nritya and Nirtya (dancing). Bharata says of the drama:—"The art which holds the mirror before Nature, representing to the life different characters, is the Dramatic Art." Many things are requisite in the drama. It will take us too long to notice all of them here. On mature consideration it is clear to us that the sentiments (Rasas) form the corner-stone of theatrical representations, since it is the avowed object of these representations to awaken feelings in the hearts of the audience similar to those which they body forth. The ten kinds of the art which teach various measured movements of the body and limbs are collectively called Nritya (dance). Nritya, without the dramatic element, is called Nritya (simple dancing). Nritya is of two sorts:—Marga and desi. That kind of entertainment, consisting of music and dancing, which was performed by Bharata before Mahadeva, and which Brahma probably learnt to know from Mahadeva, is called marga, and that which is most prevalent amongst us is called desi. The word Nataka (drama) is derived from nata (hero). The dramas, which were created by Brahma, and which he represented before Mahadeva and Parvati, are called Marga natyas. There are twenty kinds of these, namely:—Prakarana, Vana, Prahasana, Dima, Vyayoga, Samavakara, Vithi, Auka Ihamriga, Natika, Prakashika, Vamka, Hansika, Viyogini, Dipika, Kalotsahatara, Chitra Jugupsita, and Vichitrartha. The first ten kinds were founded by Mahadeva, the remainder by Parvati Mahadeva and Parvati first instructed Brahma in these twenty varieties of the drama. Dantila and other authorities quote sixteen kinds of desi natya, viz.:—Sattaka, Trotaka, Gosthi, Vrindaka, Silpaka, Preknahana, Sanlapaka, Hrillisa, Rasaka, Srigadita, Viluki, Tumbaki, Sajjita, Parivarta, Marti, and Prahelika."

Thus far we have given Dr. Tagore's remarks verbatim. Further on the work treats of the different kinds of dramas. First of all, he brings in Nataka, the drama proper, the following characteristics of which have been laid down:—"The Nataka is based upon historical incidents. It celebrates the lives of mighty princes descended from lordly houses. It should be full of æsthetic feelings and sentiments. It consists of from five to ten acts, and is performed by four or five persons. Its duration should not be too long, nor its language too simple. Simplicity of action, however, is desirable. The performance excludes the following:—Hallooing, bloodshed, war, &c. In a word, it should exclude everything that is not strictly æsthetic. Sakuntala and Venisanhara (both mentioned previously) are examples of this kind of drama. The work also describes all the other kinds of dramas, as regards their characters, representations, and developments. After this come the Rasas, which are classified under eight principal groups—viz., Sringara, Vira Rasa, the Karuna Rasa, the Rudra Rasa, the Hasya Rasa, the Bhayanaka Rasa, the Bibhatsa Rasa, the Adbhuta Rasa. In the next number I shall notice the two principal component parts of the drama, 'Nritya' and 'Nritta,' and shall also speak of the Rasas, and about the Indian stage as well."

There are other works by Dr. Tagore which have passed through the fingers of the writer of this article:—

Yantrakosha, or a Treasury of the Musical Instruments of Ancient and of Modern India, and of various other countries, 1875, gives representations and tone power of old Indian instruments.

Six Principal Ragas with a brief view of Hindu Music. 1877. These are exquisite old Indian songs.

The Dramatic Sentiments of the Aryas. 1881.

Vedic Hymns. Dr. Tagore. 1878.

Short Notices of Hindu Musical Instruments, 1877.

(A sort of pocket calendar.)

Gitavali, or a Hindu Manual of Indian Vocal Music. 1878.

Victoria Gitala, or a brief History of England in Bengali verses. Composed by Dr. Tagore. 1877.

Roma Kavya, or a short sketch of Roman History. 1880.

(A History of Rome in the English language.)

A Few Lyrics of Owen Meredith, set to Hindu Music. 1877.

Bharatiya Natya Rahasyam. 1878.

I only mention here that the work, "The Six Principal Ragas of the Hindus," contains even a treatise on the whole theory of old Indian music. It is by itself of so much importance as to place Dr. Tagore high in the rank of authors. In order, therefore, to give a complete and clear picture of Indian music, it will be necessary for me to resume the article on this subject at some future time.—Indian Mirror.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

GOVERNMENT COMPETITION IN THE CINCHONA ENTERPRISE.

THERE are few Government concerns that can compare results financially with the cinchona plantation and factory near Darjiling. The latest report of the Government Quinologist, which deals with the year 1880-81, discovers no falling off in the prosperity of either. The profits of the year's working amount to Rs.80,290 over and above the saving which the Government effect by the substitution of the febrifuge made at Darjiling for quinine, which is itself estimated at four and a-half lakhs per annum. The reason why there is comparatively so small an actual profit in rupees, and one so immense on the sale of the febrifuge, is because the factory is debited with the bark used at actual cost, and not the price at which it would sell in open market. Our Allahabad contemporary is much pleased at the success of this Government undertaking. We are equally pleased, but in this very success we see a strong reason why Government should now retire from the industry. It is the duty and interest of the Government to undertake the initial and experimental stage in all such industries, a work which is generally beyond the power of private enterprise. This over, and the success of the new industry assured, the duty of Government is then to withdraw and hand over its work to some company. This was done with tea, and will doubtless be done with cinchona as well, and we think the time has arrived when this ought to be done. When the profits on the manufacture of febrifuge and growth of bark amount in one year to more than the entire capital invested it may safely be affirmed that the industry is a success, and if it be beneath the dignity of Government to make a profit by selling coals it ought to be equally inexpedient to sell febrifuge. It is no doubt true that the sale of this medicine is presumably doing much good, but this would be equally true if it were made by private enterprise. We trust, therefore, that the Government cinchona plantations in Darjiling and on the Nilgherries will soon be advertised for sale.—Friend of India.

POSTAL CONCESSIONS TO THE PRESS.

THE introduction of a new system, in reference to the transmission of newspapers through the post, is under the consideration of Government. This contemplates, first of all, a reduction in the postage rates for very light newspapers. Roughly, all native vernacular papers come into the very light class; and it is reasonable, from their point of view, to complain against the rule by which they pay the same postage, half an anna, when their weight is perhaps two tolas and their price a pie—as the English newspaper, which costs four annas, and weighs seven or eight tolas. The scheme which the Postmaster General has in view provides for the reduction of the rate, in the case of papers weighing less than three tolas, to one quarter anna for postage. The limit three tolas has been fixed by estimates that have been made as to the average weights of the various Indian newspapers, English and native. A good many English trade circulars, prices current, and miscellaneous publications of that nature, which come within the definition of a newspaper for post-office purposes, will doubtless take advantage of the scheme. Further, it is proposed that the English newspapers should be invited to contract with the Post-office by paying a lump sum, once a quarter in advance, for the delivery of their whole postal issue. It is intended that these contracts shall introduce one or two liberal provisions—namely, that the charge shall not include anything on account of "exchanges," newspapers sent to one another's offices. These, as a concession to journalism, the Post-office proposes practically to carry for nothing, and the contracts will provide for the carriage, at half rates, of newspapers sent in batches on sale or return to railway stations. The Post-office will, of course, lose at first on the whole scheme—chiefly through the reduction of postage on the light papers—to the amount of about Rs.50,000 a year, but it is conceived this loss can be afforded in view of the public advantages to be gained, while it often happens that such initial losses are compensated for, in the long run, by an accession of business.—Pioneer.

TELEPHONE EXCHANGES.

WE learn that after negotiations that have lasted for ten months the Oriental Telephone Company (Limited) have at last come to terms with the Government of India, and that they will very shortly be enabled to introduce into this country the system of telephone exchanges so successfully worked in nearly every other part of the civilised world. We believe that within certain limits the company will be authorised to give the public every kind of telephonic communication, whether of a public or private nature. It is high time we had this useful invention in operation among us. For some time the manager of the company was in communication with the Government of India, and permission to erect telephones was refused. A reference to the Home Government reversed this decision, but a long, and unreasonably long, time has elapsed between that sanction being given and the final permission being handed over to the company. Now that this has at last been accorded we trust that no more delay will take place. We understand that the necessary poles are on the way from England, and in a short time we may overtake Singapore in this respect.—Friend of India.

JUNIOR CIVILIANS IN BENGAL.

THE question of the training of junior civilians has been engaging the attention of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, and the last Calcutta Government Gazette contains an important resolution on the subject. In 1876 the Covenanted Civil Service was divided into two branches in order to provide a thorough and unbroken course of judicial training for all officers intended to fill the appointment of district judge, and thus to improve the efficiency of the judicial administration of the province. But the system has failed, and Sir Ashley Eden recently consulted the judges of the Calcutta High Court, asking their opinion as to the measures that should be adopted to effect an improvement in the training of the young covenanted officers electing the judicial branch of the service. The judges were not unanimous in their views—judges very seldom are unanimous in their views—but their general opinion was that civilians should make their election at an earlier period than that which had been fixed; that those who elect the judicial line should serve for a short period as registrars to the best district judges, and thus learn all the routine and administrative work of a judge's office; that they should then go to Calcutta and attend the sittings of the High Court and learn how court business is conducted by the best judges and counsel; and that after this they should be appointed assistant judges, and subsequently subordinate judges before they could be regarded as qualified for the post of district judge. Sir Ashley Eden dismissed these proposals as impracticable, and submitted his own scheme to the Government of India, who have sanctioned it on the understanding that it is to be regarded as open to reconsideration, if necessary, on the settlement of the general question of the strength, organisation, and recruitment of the Bengal Civil Service. Under the new arrangement all covenanted civil officers will in future at the end of five years' service exercise the powers of a moonsiff whatever branch of the service they intend to select, in addition to the powers with which they are vested as magisterial officers. They will be called on to elect between the executive and judicial branches after nine years instead of as at present between the tenth and twelfth years of service, and those selecting the judicial are to be relieved as far as possible of executive duties, be invested with the powers of a subordinate judge, and with those of hearing criminal appeals under Section 266 of the Criminal Procedure Code. We are not told who was the author of the brilliant suggestion that the junior civilians should join the throng of briefless barristers to "learn how court business is conducted by the best judges and counsel"—perhaps it was Mr. Justice Cunningham. Sir Ashley Eden, with the facts of a recent remarkable occurrence in Calcutta fresh in his recollection, no doubt thinks it would not be a wholesome experience for his young men to learn how court business is sometimes conducted by the best judges and counsel.—Times of India.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE FRONTIER.—It has been decided to send an expedition of 4,000 men, under the command of General Kennedy, C.B., against the Abuzais in the cold weather. A futile attack was made a short time since by a Ghazi on a soldier in the Quetta bazaar. Abbas Khan of Hil, a notorious freebooter, whose capture three years since is believed to have led to the Alaiwal raids, died recently in the Lahore gaol.—Times of India.

Lyall, K.C.B., who leaves by to-day's mail, halted at Baroda on Friday on his way to Bombay.—Times of India.

THE BENCH AND BAR.—There has been another unseemly squabble between the Bench and Bar at Calcutta. The Bench on this occasion was represented by Mr. Justice Field, a "civilian judge," and the Bar by Messrs. Jackson and Gasper.—Ibid.

THE FISHER CASE.—The defamation case instituted by Mr. Fisher, C.S., has been transferred from Meerut to the Allahabad High Court for trial.—Pioneer.

Smith will give no promotion to the wing commanders.—Pioneer.

COMPENSATION COMMITTEE.—Lieut. Col. Badcock and Mr. A. Stogdon, C.S., have again commenced their labours, after a short recess, in awarding compensation for the loss of camels in the Afghan campaigns. This policy has apparently been abandoned, as the Secretary of State is advertising in London for thirty engine drivers for employment on State railways in this country.—Bombay Gazette.

OBITUARY.—General David Pott, C.B., of Todrig, Roxburghshire, died on Sunday, Oct. 2, at Borthwickshiels, Hawick. He was the son of the late Mr. George Pott, of Todrig, and was born in 1812. He entered the army in 1829, and obtained a lieutenancy in 1833, in which year he served against the insurgents near Cuttack. In 1845-46 he took part in the Sutlej campaign, commanding the 15th Bengal Native Infantry at the battles of Moodkee and Ferozeshah. He was also present at the affair of Buddiwal and the action of Aliwal, and was engaged in the battle of Sobraon. In 1854 he commanded a force of 1,800 men against the insurgents in Pegu. During the Indian Mutiny he led the 47th Bengal Native Infantry against the rebels in the Mirzapore district, and in June, 1858, he embarked for China in command of the same regiment. He became major general in 1866, lieutenant general in 1874, and general in 1877. General Pott was twice married—first to Mary, daughter of the late Col. Ripley, of the Bengal Army; and, secondly, to Anna Frances, daughter of the late Mr. A. Boyle, of Dublin. General Pott was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath in 1875. —General George Huyshe, C.B., whose death is recorded as having happened a few days ago at Guernsey, at an advanced age, was one of the oldest members of the Bengal Infantry. He entered that branch of the service in 1820, and saw active service in the Burmese campaign of 1825. He commanded the 26th Regiment Bengal N.I. throughout the operations in Afghanistan in 1842 under General Pollock, and was present at the forcing of the Khyber Pass, and at the actions of Mammoo Khail (where he was severely wounded), Jagdalak, and Tezeen, and also at the capture of Istaliff. For these services he obtained the brevet rank of lieutenant colonel, together with the Companionship of the Bath. He obtained field rank in 1854, was promoted to that of lieutenant general in 1867, and to that of full general in 1872.

THE ARTILLERY AT MAIWAND.—Capt. N. P. Fowell, Royal Artillery, has furnished, for the information of the regiment, the following notes of his experiences with the artillery at Maiwand:—"The principal things I observed connected with the artillery were (1) the great difficulty of keeping a supply of ammunition at the guns, on account of the labour involved in transferring it from the wagon bodies to the limbers, keeping the drivers hard at work, as well as the sergeant major, who is always of great service with the guns, especially if there are casualties among the officers. I would strongly advocate the system of limbers without bodies for carrying ammunition. (2) The guns became so hot from rapid firing that we were unable to serve the vent without a protection for our thumbs. We had to pick up and use pieces of cartridge cases for this purpose. A conical plug of leather would obviate this, and also save one man when a detachment becomes shortened in action. (3) I did not see nor hear of any driver making use of the pistol supplied to drivers in India. Had they stayed to use them the guns might not have been brought out of action at all. Many people think that MacLaine's guns were taken through his own fault in advancing so far to the front; but, on the contrary, he had been recalled, and had rejoined the rest of the battery long before; and if the battery had been ever so little in rear, instead of slightly in advance and in the centre of the line of infantry, I believe the line would never have been broken. But the guns were in action first, and then the infantry were brought up and placed in line rather in rear of us."

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.—The following information respecting the movements of her Majesty's ships is supplied by the Admiralty:—From Port Said.—The Malabar arrived, en route to Bombay, on the 4th inst. From the East Indies.—Letters have been received from the Commander in Chief in the Euryalus, at Seychelles, up to Sept. 11. The Euryalus had left Zanzibar on Sept. 3, arrived at Seychelles on the 10th, and would leave for Trincomalee on Sept. 17. The Ruby was at Zanzibar on Sept. 3; would leave on Sept. 7 to cruise on the African coast. Ordered to arrive at Bombay about Oct. 15 to be docked, after which she will proceed to Trincomalee to replace the Eclipse in the Bay of Bengal. The Eclipse returned to Trincomalee on Sept. 3 from Colombo. After visiting Pondicherry and Madras would return to Trincomalee about Sept. 20, to await the arrival of the Commander in Chief early in October; would then proceed to Mauritius and the East Coast of Africa division. The Ready returned to Rangoon on Aug. 3, owing to a defect in propeller. After repair will proceed to Trincomalee to meet the Commander in Chief; would then be detached to Galle to meet mail due on Nov. 24, and convey engineer officer of Board of Trade to Minicoy Island. The Dragon was to leave Aden, at the request of the political resident, early in September, to visit Makulla. The Arab sailed from Aden on Aug. 24 for a cruise of three weeks in the Gulf of Aden, to visit Asab, Perim, Obokh, Zeyla, and Berbera. The Seagull was on the East Coast of Africa, engaged in the suppression of the slave trade. The Fawn would proceed to Delagoa Bay about Sept. 18. From the Red Sea division letters have been received from the senior officer in the Dragon at Aden up to Sept. 20. The Arab was at Aden on Sept. 20, waiting orders. The Ruby was at Cape Guardafui on Sept. 18. From the Persian Gulf division letters have been received from the senior officer in the Dryad, at Muscat, up to Sept. 7; would leave for Ras-el-Had on Sept. 7, returning to Muscat on Sept. 18, leaving again on Sept. 23 for Jask, and, early in October, would leave for north part of the Gulf. The Woodlark was at Karachi; would return to Jask on Sept. 28, and remain in southern part of the Gulf. The Ranger was at Jask on Aug. 30; would leave on Sept. 8 for Ras-el-Khaimah, Shargah, Bahrein, and Bushire.

THE OUDH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The Secretary of

State for India in Council having sanctioned the extension of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway from Moradabad to Sharanpore, to join the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, it is necessary, in accordance with the Oudh and Rohilkund Company's articles of association, that a meeting of proprietors should be convened for the purpose of authorising the board of directors to raise the requisite capital for carrying out the work. An extraordinary general meeting will therefore be held on Wednesday next, at the company's offices.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for £350,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £179,300; to Bombay, £162,000; and to Madras, £8,700. Tenders on all presidencies at 18.7½d., being the minimum posted, will receive about 57 per cent. Compared with last week this price shows an improvement of 1-16d. The same amount will be offered for tender on Wednesday next.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday, owing to the improved rates at which the India Council bills were allotted, the silver market was firm. Bars were bought for the Continent at 51½d., and a small amount of business was done in Mexican dollars at 51½d. to ½d. per ounce. On the other hand, Rupee Four per Cents. fell ¼, to 83 5-16 to 7-16, and the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. 3-16, to 89½ to ½. Exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta were telegraphed at 18.8 3-16d.; Hong Kong, 38.9½d.; and Shanghai, 58.1½d.—On Thursday the price of a limited amount of bar silver received by the steamer Archimedes was fixed at 51½d. The supply of Mexican dollars was extremely restricted. The quotation, however, was steady at 51½d. to 51¼d. per ounce. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents. receded ¼, to 90½ to ¼; but the Four per Cents. were unaltered. The exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta were telegraphed at 18.8 3-16d., the rate from Hong Kong being 38.9½d., and Shanghai 58.1½d.—On Friday the silver market was very quiet all day. Scarcely any business was heard of in bars, and the demand which existed a few days ago subsided a little, but Mexican dollars appeared to be more wanted, and the price was quoted firm at 51½d. per ounce. There was no variation of any sort in the Eastern exchange rates, but Rupee paper was rather dull, without, however, showing any further quotable change.—On Saturday no alteration took place in silver, bars being moderately steady at 51½d., and sellers of Mexican dollars quoted 51¼d. per ounce. The exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta were again telegraphed at 18.8 3-16d., the rate from Hong Kong being 38.9½d., and from Shanghai 58.1½d. Rupee paper was unchanged.

THE WANDERERS' CLUB.—Many of the leading clubs in Pall-mall and St. James's-street have, during the past half century, been converted from proprietary to members' clubs. The Wanderers' Club, which has been established about eight years, is now going through a similar process, as the members, at a general meeting in July, unanimously passed a resolution that it was advisable that the club should become the property of the members by the purchase of the proprietor's interests. A special committee was appointed, with Lord Headley as chairman, to report on the best means of effecting the purchase; and it is rumoured that a large and handsome club house will be erected on the present site in Pall-mall, undoubtedly a very attractive and central position, while the fact of 1,450 members belonging to the club seems to necessitate increased accommodation, and will tend to make the Wanderers' Club as much sought after as the old established Travellers', where candidates are always waiting long for admission.

THE ROYAL MILITARY SCHOOL OF MUSIC.—Sir Frederick Roberts, Lady Roberts, and a distinguished party visited the Royal Military School of Music, near Twickenham, on Thursday. An open-air concert is given here weekly, and the performances of the band—which averages between eighty and ninety in number—have attracted large audiences during the past summer. Sir Frederick was received by Colonel Thompson, the commandant, and, after an inspection of the institution, listened for a considerable time to the playing of the students, their programme including a number of popular pieces.

PRESENTATION TO LADY ROBERTS.—An interesting ceremony took place on Thursday afternoon at the studio of Mr. H. Harvey, F.R.H.S., 50, Gt. Marlborough-st., Chelsea, in the presentation to Lady Roberts of a bust of her husband, Sir Frederick Sleight Roberts, the hero of Kandahar. A number of ladies and gentlemen, many of whom were members of the Royal Historical Society, had assembled at the studio and received Sir Frederick and Lady Roberts with applause. The presentation was entrusted to Dr. Zerffi, the president of the Royal Historical Society, who unveiled the bust, and in a few well-chosen words offered it to Lady Roberts on behalf of the sculptor and other members of the society as a token of grateful remembrance of the many attributes of the gallant soldier. Sir Frederick, speaking for Lady Roberts, said that it was with much pleasure that her ladyship accepted the bust. They both felt greatly honoured at it being done for them, and they were delighted at its completion being entrusted to such a distinguished and rising young sculptor. Lady Roberts was as much pleased with the bust itself as she was gratified at having it presented to her. The gallant general expressed himself much flattered at the complimentary allusion that had been made to him. He was very proud of having been made an honorary member of the Royal Historical Society, and was as little likely to forget the evening when that took place as either he or Lady Roberts were to forget the present to them most interesting occasion. The bust, which is in terra cotta, and shows General Roberts in undress staff uniform, with no other decoration than the Victoria Cross, is both admirably executed and a very fine likeness. It will be taken to India with the general and her ladyship.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.—By the departure of the Indian reliefs from Woolwich the slender force which has been stationed in the garrison for some months past has been further attenuated. The strength of the garrison has not been so low as it is now for many years past, a result due to the extra demand for troops in India, South Africa, and Ireland. In a few months the arrivals from India will effect some improvement, but in the meantime the military duties fall heavily upon the few men in garrison, although many of the sentry posts have been temporarily done away with. The Committee on Mountain Batteries, sitting at Simla, has decided to recommend that all European mountain batteries be supplied with screw guns, the experience of the recent Afghan campaign having clearly proved the superiority of that weapon over the ordinary 9-pounder field gun. These guns are carried on the backs of mules.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Crocodile left Portsmouth on Friday morning for Bombay with troops. She embarked on the previous day Major Wright, Capt. Saunders, Lieuts. Stuart, Pollock, Addington, St. John Mildmay, and Perceval, and the 7th and 9th Batteries of the 9th Brigade, Royal Artillery, from Sheerness; Major Burton Brown, Capt. Wynell-Mayow, Lieuts. Chance and Von Donop, and the 6th and 7th Batteries of the 10th Brigade, from Golden-hill and Woolwich; Major Bleazby, Lieuts. Fullerton, Richards, and Handford-Flood, Quartermaster Pulsford, and a detachment of the 2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey Regiment; Major Wray, Lieuts. Boisragon and Aphorp, and a draft of the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers; Major Cooke, Lieuts. Scott and Kitchin, and a draft of the 1st Battalion East Lancashire Regiment; Lieut. Shakespeare, and a draft of the 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment; Capt. Linton, Lieut. Campbell, and a draft of the 1st Battalion South Lancashire Regiment, a draft of the East Surrey Regiment, and the following individual officers:—Col. L'Estrange, Majors Gyll, Wickham, and Lockhart; Capt. Jervois, Mackenzie, Watson, Hall, and Mayne, and Lieuts. Forde, Perry, Earle, Labalmondier, and Stopford, Royal Artillery; Lieut. Davis, 2nd Manchester; Major Spencer, 2nd Essex; Major Trotman, 4th King's Royals; Lieut. M'Kinstry, 2nd Warwick; Captain Kingscote and Lieut. Simpson, Royal Horse Artillery; Lieut. Hastings, 1st Rifle Brigade; Major Jeffreys and Capt. Carpenter, 1st Connaught Rangers; Lieut. Macdonald, 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers; Deputy Surgeons General Gilborne and Webb, Surgeon Majors Inkson, Fiddes, and Hogg; and Surgeons Slogett and Michael, of the Army Medical Department; and Surgeons Milne, Hawkins, Cunningham, Newland, Hudson, Baker, Silcock, Mullane, Rogers, Cooper, Da Costa, Kanga, and O'Hara, of the Indian Medical Staff. Altogether the number who embarked at Portsmouth consisted of 78 officers, 1,081 men, 71 women, and 79 children. The Crocodile will call at Plymouth for the purpose of embarking Major Jones, 1st Manchester; Lieuts. Abdy, Smyth, and Triscott, R.A.; Capt. Bather, 1st King's Own Borderers; 98 men belonging to the 1st Royal Welsh Fusiliers; and 20 men belonging to the Royal Horse Artillery.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—The London Gazette of Friday night states that her Majesty has been graciously pleased to confer the Victoria Cross on Surg. Major Edmund Baron Hartley, of the Cape Mounted Riflemen, Lieut. William St. Lucien Chase, of the Bombay Staff Corps, and Private James Ashford. The first-named receives the Cross for gallantry at Moirosi's Mountain; the second for gallantry on the occasion of the sortie from Kandahar on August 16, 1880; and the last named for having rendered Lieut. Chase every assistance and remaining with him throughout.

INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's new steamer Shannon, which has been built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, was launched from their yard on Thursday. She is 400ft. long, with engines of 5,000 indicated horse-power. The Shannon, which has been constructed entirely of steel, will accommodate 130 first and fifty second class passengers. Her gross tonnage is 4,700 tons.

INDIAN MUSIC.—We thank Dr. Raja Shourendra Mohun Tagore Bahadur, C.I.E., for a copy of his new publication, entitled "The Five Principal Musicians of the Hindus." The history of the work is this. The noble author was invited to take part in the proceedings of the Fifth International Congress of Orientalists, which will be held at Berlin this month. As he has not been able to attend the Congress he has made an offering to the congress of an allegorical paper in Sanskrit (with an introduction in English) being "a brief exposition of the essential elements of Hindu music as set forth by the five celestial musicians of India." This paper is preceded by an imaginary picture of the congress. The conception of the poem is quite original, which ends with a chorus in praise of Germany "as the land which was the first to acknowledge and prize the importance and wealth of Indian literature to the fullest extent." Professor Weber in a critique in the National Zeitung speaks highly of this paper.—Hindu Patriot.

THE NORTHBROOK CLUB.—It cannot but be highly gratifying to our countrymen to know that Lord Northbrook continues to take a lively interest in their welfare. One of the most important signs of the time is the growing desire among Indian youths to complete their education in England, and as a necessary condition they ought to be in their statu pupillari placed under proper guardianship. Lord Northbrook as a friend of the people of India, recognising this necessity, started in 1879 the idea of establishing an institute for this purpose. It was formally opened in 1880 under the name of "Northbrook Indian Society and Club." Its "main object is to provide a system of guardianship for young men of good family or position in India sent to England for education." It is also intended to promote social intercourse between Indian youths studying in England and Englishmen who feel interested in their welfare. A year's experience has satisfied the committee of the institution that it supplies a widely felt desideratum and that it has the sympathy of both Indians and Englishmen. In order to place the institution on a permanent basis, and to provide it with a suitable locality and funded income, it is proposed to raise subscriptions, and the committee have issued an appeal to the Indian public. We sincerely hope that the appeal will be generously responded to by Indian chiefs and gentlemen. Lord Northbrook has personally addressed many of them. We are authorised to mention that his Honour the Lieutenant Governor is willing to head the subscription list. As requested, we shall be glad to receive subscriptions in aid of the fund.

A LETTER is published by the Rangoon Gazette, which, if it really comes from one of Theebaw's officials, perhaps merits some attention. The writer—in behalf, he says, of the King—stirs up an old scandal. Referring to the treaty made between the late King and General Fytche, he declares that Lord Northbrook refused to observe an important part of the agreement; the inference being that the Indian Government cannot blame the Burmese for not observing the other portions which relate to trade.

IN order to encourage the study of the Burmese language among the junior officers of the Burma commission, the Police Department, the Educational Department, and the Forest Department, the chief commissioner of Burma, with the sanction of the Government of India, has notified that the standards of examination and the donations to be given to successful candidates will be as follow:—High proficiency, Rs.2,000, with certificate from the presiding examiners. Degree of honour, Rs.4,000, with diploma from the Government of India.

WRITING OF THE CASE BETWEEN THE AMIR-I-KABIR AND MR. KNIGHT. The Pioneer says:—The Amir-i-Kabir blundered into the choice of the most offensive mode of defence offered by the law; and in so doing he naturally enlisted on the side of Mr. Knight a great deal of sympathy, which the merits of the case would not have secured him. The affair has been complicated, since by various misunderstandings Mr. Knight appears to be possessed by the belief that the Government of India instigated the Amir-i-Kabir to undertake his prosecution. This impression we believe to be quite erroneous. The co-regent consulted legal advisers on his own account, and got from them the terribly bad advice which led him to undertake the criminal prosecution. Nor is the case one in which the Amir-i-Kabir can expect to come off with altogether flying colours. Probably every specific statement which Mr. Knight has made about him is wrong. Mr. Knight is a man who appears constitutionally incapable of inaccuracy in his public statements. But it can be shown, and no doubt will be shown, in the course of future discussions and wrangling over papers which have been demanded, and are now, we believe, in course of preparation by the Indian Government, that the co-regent was for a time under a cloud, officially, in connection with certain old attempts at bribery. He is said to have been the victim of a curious swindle in this affair. However, it would be premature to go into the details, till exact information is available. All that we need emphasize at present is that a great quantity of old mud has been unnecessarily stirred, and will be presently flung about with renewed violence, all because—to pay due attention to indirect causes—the law of libel is so stupid that the Nizam's co-regent was beguiled into prosecuting Mr. Knight by indictment.

AN EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION FOR INDIA.

We noticed last week an announcement in the Times telegram from Calcutta that an educational commission will sit during the coming winter in that capital. The object of their deliberations is stated to be a threefold one—to examine into the working of the educational despatch of 1854, to consider the question of mass education, and, lastly, to investigate the possibility of entrusting the encouragement of higher education to private enterprise. From the wording of the telegram we have little doubt that it gives us accurately the broad gist of the instructions under which it is proposed that the commission shall work, and we will at once confess that we are compelled to view those instructions with considerable mistrust.

We believe that there is ample scope for the labours of a properly constituted Education Commission in India. Further than this, we believe that such a commission is one of the crying wants of the country. We would make it permanent, and place its head on the footing of a Secretary to the Supreme Government. An Imperial Department, constituted in this way, would encourage and strengthen the provincial departments; whilst it would enable the Government of India adequately to discharge its educational responsibilities, with which, under present circumstances, the Home-office vainly struggles, under the greatest disadvantages, with little knowledge and much friction. Such a department would ensure unity of educational action and economy of educational labour throughout the various provinces of the Empire. It would secure the universal adoption of the most approved methods and utilise the experience gained in one province for the benefit of all; whilst, as a body homogeneous with the local departments, it might be trusted to allow a wide margin for that local independence which is necessitated by the diverse local circumstances. The existing education departments are unquestionably more popular with the natives than any other branches of the administration; their officers are more in sympathy with native feeling. We do not hesitate to affirm that such an extension of our Indian educational machinery as that we have suggested would be the most popular measure ever initiated by the British Government in India. Its cost would be insignificant in comparison with its political effect; whilst its advantages would be immediate, permanent, and far reaching.

But the instructions that are to be given to the forthcoming Calcutta Commission lead us to fear that its scope, its object, and its constitution alike are intended to be something very different from those which we have here sketched. We cannot pretend to misunderstand the references to the despatch of 1854, to mass education, and to private enterprise. And the paragraph from the Calcutta Sunday Mirror, which we quote in our "Summary," is equally significant. The Commission is clearly intended to furnish the Government of India with facts and arguments to show that the time has now come, as contemplated in the famous despatch quoted, when we may withdraw from the State support of high education and devote the funds now spent on State colleges to the education of Mr. Gladstone's "dumb millions." And, if this be so, we deem it our duty to warn the Government that the movement is altogether premature for any such inquiry, the time is most inopportune for it, and the result can only be nugatory save in respect to the discontent that will be aroused by it throughout the country.

All that can be said on the side of withdrawal from State support of high education was said ten years ago in the ablest possible manner by Mr. A. P. Howell, now Commissioner of Jabalpur, whose well-deserved promotion to the post of acting Home Secretary was probably secured by his clever and exhaustive minute, well known to all students of Indian educational questions. The other side of the controversy has been given over and over again in the pages of the Calcutta Review, the Hindu Patriot, and passim in the whole native press and a large and influential section of Anglo-Indian journalism—and especially in Bengal, during the period when the war between Sir George Campbell and native public opinion was being waged, with results fatal to the popularity and injurious to the usefulness of that somewhat headstrong Lieutenant Governor. For Bengal, at least, the results of the heated controversies of those days have been harvested during the fruitful administrations of Sir Richard Temple and Sir Ashley Eden; and in other parts of India similar conclusions have become established, either after similar contests or by the wisdom of the local authorities. The instructions now proposed for the Educational Commission are such as we might expect from the honourable member for Kirkcaldy; but we sincerely hope that Lord Hartington and Lord Ripon will obtain more trustworthy advice on the great educational question, so vitally important in its bearing on the future welfare of India.

We are quite ready to allow that the time will doubtless come when, as suggested in the Educational Charter of 1854, we may hand over our State colleges to "private enterprise." We yield to none in our desire for the enlightenment of the masses in India; we are well aware that if all, and more than all, the money that is now allotted to education in the imperial and provincial budgets were devoted to elementary instruction we should still be able to do little more than scratch the surface of the vast field that awaits the educational plough in India. But we say emphatically India's first want is a class of highly-educated men, who shall act as pioneers to guide their ignorant countrymen into the promised land of civilisation. If every ryot in India knew a little of the three R's the knowledge would be of inestimable benefit—and the attainment of that result, distant though it must be, is a noble aim for the Government of India to set constantly before their eyes; but its attainment, even if it were immediately possible, would be as nothing in its bearing on the future development and civilisation of the country, compared with the creation of a class of instructors and leaders, of inventors and intelligent capitalists, of jurists and legislators, of scholars and savants, of statesmen and philanthropists. These are the men who are to bring India into her proper place in the comity of nations; nor will any amount of reading, writing, and arithmetic among the masses—ininitely valuable as these privileges are—atone to India for the lack of such a class. That the education of such a class cannot yet be left to private enterprise is, we believe, susceptible of clear proof; we reserve the discussion of that point to a future occasion.

THE INSCRIPTIONS IN THE INDIAN MUSEUM

The world of orientalist will hear with enthusiasm the announcement, that has been made this week, that Mr. Wollaston has been entrusted by the Government with the task of translating the numerous and important inscriptions in the Indian Museum. Many of our readers know what a treasure of historical and antiquarian lore has been locked up in the museum, awaiting a transcriber, editor, and translator; and the Government, by its liberality in this matter, will earn the warm gratitude of every student of Asiatic history and antiquities throughout the world. Mr. Wollaston's well-known and admirable translation of the "Anwar-i-Suhaili," and his other valuable labours in the field of Persian and Arabic learning, mark him out as the scholar best qualified to carry out the wise and liberal intentions of the Government. We have no hesitation in saying that no better choice could have been made; and we confidently look for a very considerable addition to the world's store of Oriental science from his work in the museum. We are glad, also, to learn that Mr. Wollaston has secured the services of Mirza Muhammad Bakar as his assistant. The Mirza, who was formerly attached to the British Residency at Bushahr, had a great reputation in Persia as a poet, and is a most accomplished Persian and Arabic scholar. The work that has been begun under such good auspices will, we doubt not, prove a very notable one; and its results not the least valuable of the memorials by which the beneficent administration of the present Secretary of State for India will be best remembered.

THE MAHARAJA OF MYSOR AT THE KOLAR GOLD MINES.—The crushing of auriferous quartz at the Kolar gold field was inaugurated Oct. 2 by the Maharaja of Mysor. His Highness left Bangalore by special train at a quarter to seven a.m., accompanied by his brother, his Dewan, the Resident, and thirty-five European gentlemen, mostly military officers of the Bangalore station. Along the route were crowds of natives, who exhibited a keen interest in his Highness. The Kolar-road Station was effectively decorated, and here guards of the Sillidar Horse and a strong body of the Mysor police were waiting. The crowd was very large and enthusiastic. His Highness was driven from the station to the gold field in a carriage and pair escorted by the Sillidar Horse, and followed by a stream of running people, whose excitement was very remarkable.—Times of India.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

TUESDAY EVENING.

TEA DELIVERIES.—The quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended with Saturday last was 4,013,304lb., showing, as compared with the returns of the previous week, an increase of 17,418lb., or equal to $\frac{3}{8}$ per cent. Of the total, 2,502,179lb. was for home consumption, 806,997lb. was exported, 657,180lb. was sent coastwise, 41,710lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 5,238lb. was for ships' stores. The duty received was £62,554, being £1,325, or 2 per cent., higher than in the week ended with the 24th ult.

COFFEE.—At to-day's public sales pale and grey plantation Ceylon showed a further decline, color being about steady, 393 casks 212 barrels and bags sold—small 68s. 6d. to 72s., low middling 77s. to 80s., middling 83s. to 87s. 6d., rather bold 96s. 6d. to 97s. 6d., bold 106s. per cwt.; 108 bags East India chiefly bought in.

HEMP.—Sales made at £46 10s. spot, and £47 10s. per ton distant.

COTTON.—With a firm market, a good business is reported at full rates. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Tinnevely at 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ d., Western at 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d., Coconada at 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and Bengal at 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. per lb. For arrival, Bengil, July, Cape, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery, American, October-April, 6 9-16d. to 6 21-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

SUGAR.—By auction, 2,979 bags Bengal sold at valuations; brown and yellow Gupallah, 18s. to 22s. 6d.; grocery, 23s. to 23s. 6d.

COFFEE.—In auction 96 casks 13 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon sold at 1s. to 1s. 6d. under last Friday's rates, low middling 76s. 6d. to 80s., middling 82s. to 85s.; 430 bags Guatemala withdrawn.

SPICES.—The auctions offered a large supply of new crop pimento, but 3,586 bags nearly all sold at a decline not exceeding $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per lb.; ordinary to good, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; fine, 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.

COTTON.—The market is quieter to-day, and 1-16d. lower for American. In East India descriptions there is no change. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Tinnevely at 5 7-16d., Western at 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 5d., and Bengal at 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely, July-October, Cape and Canal, 5 7-16d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery, American, October, 6 9-16d., December-January, 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that although trade in various parts of the kingdom appears to be gradually expanding the markets for imported produce remain in the same dull state as before. Good deliveries during last month have caused increased competition for Indian teas, and the market closes strong at a rise of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 1d. per lb. on most description. Plantation Ceylon coffee has declined fully 2s. per cwt., at which a limited demand now prevails. Other kinds are inactive, and the statistical position of the market does not seem calculated to restore confidence.

COFFEE.—The market continues flat, and plantation Ceylon is 2s. 6d. lower than at the close of last week; 281 casks 63 barrels 76 bags sold—small to low middling, at 66s. to 80s.; middling at 81s. to 86s., good to fine middling at 87s. to 94s., bold to 104s.; 1,226 bales foreign partly sold; Guatemala at easier rates, ordinary to good ordinary at 50s. to 59s., greenish at 63s. to 66s. per cwt.

COTTON.—A steady but slow market. Sales about 1,800 bales, including Tinnevely at 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., Western at 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d., and Salem at 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. per lb. Forward delivery, American, November-April 6 13-32d. to 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

JUTE.—For arrival considerable transactions have resulted, a great portion being on speculation, prices showing a slight advance in some cases, but judging from the state of trade and prospect of lower freights in Calcutta via Cape, they think consumers may do better by waiting for distant shipments. The entries for last month are valued at 256,000 bales, of which 110,000 bales are Canal, while the actual sailings from Calcutta are 158,000 bales. The sales for the fortnight are estimated at 60,000 bales afloat, and 10,000 bales in dock and ex quay.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—The auctions, comprising 14,800 packages, have passed with spirit, and the market closed strong, at an advance of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 1d. for the week on low to medium, and 1d. to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. on medium to good descriptions, fine to finest fully supporting previous values. Telegrams report shipments to end of September to be less than last year, which has led to reduced estimates of the total crop.

COFFEE remains extreme'y dull, and 325 casks 158 barrels and bags Plantation Ceylon in auction were chiefly withdrawn. The decline since last Friday is 2s. to 4s. per cwt. 2,394 bags foreign partly sold, Guatemala at 50s. to 62s.; Honduras, at 62s. to 77s.; Savanilla, at 61s. 6d. to 74s. 6d.; and Central American, at 48 to 59s. per cwt.

SPICES.—Cloves rather firmer for Zanzibar with some inquiry.

TEA.—A firm market. About 4,000 bales sold, chiefly to arrive.

HEMP.—Manilla in request at 446 15s. on the spot.

COTTON.—The market has been quiet and the business reported scarcely amounts to 1,500 bales, including Bengal at 4½d. to 5 15-16d. per lb. Forward delivery—American, October-February, 6½d. to 6 7-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—“Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physick—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicine, when I administered to him five

will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a ‘medicine man’ had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar.”

W. H. ALLEN and CO., 13, Waterloo-place.COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.*NOW READY*CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s. "Athenæum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers over the greater portion of our North-American possessions. The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive, and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chains of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, OCT. 18, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 29; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 27; Calcutta, Sept. 26.

The official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 13 says that prospects still continue fairly satisfactory throughout the Madras Presidency and the Mysore State, where the crops, though in parts requiring more rain, have, on the whole, improved during the week under report. A marked improvement is also apparent in the Nizam's Territories and in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country of the Bombay Presidency, where good showers have fallen; more rain would, however, here also be beneficial. In Bengal there has not been much rain during the week, but crops are for the most part in good condition. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh light showers fell in the eastern tracts, and prospects continue generally good. In the Punjab there was no rain during the week, but crops are doing well. In the Central India and Rajputana States, and also in the Central Provinces, more or less copious showers have again fallen, and prospects are favourable. In Berar and Coorg, in Assam and in British Burma, crops are thriving. On the whole, the improvement which was noted in the preceding week has been maintained and has extended to the Bombay, Deccan, and Southern Mahratta Country. Agricultural prospects throughout the country are now generally satisfactory.

TELEGRAPHIC advices are equally satisfactory. The Times telegram, dated Darjiling, Oct. 15, says that "the Mysor crop prospects are reported to be generally good. There is great improvement in the district of Chituldroog, but rain is still short in Shimoga. Prices are rising slightly in the interior."

At the date of the departure of the mail cholera had almost disappeared from Lahore, but had broken out, according to the Bombay Gazette, in Berar.

The Calcutta telegram of the Times, dated Oct. 16, furnishes us with another incident in the life and fortunes of Kamal, the famous Afridi freebooter who has constituted himself the scourge of the British frontier. Our scourge has, of course, got safely off out of our reach. His tribe appear to have laughed at our demands for the surrender of the murderer of British subjects and his associates, and are probably not a little amused at our asking for a fine—they evidently "wish you may get it." But they have sent some one to say, with as much gravity as he can command, that "they have expelled Kamal from their territory and destroyed his house and property." With grim humour they confirm this statement by presenting us with the arms that were stripped off the bodies of our murdered troopers at Peshawur. Need we say that the Government has hastened to accept this as a "submission?" Nothing more is said about such unpleasant subjects as "fines" or "surrender of murderers." Following the Transvaal precedent, the British Government might now conclude a convention with the Afridis; to give them another good opportunity of pulling the British nose in the view of all Asia. The Times telegram is as follows:—

"All the arms stolen in the raid on a picket of the 19th Bengal Lancers at Peshawur last August have now been recovered, and the Afridis have expelled Kamal, the ringleader, from their territory, and destroyed his house and property."

The Times correspondent, telegraphing on September 25, warned us that we were not likely to obtain the demands we had made in regard to Kamal and his associates without an expedition to enforce them. As our troops are only lately back from the huge "Waziri expedition"—and as, moreover, the expedition against the Alaiwals is only hanging fire until Lord Ripon and the Punjab Government can make up their minds as to how many regiments will be required for it—it was, of course, clear from the first that Kamal would have an easy time of it, if he and his people would only consent to allow us to let him off without further ado. They have done so, and Lord Ripon now, as usual, thanks God he is rid of a knave.

THE Quetta correspondent, telegraphing on the same date, testifies—almost malgré lui—to the folly of the scouting policy that would have fled from Chaman and Pishin as well as from Kandahar. He says:—

"No details regarding the news telegraphed to you on the 12th inst. have yet reached us, but the general course of events seems to have been as follows:—Simultaneously with his own advance from Cabul, the Ameer sent his cousin, Sirdar Abdul Kudus Khan, with 500 horse, to head the Char Aimak tribes of Central and Western Afghanistan, who had again broken out into insurrection under Aubia Khan at Taiwarra. It will, perhaps, be remembered that this chief headed a confederation against Ayub which was broken up by the desertion of Khan Agha, a chief of the Jamshidis, and Ayub's father-in-law, who was shortly afterwards put to death by him. Taiwarra, Aubia Khan's capital, was then occupied by Sirdar Abdul Wahab Khan, with a regiment of Herat infantry. Against him Aubia Khan has since been waging a continued guerilla warfare, refusing all offers of reconciliation. About five weeks ago he was joined by Kudus Khan and the whole of the Char Aimak tribes, with the exception of some of the Firozkohis. At their approach Abdul Wahab Khan appears to have evacuated Taiwarra, which is some forty miles north of the position shown in the maps. The fort was then razed to the ground by Aubia Khan, who declared that it was more trouble than use to him, as he could not hold it against artillery, and it afforded a stronghold to the Heratis, without which his horsemen would soon have swept them out of the country. The confederated tribes then marched north into the Harirud Valley, and at Chasma-i-Khost, about 100 miles east of Herat, were met by Sirdar Abdul Salam Khan, Ayub's father-in-law, at the head of a body of horse. They defeated him and took him prisoner with thirty others. Further down the valley Luinab Khushdil Khan, whom Ayub had left at Herat as governor, opposed their progress with three regiments of infantry and two guns. Him they also defeated, and drove him back with the loss of his guns, and Abdul Kudus Khan, writing to the Ameer the news of the double victory, adds that Luinab had sent him a messenger proffering submission. He also states that Ayub Khan, who, when the news reached him, was at Anardareh, between Fara and Sabzawar, where he had left his female relations, took refuge at once in Persian territory. If this is true, and I see no reason to doubt it, Herat must before this have fallen, and the Ameer will be virtually master of all the territory ruled by his predecessor.

"Events having rendered impossible a peaceful division of the country between the rival claimants, this result may be looked on as eminently satisfactory, and the triumph of our candidate all along the line will indubitably increase our prestige; for, without moving a soldier across the frontier or firing a shot, we have rendered the Ameer invaluable assistance by our mere presence in Pishin and at Chaman. It appears certain that the fear of interference by us alone prevented Ayub from risking an advance on Cabul, and if he had done so the very dubious loyalty of the Ameer's army and his principal adherents would hardly have stood the strain. If, as certain politicians recommended, Pishin and Chaman had been hastily evacuated, Ayub would have been free from all apprehension on our account, and the strong moral support we have been able to afford the Ameer would have been proportionately reduced. The perfect tranquillity of our frontier during the last three months has, moreover, fully justified the views of those who consider that the retention of Peshin, instead of involving us in complication, will rather tend to diminish them.

"No time could be more opportune for the reduction of the garrison to its normal limits, and formal orders have now been issued for the march of the surplus troops. The 13th Hussars, A Battery 4th Brigade Royal Artillery, and four companies of the Manchester Regiment will march to Sibi by the Bolan road about ten days hence. The British mountain battery, the remaining half of the Manchester Regiment, the 4th and 9th Bombay Native Infantry, and the 2nd Sind Horse will go by the eastern route somewhat later. The force will then consist of the 61st Foot, a garrison battery of artillery, a native mountain battery, two regiments of native cavalry, and five of infantry. General Hume breaks up his division and goes to Lahore as soon as the reduction of the force is effected. Quetta will then probably be constituted a district command under a brigadier."

THIS is what is telegraphed about the squabble over the coming Alaiwal expedition:—

"It is possible that a punitive expedition may shortly be sent against the Alaiwals, a tribe living to the north of Abbottabad; but there is said to be a difference of opinion between the Supreme and the Punjab Governments as to the strength of the force required."

THE news from Afghanistan this week is altogether satisfactory. Luck has befriended our "moral barrier," Abdur Rahman; and we, of course, share his luck, as long as he will allow us to do so. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from Darjiling on Oct. 16, says:—

"Fortune continues to favour the Ameer. His general, Sirdar Abdul Kudus Khan, has defeated a body of Ayub's troops under Sirdar Abdul Salam Khan at Chasma-i-Khost, capturing their commander and thirty troopers. The same general has also fought an action with Luinab, in which the latter was routed, with the loss of two guns. A force under Mahomed Yusaf Khan has crossed the Helmand and is advancing towards Herat, as is also a second army under Mahomed Ishak Khan. It is reported that the Ameer has sent to Cabul for a heavy battery, consisting of four 18-pounders and two 8in.-howitzers, all of English make, and which were presented by us to Shere Ali some years ago. So it would appear that he is resolved to take active measures against Herat. Little is known about the condition of that place or the feeling of the people. The news of Ayub's defeat was received there on the 30th ult., and its first effect was to induce Faithifula Beg, the chief of the Firozkohis, to desert and join Ishak Khan, who is said to have been then only thirty miles distant. The Ameer has written to the Herat chiefs, calling on them to assist him, and it is not unlikely that they will join the winning side. The garrison of Herat is said to number 2,000 only. On the whole, the chances would appear to point to the early downfall of the western capital. Nothing certain is known regarding Ayub, but an unconfirmed rumour states that while at Fara he received the news of Kudus Khan's two victories and immediately fled into Persian territory. The only item of last week's news which seems unfavourable to the Ameer is a vague report of gatherings of the Wardaks and Hazaras for the purpose of attacking Ghazni and threatening the communications between Cabul and Kandahar. This movement, however, does not appear to have assumed formidable dimensions, and the Ameer is said to be now taking steps to punish the marauders.

"It has been resolved that the Quetta garrison will consist, during the winter, of a strong brigade of two batteries of artillery, a company of sappers, two regiments of native cavalry and one European, and four native infantry regiments, under the command of Brigadier Edwardes, C.B. This force will probably be further reduced next March."

WE are enabled to state that after full consideration the Indian authorities have decided that it will be absolutely necessary to take steps to punish the Abuzais and other tribes on the frontier who have lately been giving serious trouble by raids into British territory, and that a force of 4,000 men is to be organised during the winter to be employed in carrying out the proposed operations. The command of the expedition has been offered to and accepted by Brigadier General T. G. Kennedy, C.B., commanding the Punjab Frontier Force.

"It is evidently hopeless to attempt to keep further measures with the Afridis. What is the use of this pretence of imposing fines which we cannot realise except by paying them ourselves? If we pay allowances with one hand and cut fines out of them with the other, then the Afridis will bear it, if not carried to too great an extent. If, however, we attempt to recover the fines otherwise, by seizing the property or persons of members of the tribe found raiding in our territory, under the system known in Barmuta, the Afridis will not put up with it. They immediately retaliate by a raid; then another fine is imposed; then another raid; then we attempt a blockade, perhaps, of one or more sections. This is not really effective, for those sections still carry on their trade (without which the Afridis could not exist) through other members of the tribe. Nevertheless it is inconvenient and annoying to the Afridis, so they raid again—and so it goes on, till at last a bill of fines is run up which could not be realised were the whole Afridis and their country sold up, stock and block. Then Government realises the absurdity of the whole thing, and the Afridis on their side begin to be tired of the game. So overtures are made by both parties. A great Jirga comes in and is royally entertained. The Afridis apologise. The Government remit the fines. There is a general embracing all round; and the Jirga departs, laden with khilluts; and so we live happily ever after—till next time. This is what is termed border policy, and we challenge the frontier officers to show that the description is overcharged. Is it not time that there should be an end of this? One Kamal, Afridi, considered that he had a grievance the other day against the deputy commissioner of Peshawur, and so he and his friends cut up a picket of the 19th Bengal Lancers in the very cantonment of Peshawur; some other Afridi, with a grievance, has now cut up a picket of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry in the cantonment of Kohat. In the interior there have been sundry onslaughts upon our villages. The universal opinion of all who know the frontier is that we shall only check this kind of thing, and secure the Afridi border, by occupying the plateau of Tirah; and all say, and have long said, that this measure is thoroughly practicable and will completely effect our object."

THE Englishman says:—"The Sonthals are in a dangerous state of excitement. We have experienced a more or less acute degree of this condition of matters in this part of the country for the past year, and the cause of this unrest is, we fear, much deeper than any passing troubles connected with the census. It is time that a thorough inquiry should be made into the whole question."

WE are glad to learn, from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing under date of October 15, that Mooltan remains quiet, and it is satisfactory to hear that some leading Hindu and Mahomedan gentlemen of the Punjab are trying to arrange for the prevention of similar outbursts of religious feeling. They have resolved to discourage the practice which recently sprang up of publishing works containing appeals to fanaticism, and have directed the destruction of one particular pamphlet. There is good reason to hope that their efforts may be crowned with success. The Deputy Commissioner of Mooltan has instituted proceedings for libel against a native paper which accused him of being responsible for the riots.

ON these disturbances, and the connected libel suit, a Lahore telegram to the Bombay Gazette, dated Sept. 28, has the following:—

"Mr. Roe, deputy commissioner, Mooltan, prosecutes an Anglo-native paper called the Tribune, published at Lahore, on the charge of publishing grossly libellous attacks in connection with the riots. This paper accuses him of culpable negligence, and even of responsibility for the riots, on the ground of his having intimated to the Mahomedans that they were at liberty to take the law into their own hands.

"There is one sentence in these libels which runs:—'Getting the deputy commissioner's sanction, the Mahomedans set themselves to the work of destroying Hindu temples and looting the shops of Hindu merchants.' Mr. Roe complains that the charges are deliberately intended to keep alive the Hindu excitement on the beef question.

"The Civil and Military Gazette, strongly commenting on this case, states that the troops will probably be withdrawn in a day or two altogether, and that they have already been withdrawn from the gates. At Mr. Roe's suggestion the municipal committee of Mooltan have agreed to double all private subscriptions for the restoration of religious buildings. It is feared that the ill feeling will not be assuaged so long as the temples and mosques remain in ruins."

THE Tribune is an English paper, recently started by some native gentlemen in Lahore, chiefly belonging to the enterprising Bengali community that is now so strong in all the great cities of the Punjab and the North West Provinces. As its name was meant to imply, it was started in the interest of the "people," and professes to be actuated by the "sound Radical" sentiments that were imported into India in such vast quantities after Mr. Gladstone's Midlothian speeches, and the agitation in England about the Vernacular Press Act, Arms Act, and License Tax. It is conducted with considerable ability, and follows the lead of the English agitation which gave it birth, by criticising with some acerbity the iniquities of the British rule in India.

MR. C. A. ROE, C.S., formerly of Merton College, Oxford, is best known as one of the most experienced and trusted settlement officers in Northern India; and, since his transfer from settlement work to the charge of a district, he has always been looked upon as one of the very foremost men of his standing in the Punjab.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs that "the Government has offered three lakhs of rupees for the purpose of undertaking the working and stock of the Bengal Iron-works Company, which is now in liquidation. The liquidator, in reply, has asked for a larger sum, pointing out that the company sank fifteen lakhs, and would probably have been successful had the Government assisted it. The Government, however, refuses to increase the offer, and states that its sole object in making it is to try and revive the industry, which it believes to have a good chance of success if prudently and economically managed. It promises to give all legitimate support to any private person or company which may buy the works." The action of the Government in this matter seems at first blush, at all events, neither wise nor dignified. If Major Baring has really satisfied himself that "the industry has a good chance of success," Government ought surely to offer a fair price for the plant—especially since the enterprise must largely depend for its success on the support of Government; and it seems little better than mockery to offer a company so situated three lakhs for that in which they have sunk fifteen. The "legitimate support" ought clearly to have been offered before, if offered at all. The offer as now made has an air of commercial "smartness" about it that will not increase the respect in which the Government is held.

FROM the same source we learn that a commission, consisting of Colonel Hall as president, and Major Stephen and Major King Harman as members, with Surgeon Major Bellew as secretary, has been appointed to inquire into the causes and mortality of the cholera epidemic which lately passed over the Punjab. It commenced its sittings at Murree, and is now visiting the principal cities of the province. It has ordered a report to be issued next month. The epidemic, which is known as choleraic fever, is still raging at Umritsur. It will, doubtless, be thoroughly investigated by the commission, although it is generally agreed that it is due to the late excessive rainfall.

WE hear that Lieut. General C. W. Hutchinson, R.E., is about to vacate his appointment as Inspector General of Military Works in India, and that he is to be succeeded by Major General R. Cadell, R.E.

THE Governor General of India has made the following appointments to his personal staff, viz.:—To be honorary surgeons—Surgeons General W. R. Cornish, C.I.E., and A. J. Payne, Deputy Surgeon General W. J. Moore, Brigadier Surgeon J. A. Marston, Surgeon Majors G. Farrell, T. E. Charles, M.D., R. W. Cunningham, M.D., C. A. Atkins, and Surgeon A. H. Roe, all of the Army or Indian Medical Services.

ATTENTION having been called to the absence of the names of their Highnesses the Maharaja of Gwalior, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., C.I.E., and the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir, G.C.S.I., C.I.E., who hold the honorary rank of general in our army, from the official monthly Army List, we understand that the subject has been considered at the War-office, and that the names of the two Princes will in future appear in the Army List among those of non-effective officers. The Army List in its new form was intended only to contain the names of officers on the Active List, and the omission of those holding honorary commissions is to be accounted for by this fact.

COLONEL MARTER, aide de camp to the Queen, the capturer of Cetewayo, is, it is understood, about to be appointed to the command of the King's Dragoon Guards, in India, for five years, and will take up his duties in December.

HER MAJESTY has approved of the grant of silver medals for distinguished conduct in the field, without annuity or gratuity, to the following non-commissioned officers and men, viz.:—Trumpeter J. J. McGlynn, Royal Artillery, Lance Corporal S. Pitchford, and Privates W. G. Harbart, E. Halett, and R. Henry, 2nd Battalion of Foot, "for their gallant conduct on the occasion of the sortie from Kandahar on August 16, 1880." Her Majesty has also approved of the grant of similar medals, without annuity or gratuity, to Sergeant Major W. Paton, Quartermaster

Sergeant J. Munroe, Sergeant T. Burridge, Corporal F. Thorogood, Acting Bombardier W. Payne, Trumpeter H. Jones, Gunner T. Tighe, and Driver J. Bishop, Royal Horse Artillery, "for conspicuously gallant conduct during the action at Maiwand and subsequent retreat to Kandahar, on July 27 and 28, 1880;" to Corporal T. Gordon, 72nd Highlanders, "in recognition of his gallantry at the battle of Kandahar;" and to Sergeant J. Hamilton, 1st Battalion 25th Foot, "for his gallant conduct on June 29, 1880, in Afghanistan, in defending a convoy (proceeding from Pezwan to Jagdallack) when attacked by marauders." A bar for attachment to the distinguished conduct medals already granted to them has been conferred on Colour Sergeants T. Jacobs and R. R. Lauder, 72nd Highlanders, "in recognition of the further gallantry displayed by them at the battle of Kandahar."

It is believed that the following new classification of army commands is likely to be introduced from Jan. 1:—In Bengal, first class commands will be at Lucknow and Meerut, second class at Calcutta and Gwalior, third class at Bareilly and Assam. In the Punjab, first class commands will be at Lahore and Rawul Pindi, second class at Peshawur and the frontier, third class at Umballa and Mooltan. In Madras, first class commands will be at Hyderabad and Bangalore, second class at Madras and Burma, third class at Belgaum. In Bombay, first class commands will be in Sind and Puna, second class at Nusseerabad, Mhow, and Bombay, third class at Aden and Angur.

THE following interesting remarks, on the present condition and future prospects of the chief Indian gold mines, are from the last circular of Mr. William Abbott, the well-known stockbroker and financier of Tokenhouse-yard. Mr. Abbott's great and well-deserved reputation for financial ability, and the courage with which he invariably puts his views in a clear and straightforward way before the public, give a special value to his good opinion of the future of the gold mining industry:—

"The works upon these properties, although latterly retarded by the moonsoons, which have been usually severe this summer, are now proceeding with vigour. The official and private reports from the various estates in India continue to demonstrate their great value, and the utmost confidence prevails as to their success. For instance, in the last circular issued to the shareholders of the Indian Gold Mines Company of Glasgow, the engineer in India, Mr. Severn, reports, "my confidence in our success increases every day." There is no justification whatever for the recent fall in the value of the shares, and I think a judicious selection for investment may safely be made with every prospect of a handsome profit before the end of the year. Crushing operations will be commenced in a few weeks' time.

WE take from the Englishman, to hand by this mail, the following report on the indigo crop, compiled by Messrs. W. Moran and Co. of Calcutta:—

"We beg to wait upon you with our estimate of the crop, giving a probable total of about 125,500 maunds. As regards the khoontees in Behar, the yield has been disappointing in some places, but on the other hand some factories have done better than was expected, and, taken altogether, the figures now given are higher than appeared likely a fortnight ago. As regards the figures for Benares and the Doab, we can only say that we have made the estimates as carefully as possible, but (and this applies more particularly to the Doab) it is impossible for us to obtain any really reliable information about the native production, and we can only state what we think they are likely to send down from general reports, and as compared with European factories. We are of opinion that the total for the crop will eventually prove pretty correct, and we do not think there is any likelihood of its falling short of the figures now given.

THE same firm supplies the following account of the Calcutta tea market for the fortnight preceding the date of departure of the mail:—

"During the past fortnight two series of sales have been held; the quantity offered was 18,611 chests, but of these 1,659 were withdrawn for shipment either to London, Australia, or America. Prices have been firmer, especially for good flavoured Darjiling kinds, and we quote an advance of one anna per pound all round. Fine and finest, as also broken, are again recovering value, chiefly on account of news by wire. A small sale will be held to-morrow of about 5,000 chests. Owing to the intervention of the holidays the next will not be held until about the 14th proximo."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary for the week ending Sept. 29:—Right Rev. Dr. Barbaro; Capt. A. C. Le Quesne, Hyderabad Contingent; Capt. Wells, Connaught Rangers; Capt. Greig, Nizam's Body Guard; Mr. J. Brander; Miss Tonnochy; Lieut. C. B. Down, Bombay Staff Corps.

THE ALLEGED BRITISH PRISONERS AT HERAT. NOTHING definite has been heard as to whether the report is correct that British prisoners from Maiwand were sold into slavery at Herat, but the Government have directed Colonel Stewart, who is on his way to Khat, on the Persian frontier of Afghanistan, to make every inquiry into the matter when he reaches those parts. It appears that, soon after the battle of Maiwand, a report reached the Indian Government that white men had been sold as slaves at Herat, and the story has now received additional colour by the statements of the missing sepoy of Jacob's Regiment. It is, however, possible that the statements of this sepoy are only a repetition of the rumours which were current last year. Colonel Stewart, who left this country six weeks ago, will remain between Khat and Birjand for at least a year, and from the proximity of these places to Herat it is hoped that he will be able to inform the Government of events which are passing there. The Russian Government have, we believe, been informed of his intended presence in those quarters.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'TIMES.'"

"Sir,—Having been asked from various parts in England as to my opinion about the probability of four Englishmen having fallen into slavery in Central Asia, allow me to remark through your columns that the account furnished by the sepoy does not seem to me to deserve an implicit faith. I have no reason to deny the possibility of four or even more Englishmen having become captives after the disastrous battle of Maiwand, but I very much doubt that these four or any other countrymen of yours should have been allotted as a part of the booty to any Afghan private or officer; for, according to my experience and notions of the Afghans and of the Central Asiatics in general, I take it as almost certain that these sahibs (for, although a private soldier, each European is looked upon as a sahib), forming a prominent part in the spoil, can only have fallen to the lot of Ayub Khan himself or to some one of his nearest relatives or friends, who can hardly be supposed to have sold that precious part of the spoil to any Tajak or Turcoman trader in human flesh, for the price which he could have got from that slave-dealer could scarcely be anything like the money any Afghan rascal may have hoped to exact from the English Government, knowing, as they do, that the life of an Englishman has a far greater value with the English themselves than with any Central Asiatic, who, according to the actual state of the market, will hardly offer more than £20 or £25. We ought not to forget, further, that a slave sold for menial work will fetch a still lower price if he is unacquainted with Pushtoo, Persian, or Uzbeg, which may be the case with the four Englishmen in question; and judging from the past, in which we have no precise knowledge of an Englishman having been sold by the Afghans even after the great defeat in the first Cabul campaign, I repeat that the story, as given by the sepoy, must be read with particular caution. Of course, it is possible that I am mistaken in my suppositions, and that in consequence of some incalculable event the four unfortunate Europeans may have really fallen into the hands of some Jamshidi, Hazari, or Taemuni, who, accustomed to that detestable traffic, may have really concealed his booty and secretly bartered the poor Englishmen to one of those many Tajaks who were in the rear of Ayub's army, and who may either have sold those unfortunate subjects of the Queen to a third hand or be still keeping them in custody for his ulterior purposes. If the first be the case, then I cannot agree with the writer of the article published in the Times of Sept. 27, who finds it improbable that they have been removed to any great distance from Herat, supposing, as he does, that we should have heard through Russia sources had they been sent either to Khiva or to Bokhara. This is certainly not the case, for Russia is very far from having what may be called a control over the slave trade in Central Asia. That abominable trade is under great restriction. It is carried on only secretly, but it is still carried on to a certain extent. The Russian authorities have not the power to stop it entirely, and still less can they have any notion about the personal identity of the captives imported or exported either in the Turkestan of Russia or in the Turkestan of her vassals. Nor can I concur with the writer of the said article when he recommends the assistance of your Minister in Teheran or of your news writer in Meshed. This would be the most dangerous step which could be taken in such a case. We have only to remember the case of M. de Blocqueville, a French photographer in the service of the Shah, who accompanied the Persian army twenty years ago to Merv, and who, falling into captivity among the Turcomans, was near being sold for four ducats; but when his Turcoman master got wind of it that the Shah was anxious to release that Frenchman he raised the price of his slave at once to an enormous height, and the Government of Nasr-ed-Din Shah was obliged to pay, instead of four ducats, 5,000 ducats. The history of that costly photographer is still alive in the memory of the Central Asiatics, and if any step should be taken on behalf of those unfortunate captives I would strongly recommend the avoidance of any official means. But, before all, we must wait for a more reliable and a more detailed account, believing as I do that the report of the sepoy alone is not a sufficient basis for an investigation of the matter.—I beg to remain yours obediently.

THE PARSEES IN PERSIA.

THE following is the purport of a petition lately sent through the Government of India to his Majesty the Shah of Persia by the managing committee of an association formed in Bombay in 1854 by the Parsees of India for the amelioration of the condition of the remnant of their coreligionists residing in Persia, and presented to the Shah by Mr. R. F. Thomson, the British representative at Teheran. In the beginning the attention of the Shah is drawn to the fact of a notorious Mahomedan rioter, by name Rajab, who cruelly cut to pieces a Parsee, named Rasheed, being allowed to escape scot-free, although several petitions were presented to obtain justice; and then the redress of the undermentioned grievances is solicited: 1. Three Parsee girls of Yezd have been forcibly converted; and, although several petitions were presented by their parents and relations to obtain justice, no notice was taken, on the pretence that the girls voluntarily embraced Mahomedanism. The Shah is in consequence requested to issue a firman that in future all those who wish to embrace Mahomedanism should present an application to that effect in the court of justice at Teheran. 2. When a Parsee dies any member of his family, no matter however distant, who may have previously been converted to Mahomedanism, claims and obtains the whole property of the deceased, to the exclusion of all the rightful heirs. In enforcing this claim the convert is backed and supported by Government functionaries. In support of this statement an illustration is given of a Mahomedan, named Syed Mahomed Ali, whose grandfather had about ninety years ago re-married a Parsee widow, who was then forcibly converted, having been enabled to establish his claim as the rightful heir of all the members of this lady's family. This Syed himself acknowledges to have become the owner of more than forty estates up to date in this way. 3. A Parsee desirous of buying landed property is obliged to pay one-fifth of the value of the property as fees to the moollas. 4. The Zoroastrians of Yezd and Kerman are prevented from building new or repairing their old houses. 5. The Parsees are prevented from wearing white or new cloths. 6. The Zoroastrians are prevented from riding an animal, even if a Parsee were ill, and obliged to ride to go to his doctor. 7. Parsee petty traders going from one place to another to sell their goods are obliged to pay road-taxes on their goods, and the consequence is that they are harassed with all sorts of exactions at the hands of the road-tax gatherers. 8. In addition to several taxes levied on the Parsees in various ways, they are subjected to a heavy and oppressive poll-tax, called the "Juzia." In the reign of Khakan, when the Zoroastrian population was 4,000 families, the tax was only 200 toomans; now, when there are only 500 families, they have to pay 800 toomans. It is possible that these persecutions are practised on the Zoroastrians of Persia without the knowledge of the Shah. It was with a view to bring the matter to the notice of his Majesty that the foregoing petition was presented.

THE NEW INDIAN RETIREMENT REGULATIONS. THE following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Morning Post:—

"Sir,—A statement which I have received from a well-known Indian officer so strikingly confirms the view taken in your leader of August 29 on the subject of the new Indian retirement regulations that I am sure you will pardon my asking you to publish it. Your leading article took especial exception to the clause of the new regulation by which the old system of penalties against leave is continued, and you pointed out how and why this would render the regulations inoperative so far as any probability or possibility of officers retiring on the various increased pensions is concerned. The following, then, is the statement to which I wish to draw your attention:—

"Sir,—1. At the suggestion of several of my friends I send you a statement of my case as a typical one, showing how Government, by allowing only a certain number of years of furlough to count as service for pension, is a great loser. 2. I must premise that I could not accept the pension of £570 a year, and that I desire that of £783. 3. I arrived in India in January, 1851. 4. I have had six years' furlough and six months' general leave in India. 5. In thirty-two years' service I am only allowed to count four for pension. 6. Therefore, in January, 1883, instead of retiring on £783 a year, I have to serve two and a-half years more in India. 7. What is the consequence of this? Answer:—8. Being unable to retire in January, 1883, I go to Europe on two years' furlough (to which the adjutant general says I am entitled). 9. And in January, 1885, return to India to serve the two and a-half years that Government forces me to to entitle me to £783 a year pension. 10. But, for reasons which you will presently see, instead of serving only two and a-half I serve three years. 11. And then, being at last entitled to £783 a year pension, I do not retire, but (i.e., in January, 1888) take a year's furlough to Europe. 12. And at the end thereof (i.e., in January, 1889) retire on my off reckonings of £1,160 a year. 13. So by doing six months' more service (vide paragraph 10) than I am obliged to do to secure £783 pension I secure £380 a year more. 14. In putting forward this case I do not pretend to be animated by a desire to benefit Government, though I do show that Government would be benefited immensely by an alteration of the rules, to wit, by not making furlough count against pension. As it is, Government has not only to pay me this largely increased pension, but has to pay the large allowances of my rank and appointment during my prolonged stay in India. 15. My reason for stating this case is that I desire to go home on a year's furlough in January, 1882, and to retire in January, 1883, on £783 a year. I prefer doing so to waiting till January, 1889, for £1,160 a year, though I spend three out of those six years in Europe. 16. In conclusion, I would add that though the pension of £783 a year after thirty-two years' service is good and sufficient, it is quite unattainable by me or any other officers I have met, for the simple reason that they have all had more than four years' furlough in thirty-two years' service.—I have the honour, &c.,

“I have for obvious reasons suppressed the name of the writer. He did not intend his statement for publication, but it shows so plainly and so conclusively the utter folly of the penalties on account of leave—having in view the admitted necessity of inducing and enabling a large number of the surplus field officers to retire—that I have taken upon myself to make it public, for I cannot but think that it will convince any one who needs convincing that a manifest, nay, rather a glaring, necessity exists for an alteration of this portion of the rules.—I have the honour to remain, your obedient servant,

“W. ALLISON, Secretary, Barrister at Law.”

A LONG and varied experience of the Indian climate and an extensive and most successful practice in Calcutta—where he obtained a reputation second to none within the memory of man—has enabled Sir Joseph Fayrer to make a most important contribution to the medical knowledge of the world. The work on “Tropical Diseases,” which he has just brought out, will be hailed by every medical authority as marking a distinct advance in the progress of medical science in regard to the very interesting classes of cases which are dealt with. The chapters on Tropical Dysentery and Chronic Diarrhoea were the Lettsomian Lectures of 1881, which attracted great attention and elicited warm admiration from the members of the Medical Society of London at the time they were delivered.

All the subjects are treated clinically. The chapters on Liver Abscess and Malarial Splenic Cachexia are not less valuable than those on Dysentery and Diarrhoea, and will be found useful in England as well as in the tropics. And the experience of Alderhot during the hot weather of July last shows that the latter remark applies also to the very interesting examination of “sunstroke and some of its sequels.”

But it is not to the medical profession alone that the publication of Sir Joseph Fayrer's “Tropical Diseases” will be a boon. The author's style is so lucid, and in general so free from unnecessary technicalities, that any intelligent reader can thoroughly comprehend his meaning and his treatment. The whole Anglo-Indian community, and, indeed, all those of whose lives any portion is being or has been spent in a tropical climate, will derive the greatest advantage from a careful perusal of his work. For all such the latter portion of the book is invaluable. We get here a chapter on “the health of European Children in India,” and all our Calcutta readers, except the most recent arrivals, will know that Sir Joseph Fayrer's reputation, high all round, was highest in this particular branch of the healing art. There is also an admirable chapter on “The Preservation of Health in India” and another on the relation of the rainfall to the climate of the country, with especial reference to its influence on health and disease. No one permanently resident in India, or going there for a time, will care to be without a copy of this most valuable work of reference.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE INDIAN GOVERNORSHIPS.

IN a few weeks the new Governor of Madras will be on his way to India. In many ways his appointment is worthy of attention. Few Indian officials who read his farewell speech at Richmond some weeks ago can have failed to recall some old world moralisings on the insatiability of the human race in its search after happiness and the proverbial inadequacy of the ordinarily accepted sources of happiness to secure content. What gadfly of restlessness—many must have wondered—drives this favoured child of fortune to seek fresh scenes and pastures new in the perilous East? What has life to offer of which Mr. Grant-Duff has not already a more than abundant share? Ample wealth, a well-assured place in the most interesting circles of English society, a more than respectable position in politics, a constituency which for 25 years has listened to his periodical essays in unquestioning and admiring silence, official employment of a dignified, interesting, and no doubt congenial, character, a large and, as he informed his hearers at Richmond, carefully selected circle of friends, the intimacy of present kings, the correspondence of future emperors. If the most ambitious of Indian officials, in his wildest mood, were asked by some complacent fairy to select his lot, what could he find to add to the pleasures and interests on which Mr. Grant-Duff is turning his back for the labours and anxieties, the chances of hard earned success, the risks of failure, the certainty of dulness, discomfort, and toil which an official career in India involves? How many a civilian in sweltering court, or blazing morning ride, or the remote, dusty solitude of camp life must have read, not indeed with envy, for such blessings as these, like the joys of the angels, are too remote to kindle envy in a mortal breast, but with almost oppressive feelings of admiration, of the classical luxury of the Thames Villa, as depicted in the World, or Mr. Grant-Duff's scarcely less appetising enumeration of the sober convivialities of the Athenæum, the epicurean refinement of the Dilettante Club, or the nocturnal mysteries of the Cosmopolitan? Is English life, then, though crowned with all these unspeakable blessings, so little delightful that the somewhat dingy glories of not the most interesting of Indian appointments prove an adequate counter attraction? To be sure, Mr. Grant-Duff takes no very modest view of the importance of a Madras Governor. “What,” he says, “is the mandate that I have received? Is it not this? Go forth from the ranks of our home public life, from familiar scenes and familiar companionships, to be for five years the most important individual factor in the weal or the woe of thirty millions of men of other creeds, other races, other thoughts, living under other stars, thousands and thousands of miles away. Go forth to write another page in that action, reaction, interaction of the East and West which forms the strangest and most poetic volume in human history.” No wonder that Mr. Grant-Duff felt the task to be a heavy one, and had to buoy himself up with the reflection that he had served under Lord Northbrook, known Sir Louis Mallet (the grandson of the colleague of Bentham), enjoyed the friendship of Major Baring, and that he was to be assisted in shaping the fortunes of his thirty millions of subjects and writing his fresh page in human history by no less experienced a statesman than Sir Frederick Roberts. Before Mr. Grant-Duff has done with “that great Indian Bureaucracy,” whose acquaintance he is now about to make, he will, we imagine, take a less impressive, perhaps a less flattering, view of the duties and responsibilities of a Governor of Madras. The excellent servants of the State have not, as a rule, found themselves a very preponderating influence in the destinies of the inhabitants of that peaceful Presidency. A few inches of rain—a week or two of cloudless sky—an inopportune flight of locusts—an incursion of rats—an outbreak of cattle disease—these are the real factors in an Indian ryot's welfare, and if things go right with him as to these he feels a sublime indifference to all above and beyond. Small, indeed, of all that such poor folk endure is the part that Governors—even inspired by the recollection of Lord Northbrook and Sir L. Mallet—can make or cure.

As a matter of fact, a new governor from England must be content, for a while at least, to play a somewhat unpretentious part. He finds himself in the midst of people who understand perfectly things which to him are the blackest confusion, and who will unconsciously utilise his ignorance for the furtherance of their own opinions. Wily secretaries, adepts in the art of managing inexperience, will guide him in the way in which they consider that he should go. Members of council, strong in the prejudices of a lifetime, will beset him with an opposition which will be none the less determined for being perfectly polite; he will find himself often in short water when he least expects it, wounding unsuspected susceptibilities by an unfortunate phrase, or arousing antagonism by acts intended to conciliate. After several years of study, many bootless endeavours and not a few unfortunate mistakes, he begins, as the day for his retirement draws near, to know something of the people and things with which he has to do, and to have some real practical understanding of the difficult, tangled, and delicate questions in the solution of which he has been called to play a leading part. He becomes profoundly impressed with the importance of leaving well alone. He abandons the hope of vanquishing local prejudices and official traditions; he acquiesces in his colleagues and submits with a good grace to his secretaries. He presides with a serious dignity over the solemnities of a tiny Court and the amusements of a somewhat borné community. He "sticks up" to the Government of India, whenever provincial dignity is endangered, with a zeal which wins him the sympathies of his colleagues and the applause of the local press; he wins social laurels by well-appointed dinners, brilliant balls, and by as much general affability as is possible to a stranger living amongst people who are and must remain strangers to himself. He smooths away with a judicious grace the occasional unpleasantness which the tyranny of Simla secretaries produces. He proposes the health of the bride at wedding parties and opens museums, water works, and new hospitals with appropriate commonplaces on the blessings of civilisation. To support him in these onerous duties he receives a salary of Rs.1,28,000 per annum; while his staff and household cost the country another Rs.1,19,000, his tour (to Utakamand and back) Rs.4,000, his council, necessitated by his unfamiliarity with Indian topics, Rs.1,23,000, and his military secretary Rs.65,000. Some people have thought that this is a heavy price to pay even for a chief factor in the weal or woe of thirty millions of people who comes fresh from the dignities of English officialdom, the friendships of English statesmen, and the joys of English society. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal performs the same duties for a population more than twice as large for a salary of Rs.96,000 without the help of any council or military secretary, and with an establishment which costs only Rs.11,000, while officials of the highest eminence and ability perform, and successfully perform, as chief commissioners, the duties of posts in no practical respect less important and difficult, on a salary of Rs.48,000 and a household establishment of Rs.6,000. Now if men such as Sir S. Bayley, Sir C. Aitchison, Mr. Bernard, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Elliot are to be had for the latter sum, it follows that men like the Duke of Buckingham and Lord Hobart are somewhat dear at over three lakhs of rupees. But it is not a mere question of money. With regard to this presidency it has been again and again pointed out that the existing arrangement is an accidental anomaly utterly indefensible except on the ground that existing anomalies may be safely left alone. The really important question for India and the Civil Service is whether it is wise to give the two biggest prizes of the service not to those of its members who have distinguished themselves by their talents and success, but to outsiders who can know little or nothing about their duties, and whose faculties for administration have generally to be taken on trust. We have nothing to urge against Mr. Grant-Duff personally. He is, in almost every respect, greatly superior to the usual occupants of his post. He is diligent, earnest, and upright. He has seen many cities and men, and studied the politics of his day with a thoroughness which is unfortunately rare amongst English public men. His name and antecedents bind him to India, and he has had some years of apprenticeship at the India-office. But, granting all this, can any one seriously place his chances of successful administration against those of men who, like Sir Ashley Eden or Sir Stuart Bayley, bring long experience, careful observation, the habits of tact and management of subordinates which official life alone can give, the judgment of character and the shrewd insight necessary for wise decisions as to men and things? Look at the vast province of Bengal, for instance, with its conflicting interests and antagonistic classes; its indigo planters, its zemindars, its ten millions of ryots, its great tea interest, its powerful commercial class. How many ingredients for disturbance! how easy it would be for an ill-timed act or a few injudicious words to kindle a blaze; how all-important that the official who, if not, as Mr. Grant-Duff somewhat grandiosely puts it, the chief factor in the weal or woe of the sixty-eight millions of its inhabitants, is officially responsible for the order and prosperity of this enormous population, should be one who has personally studied every aspect of the questions on which he will have to pronounce—who has seen them from different points of view and under different aspects—who, as Sir Ashley Eden, commands the respect of business men, as himself a man of hard, shrewd common sense, wise and statesmanlike views, readiness to encourage what is practicable, sceptical as to visionary projects. Lord Mayo is reported to have said—"I may have committed many mistakes, but I made a coup in sending Eden to Burma." Lord Mayo's good opinion has been amply justified by Sir A. Eden's later career on a wider stage. It would be, of course, ridiculous to attribute the prosperity of Bengal to him, but the remarkable industrial and commercial development which is taking place in every direction, and the general tranquillity of every class, are in no small measure owing to measures which he has been active in passing, to his skill in conciliating opposition, and to the confidence which men of all classes feel in his calm judgment and thorough knowledge. His departure from Bengal will be generally regarded as a calamity. His advent to Madras (had such been, as rumour says it nearly was—the destined event) would have infused into the somewhat obsolete traditions of that province the vigour of a new régime combined with an experience too long and varied to be mislaid or ignored. Some abuses of long standing would have quietly disappeared: many foolish jealousies and prejudices would have given way to good nature and common sense; many useful projects would have been carried out; many foolish ones would have been exposed and prohibited. All this, judging from his antecedents, it may be safely conjectured that Sir Ashley Eden would have done. Much of this we trust it may be Mr. Grant-Duff's good fortune to effect, but he comes to the task with the disadvantages of almost complete inexperience, the reputation of a hot temper, a pedantic intellect, considerable want of tact and considerable warmth of partisanship. Of all the hot Liberals whom the magic of Mr. Gladstone's intellect has fascinated into unquestioning admiration of him and his works, few have espoused the great leader's cause with more vehemence than Mr. Grant-Duff, or done battle for him with greater acrimony. The Liberals have already filled three great Indian appointments with men who, though all in their way distinguished, derive their chief distinction from their unhesitating and uncompromising adherence to their party. It would be unfortunate if the Government of India became a clique of political partisans. Let us hope that Mr. Grant-Duff will, in his new sphere, learn a wider wisdom than even that of the Liberal chiefs whom he followed with devotion and now remembers with regret; and that he will see his way at the close of what we trust will be a successful career to recommend that his successor shall be chosen, not in the hot arena of Westminster or the bureaux of Whitehall, but from among the most experienced, able, and successful members of the Indian Civil Service.—Englishman.

THE INDIAN GRAIN TRADE.

THE enormous gain last week on the G.I.P. Railway, amounting to no less than Rs.2,25,000 over the receipts of the corresponding week of last year, is not only a sign of the large business doing in grain, but also clear proof that this company had no need to advance their rates six months ago in order to secure fair returns on their capital. It is beyond doubt that the mercantile community were right in urging that the directors had only to wait the movement of the large crops then in store to be satisfied with the result of their business. At the end of this month the receipts of the G.I.P. Railway from April 1 will exceed those of the corresponding six months of 1880 by about thirty lakhs of rupees. The company have been most fortunate in the reduced crops in America this year and in the unfavourable European crops. Had the European harvest been as good as was at one time anticipated, and had England been spared the wet weather which prevented her gathering her crops in good condition, and had the American supply not fallen off, the G.I.P. returns would have shown a very different result. As it is the advance in wheat at home has enabled the Bombay shippers to pay a good rate and the cultivator has not felt the effects of the enhanced railway tariff. But it is none the less true that, had it not been for the advance in the railway tariff, the cultivator would have secured a larger return and would have been spurred on to cultivate still more largely. The report lately issued by Government on Indian wheat is most encouraging. Dr. Watson shows clearly that, with a little more care in cultivation, "India could always command the top prices of the day for its wheat shipments." What is wanted, he says, is "care and cleaning machinery." The report makes it clear that India can hold her own in wheat against America, Egypt, Australia, California, or Chili, and this, too, in spite of the fact that wheat can be carried from Chicago to Liverpool, 900 miles by rail and 3,000 miles by sea, cheaper than it is brought by the G. I. P. Railway from the valley of the Nerbudda, a distance of 600 or 700 miles, to Bombay alone. This trade is eminently one for Bombay to cultivate; while we have a more illiberal railway company to deal with than Calcutta has, we have a better class of wheat than finds its way to Calcutta. The Government report, to which we have referred, states, "During the last few months some shipments of very fine wheats have arrived here from Bombay, showing a marked improvement in quality on those usually arrived from Calcutta." We can never hope to rival Calcutta in the variety of our articles of export or in quantity, as she is the outlet for the richest provinces of India teeming with a large and varied produce. Furthermore, according to the figures given by the last census, while Bengal has a population of 350 to the square mile, Bombay has only 110. This alone is enough to show the richness of Bengal and the poverty of Bombay. But in cotton and wheat we shall always be able to hold our own, if only we have railway communication and reasonable tariffs.—Bombay Gazette.

THE SAME.

REGARDING the competition between Bombay and Calcutta and between the railways on this side and the other side of India, for the grain traffic, the Calcutta Statesman writes:—"The competition between the Eastern and Western lines for the grain traffic is becoming keen. The Rajputana line is putting forward all its strength, and is now carrying grain from Delhi to Bombay for twelve annas per maund. This is a distance of 889 miles. The East Indian Railway, on the other hand, is carrying it from Delhi to Howrah, a distance of 950 miles, for 10-56 annas per maund. So far, then, as the railway portion of the journey is concerned, consignors would save by continuing to send to Calcutta. Besides the fact of the freight being less, there is no transshipping through break of gauge, while on the Western route there are two changes, owing to the Rajputana part of the line being on the narrow gauge. If, therefore, the Rajputana line wishes to get the grain traffic of India, the rate may possibly have to be further reduced. Railway freight is not, however, the only factor in determining the course of traffic; steamer freight enters largely into the calculation. It may cost two annas per maund less to convey the grain to Calcutta than to Bombay, but if the sea freight from Calcutta is three annas per maund higher than it is from Bombay, where is the gain? Bombay, being the nearest port of arrival for passengers, naturally monopolises a large share of the passenger traffic. This leads to a large number of vessels arriving and departing, and consequently freights are, as a rule, much lower than in Calcutta. A difference of five shillings per ton in freight is equal to one and a-half annas per maund on the grain. At the present moment Calcutta freights are about twenty-five shillings higher than those ruling in Bombay. This makes a difference of between seven and eight annas per maund, which more than counterbalances the efforts the East Indian Railway Company are making to draw business away from Western India. A very large number of steamers are, however, at present on the way out to Calcutta, drawn hither by the good freight, and the natural consequence will be that freights will fall."

MR. GIBBS.

ALTOGETHER we are satisfied with our great men here. The personnel of the Government of India is strong and exceptional, and I cannot but give you a sketch or two of the leading members of council. Let me begin with the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, the senior and the oldest member, who presides over the Public Works Department. If you want to know what sort of man Mr. Gibbs is, ask his many servants, from the lowest menial to the big turbaned and Albert chained Surati steward. A man may be well talked of by the ladies, or by his acquaintances, or even by his intimate friends, but if he is praised behind his back by his servants, that is praise indeed. And Mr. Gibbs is not only complimented with the good opinion of his friends and acquaintances, but the enthusiastic attachment of his menial servants. A tall, grand-looking man, his age only lending dignity to his fine appearance, he is as aristocratic in his looks as cordial and kindly in his bearing. Going through every high and important post in the Bombay Presidency, he is an ornament of the supreme assembly where he now sits. He knows every educated native of his town by name and personal history, and it is only a pity that more of our own people in Calcutta have not cultivated more intimate acquaintance with him. He holds every true interest of the country near to his heart; and as soon as he is convinced of the righteousness of a cause he takes it up. His kindness of nature, I believe, carries more people to see him than he has time to receive; but every one who goes finds him equally accessible and attentive. He is a worthy counsellor of a worthy Viceroy, and may he, and men like him, long continue to direct the affairs of the State! He is a remnant of the fine, manly old race of Anglo-Indians sent out from Haileybury to rule this country before competition, commonplaces, and class legislation were known.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE NEW HOME SECRETARY.—Sir Ashley Eden paid Mr. Mackenzie the compliment of inviting a select company of his friends, both European and native, to meet him at Belvedere last Tuesday evening, on the eve of his departure for Simla. Mr. Mackenzie carries our best wishes. He will, we have no doubt, vindicate Bengal in the estimation of the Viceroy. He is destined to occupy some day the same house where his friends met on last Tuesday to bid him good-bye.—Hindu Patriot.

THE LAST FRONTIER RAID.—Another raid of a more daring nature than the others has been committed upon our North West Frontier. On the night of the 20th the quarter guard of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, consisting of twelve men, was surprised by a party of Zukka Khel Afridis; the sentry and two troopers were killed and three men were wounded. The raiders secured two carbines and escaped in the darkness. The restless spirit among the border tribes, particularly the Afridis, is becoming more pronounced, and frontier experts are advocating punitive expeditions during the ensuing winter.—Pioneer.

THE VICEROY.—The Viceroy and Lady Ripon will probably leave Calcutta, on a visit to Rangoon, about Dec. 20, returning early in January.—Bombay Gazette.

THE V.C.—It is stated that Captain Vousden, 5th Punjab Cavalry, who distinguished himself in the fighting round Sherpur, is to receive the Victoria Cross. It is thought extremely probable that Sergeant Sellars, 72nd Regiment, will receive the Victoria Cross.—Ibid.

MRS. J. E. GOULDING.—The Lahore paper notices the death from cholera of Mrs. J. E. Goulding, on Friday evening. Mrs. Goulding had arranged to leave for Dalhousie on the following day. The illness lasted six hours.—Pioneer.

THE HEALTH OF DELHI.—Fever is said to have been very prevalent among the men of the battery located in the Delhi Fort, as also among the soldiers of the 54th Foot, caused, it is said, by the subsidence of the river at this time of the year, as also by the intensity of the heat.—Ibid.

THE FISHER CASE.—In the defamation case of Fisher v. Farnthorne and Pundit Gunga Ram, Mr. J. W. Muir, joint magistrate of Meerut, formally committed the defendants, on Sept. 22, for trial at the High Court.—Ibid.

MR. STRAIGHT.—The Hon. Douglas Straight, after leaving Simla early in October, will proceed to Indore, on a visit to Sir Lepel Griffin, accompanied by Mrs. Straight, who will by that time have returned from England.—Ibid.

THE PARSEE "PUNCH."—The Parsee Punch addresses an ode to Lord Ripon for his encouragement of native art and industry. Punch wishes that "all Viceroys may be like him, dear to the Hindu public, introducing disinterested reform for the regeneration of the country," &c. It has a cartoon, also, on the same subject, the future enterprise of India being represented by a chubby little boy fondled by dame Ind, and an angel, bearded and rather elderly looking, presumably the Viceroy, showering bouquets from the clouds upon mother and son.—Ibid.

SIAM.—The King of Siam has given orders for the formation of a postal service in his dominions. Cholera has almost ceased at Bangkok, and according to the Siam Advertiser "the prompt measures taken by H.M. the King did much to check the progress of the disease." His Majesty's proclamations, establishing temporary cholera hospitals and his generous appropriation of funds and medicines to provide for the poor and helpless who might be overtaken with the disease, and his proclamations requiring cleanliness and the speedy neutralisation of offensive matter wherever found, has doubtless saved many a life and the country from what might have been a fearfully destructive epidemic. H.M. the King received very graciously Mr. Palgrave's appreciative note to the Foreign Minister on this subject, and on August 19 directed H.R.H. Krom Mun Putarate Damarongsak to issue a proclamation thanking the Princes and officials for their energetic and efficient assistance in compassionately ministering to the relief of cholera cases in compliance with the royal command. H.M. suggested that they continue to administer relief till a proclamation should announce that such special service was no longer needed.—Ibid.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE.—Mr. C. Stuart, deputy registrar of the Foreign-office, having lately been dismissed from his appointment for communicating confidential information, has been declared incapable of serving the Government hereafter in any capacity.—Pioneer.

UNIVERSITY DINNER.—An Oxford and Cambridge dinner was to take place at Simla on the 29th Sept., with Sir R. Egerton as chairman.—Englishman.

THE 4TH GHOORKAS.—Major J. Hay, late on special duty at Naini Tal, is to succeed Col. F. F. Rowcroft as 2nd in command of the 4th Goorkhas.—Ibid.

DARJILING.—The local paper of Saturday last says that rain had fallen in the Darjiling district, almost without intermission, since the previous Tuesday.—Ibid.

QUETTA.—Major C. W. Murray, of the 2nd Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment, late 61st, is appointed deputy assistant quartermaster general with the Quetta Division in the place of Major P. Story.—Ibid.

THE MINTS.—The assay value of coins and bullion received at the Indian mints during the first four months of this year was Rs.33,13,218, of which Rs.26,13,161 was received in Calcutta and Rs.6,94,057 in Bombay. The amount coined and examined during the same period was Rs.32,08,214, of which Rs.24,95,773 was in Calcutta and Rs.7,12,441 in Bombay. In the first four months of the current financial year the value of gold imported into India was Rs.1,34,16,178 and of that exported Rs.37,725, whilst the value of silver imported was Rs.1,28,38,304 and of that exported Rs.42,84,504. This leaves a balance of both metals in favour of imports of Rs.2,19,32,253.—Englishman.

MR. J. BRANDER.—The death is announced of Mr. J. Brander, traffic manager of the Eastern Bengal Railway and major of the Railway Volunteers. Mr. Brander was only forty-five years old at the time of his death, and had been in the service of the company for a period of nearly twenty-five years.—Pioneer.

MEDICAL FURLOUGH.—Under the authority of the Secretary of State for India, his Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct, with reference to paragraph 5 of G.G.O. No. 279 of 1881, that furlough service for pension in the Indian Medical Service will continue to be governed by the furlough regulations under which each officer may be serving.—Englishman.

THE SEEBPUR COLLEGE.—The Bishop of Calcutta, Maharaja Jotendro Mohun Tagor, and Surgeon Major G. King are appointed members of the board of visitors of the Engineering College at Howrah.—Ibid.

DR. MORRISON.—The death is reported of the Rev. Dr. Morrison, one of the oldest American missionaries in India, at Dabra.—Ibid.

OPERA.—Signor Pompei is now on a visit to Calcutta from Bombay to endeavour to arrange for bringing out an Italian opera company.—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY.—The Ceylon Observer reports that Lord Stanley of Alderley is expected in Ceylon shortly, "apparently to inquire personally into the supposed grievances of his fellow Mahomedans."—Bombay Gazette.

THE RAIN TREE AT MADRAS.—At a meeting of the committee of the Agri-Horticultural Society of Madras it was stated:—The rain tree (Pathecolobium saman) in the gardens, the measurements of which were given in the proceedings of August 7, 1878, and then believed to be under six years from the seed, continues, in spite of its having been necessary to amputate some of its largest limbs, to grow enormously. Measured on July 30 last it gave in girth 9ft. 4in. at the ground, 6ft. 3in. at 3ft. high, and 5ft. 9in. at 5ft. high; in spread about 85ft. from north to south; and a total height of about 46ft. A reference to the former measurements shows that the girth at 3ft. from the ground has increased in the last three years 2ft. 2in. The age of the tree is, if anything, over estimated, but search is being made for traces of the receipt of the seed, which it is believed came from Ceylon about 1872. A casuarina tree standing alongside, which was the specimen of its order when that part of the ground was laid out at the Botanical Garden, and is therefore known to be about ten years old, now measures at 5ft. from the ground only 2ft. 8½in., though it is about 82ft. high.—Madras Times.

MR. RUNGACHARLU.—The Dewan of Maisur, with the consent of the Maharaja, has established three scholarships of ten rupees a month each, to be held by natives of Maisur at the Madras Agricultural College.—Englishman.

DEATH OF A TRAVANCORE PRINCE.—A Kochin paper announces the premature death, at Mavelikara, in his thirty-seventh year, on August 13, of Kerala Vurmah, Raja of Mavelikara, the only brother of their Highnesses the present Rances of Travancore. The deceased had been suffering for more than a month from inflammation of the liver, attended with dropsy.—Pioneer.

MADRAS HARBOUR.—The actual expenditure of the Madras harbour works up to the end of July has been Rs. 55,30,355.

BOMBAY.

BOMBAY FREIGHTS.—There is spirit in Bombay. The Bombay papers contain the following advertisement:—"We, the undersigned members of a special committee appointed by the general body of native piece-goods merchants of Bombay, hereby intimate that we have arranged, through Messrs. Forbes, Forbes and Co., London, to ship all the goods which we have purchased or may purchase by a line the first steamer of which will leave Liverpool on or about the 10th inst., subsequent steamers calling at Glasgow, and we trust that the various mercantile firms, through whom we are in the habit of purchasing goods, will aid us in carrying out the arrangement made." The advertisement is signed by thirty-six native firms, and is intended to meet the combination of shipowners, under which the rates of freight at Bombay have been recently raised to 60s. per ton. We hope this combination will teach the shipowners a wholesome lesson.—Pioneer.

JINJIRA.—We understand that Mr. A. Crawford has, in connection with his recent employment on special duty under the Government of India, been instructed to negotiate an agreement with the State of Jinjira regarding customs, salt, and abkari.—Pioneer.

SIR JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHAY has been reappointed an additional member of the Bombay Legislative Council.—Englishman.

THE NORTHBROOK CLUB.—The Governor of Bombay has subscribed Rs. 250 to the Northbrook Indian Society and Club, and altogether Rs. 9,500 have been subscribed in Bombay for the funds of the institution.—Bombay Gazette.

THE SAME.—The Nizam's Government have subscribed £400, Sir Salar Jung £80, and the Amir-i-Kabir £80 to the fund for the Northbrook Club. The Minister's two sons and the co-regent's two sons are members.—Ibid.

A BOMBAY DIVORCE CASE.—Another divorce case is to be tried by the Bombay High Court immediately after the vacation. On September 20 a plaint was presented to Mr. Justice Bayley, sitting in chambers, by Mr. Henry Cleveland, on behalf of Major Walter Scott Peat, praying for a divorce from his wife, Ida Mary Peat, on the ground of adultery with Mr. Arthur T. Goodfellow, an assistant engineer in the Public Works Department. The plaintiff stated that the petitioner, who is attached to the 1st Bombay Lancers, was married to the respondent at Hyderabad in 1871, and that there was no issue of the marriage. The petitioner some time since sent his wife to Bombay en route for England, in charge of the co-respondent. On arrival in Bombay the respondent wrote to her husband stating that in future she intended living with the co-respondent, and subsequently the pair proceeded to Mussoorie, where they have been living together as man and wife. His lordship accepted the plaint as a long cause, and fixed November 14 for the hearing of the suit.—Ibid.

DR. BARBARO.—From Hyderabad, Deccan, the death is reported of the Right Rev. Dr. Barbaro, Roman Catholic Bishop of that diocese. The melancholy event took place at his residence, Chudderghaut, on Sunday morning, and was quite sudden. He had only a few minutes before returned from celebrating Pontifical High Mass and administering the Sacrament of Confirmation to a number of candidates. It is said that he always had a presentiment that he should die suddenly. It is considered highly probable that Dr. Caproti, Rector of All Saints College, Hyderabad, will be the new bishop. Capt. Greig, ridingmaster of H.H. the Nizam's African Body Guard, has also died. The cause of death was cholera.—Ibid.

COLONEL MAYNE.—Colonel Mayne, the cantonment magistrate of Secunderabad, is about to retire from the service, and according to the Deccan Times he will make over charge of his office to Major Gunthorpe, of the Berar police.—Ibid.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MORAL BARRIERS.

"The way we live now" on the Punjab Frontier is more exciting than dignified. For many weeks past we have been continually hearing of "frontier raids," interspersed with accounts of "punitive expeditions." Each raid is more daring than any that has ever previously occurred; in the last punitive expedition, that against the Mahsud Waziris, the force of all arms employed was large enough to be called an army. We believe we are right in asserting that we have never of late succeeded in enforcing our demands on the offending tribes. In our summary of this week's news we give another flagrant instance of this feebleness—and, even after the big Waziri expedition, the chief offender was let off on the plea (credat Judæus!) that he was too ill to be surrendered! We have always maintained that (with still more serious mischief) two inevitable results of such cowardly actions as the flight from Kandahar, and the "scuttling" policy generally, are (1) lawlessness on the frontier, and (2) unrest throughout India. Of the latter, we have had ample warning in the Santal country, in the Bhil country, in Multan, and generally throughout the Punjab. Of the former, it is not too much to say that the whole frontier appears to have assumed an attitude of contemptuous defiance towards us since the Kandahar business.

It will be remembered that, after the definite adoption of "peace at any price" as our general policy—when it was determined that guns and rifles were to be done away with, and give place to "moral barriers" of sorts—an elaborate arrangement of the usual "moral barrier" kind was made with Kamal's tribe and the other Khaibari septes of the Afridis. You will always know a "moral barrier" by its aptitude for receiving black mail and presents of war material, which it generally hastens to use against you. Shor Ali was the moral barrier that received Lord Lawrence's rupees and guns, just as Abdur Rahman has been receiving Lord Ripon's. But nowadays we are going in for moral barriers on a far grander scale than anything dreamt of in Lord Lawrence's philosophy. We now have Gladstonian moral barriers; so, besides Abdur Rahman, we have to pay up promptly and gracefully to Zakha Khel, to Kuka Khel, to Malikdin Khel (our friend Kamal's tribe), and, in fact, to all the tag-rag and bob-tail of the frontier. Now, black mail is sometimes not a bad thing in its way; and has, indeed, been called in India "the royal road to frontier diplomacy." But the worst of giving black mail to a Gladstonian moral barrier is that he invariably asks for more, and proceeds incontinently to harry you with fire and word, whether you give him more or not. When the Calcutta correspondent of the Times announced one of the Zakha Khel raids on September 11 he plaintively added, "This is the fifth"—he did not say what, but he meant the fifth raid they have made on us since we paid them several lakhs to be a moral barrier, and surrendered the immoral barrier of Kandahar. We were then told that Lord Ripon was believed to be thinking about making up his mind to give this particular refractory "barrier" a tremendous lesson if they went on killing and plundering our people much longer. But since then we have several times had "more last words" from these unreasonable people; who either do not rise to the full height of their "moral" position, or else perversely appreciate its advantages from another point of view than Mr. Gladstone's. At one time we hear of desperate attacks on our troops within the limits of the Peshawur cantonments; at another, of sepoys shot down and rifles carried off in the heart of our military station of Kohat. Now, cattle are swept off within sight of British troops; then, villages are looted in the Peshawur Valley, our troops turn out, but find the enemy "too strong" to be attacked! In the raid on the 19th Bengal Cavalry in Peshawur cantonments, Kamal was the known leader. So we "imposed"—that is the very word used in the telegram of the 25th—the following terms on the Afridis:—"1. The surrender of Kamal, or his expulsion from the Afridi limits and a fine of Rs.2,000; 2. The surrender of Kamal's associates or the payment of a further fine of Rs.1,500; 3. The payment of blood money at the rate of Rs 500 for each trooper killed or wounded." We "imposed," but Kamal disposed. He immediately got together his friends, fell upon our troops unawares at Kohat, killed three, wounded four more, and once again got safe off. It might have been supposed that this would "rouse the British lion" at last. But no. The Waziri expedition has not been long over; the Government of India and the Punjab Government are at the present moment disputing about the number of regiments that will be wanted to force the Alaiwals to unlearn the lesson we have taught them at Kandahar and elsewhere; and even a policy of "moral barriers" would begin to seem too dearly purchased if we had three "punitive expeditions" on hand almost simultaneously. So Kamal is free to continue his profession as a moral barrier; whilst we thankfully accept from his fellow-tribesmen the arms that he stript from the dead bodies of our troopers, as a slight token of their esteem and regard.

INDIA, ENGLAND'S BEST GRANARY.

The wet harvest in England, and the reports of a short crop in America, have produced such an effect on the export of wheat from India to this country, that in one week only, the traffic receipts of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway were Rs. 2,25,000 more than in the corresponding week of last year—the increase being entirely due to the movement of grain from up-country to Bombay. The significance of this return is greatly increased by the fact that the bulk of the wheat grown for export in the great wheat-producing provinces of the North West and the Punjab still finds its way to Europe by the old road of the Ganges Valley and Calcutta. In 1877-78, more than four-and-a-half million cwts.—collected chiefly at Cawnpore—were exported from Calcutta, whilst rather over a million cwts. were shipped at Bombay, and rather over half a million at Karachi. In the Punjab, 54 per cent. of the total food grain area of the province is under wheat—more than double the whole area so cultivated in Great Britain; and it is estimated by the best authorities that the total area of land under wheat in Northern India is not less than that in the United States. The average outturn is also good—being about thirteen-and-a-half bushels per acre in the Punjab. The quality of the grain is hardly inferior to the best Californian produce; and whilst the main consumption is in the United Kingdom and France, it is said that Italy is beginning to utilise the hard white Indian wheat for making macaroni. By recent railway extension the wheat-producing regions of India have been brought into direct and cheap communication with the sea. The cheapness of labour in India gives it an enormous economical advantage over America; the area that may be sown with wheat is practically the same in the two countries, because it is for present purposes unlimited. All that is needed for Indian grown wheat to take the place of American is for the trade to be brought into the new channel; when once it is so brought, it may be confidently predicted that American wheat will never again—at least under present conditions—be able to drive out the Indian commodity from our markets. It can be seen, in the returns with which we started, what a rapid and extensive expansion of the trade is caused by comparatively slight encouragement. We have not the slightest doubt that a very slight and temporary fiscal preference in England—say the imposition of a 2s. 6d. duty on foreign-grown wheat, in favour of India and the colonies—would in a very few years establish Indian wheat so firmly in our market, that it would thereafter defy competition and be permanently independent of further help. But, alas, free trade and the cheap loaf—two most excellent things in themselves—are in England the objects of such fetish-worship, that we fear it is hopeless to ask for any measure which looks like infraction of those principles even in the most trivial degree and for absolutely temporary purposes, however important may be the considerations that recommend the provisional and transient modification of rule.

We need hardly point out the immense advantages that will accrue, both to this country and to India, from our transferring even a part of our custom from the American grower—who shuts out our goods by prohibitive duties—to the Indian grower, who admits our piece-goods almost duty free. Every quarter of wheat that is carried from India to England increases, pro tanto, India's purchasing power here. Every such quarter tends pro tanto to improve the exchange, and when we obtain our chief food supply from our own dependencies we shall be free from that terrible danger of famine that would now hang over us if we got involved in an American war. With such advantages to be gained from an Indian and colonial wheat trade, any other Government but that of England would long ago have taken measures to build up and fortify that trade, far more decisive—and far more heretical in the eyes of politico-economical doctrinaires—than those we have ventured to suggest. But in these days of political timidity no advantages, however great or obvious, would be sufficient to compensate any English Government, whether Liberal or Conservative, for the risk of being suspected unsound in their political economy. Free trade and the cheap loaf are about the only principles of political economy known to the masses; and not the tongues of men and of angels would persuade our lords and masters—on whose breath hang the official lives of Ministers—that any possible combination of circumstances would justify even the most insignificant tax on “the food of the people.” So we must look for other forms of encouragement for Indian wheat.

HOME NEWS.

INDIAN ARMY VOLUNTEERS.—A royal warrant has been issued, which announces that "soldiers who, on volunteering for general service from our Indian forces to our general forces, elected that their pensions should be calculated in accordance with the regulations of our Indian forces, shall, when discharged, after serving more than twenty-one years, be granted $\frac{1}{4}$ d. a day for each year of service in excess of such period, in addition to their pensions under the regulations of our Indian forces, provided that the maximum rates laid down in Articles 1,033 and 1,035 of our warrant of June 25 be not exceeded."

A VOLUNTEER FORCE FOR CEYLON.—It is stated that the application which reached England lately from Ceylon for permission to proceed with the formation of the proposed volunteer force in that colony has been approved by the Home authorities, and that the corps will receive the title of the Ceylon Fusiliers.

INDIAN OFFICIALS.—Sir A. Lyall, K.C.B., secretary to the Foreign Department at Calcutta, and Sir Stuart Bayley, K.C.S.I., the newly-appointed Resident at Hyderabad, are expected to arrive in England in a few days on a short leave of absence.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—Notification is given by the secretary that, in accordance with the East Indian Railway Company Purchase, 1879, a total sum of £74,671 is now invested for the purpose of providing a sinking fund in respect of the annuities, Class B. The investment is in India Four per Cent. Stock, Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, Great Northern, South Eastern, Great Eastern, and East Indian Railway Companies' Debenture Stock.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA AND CHINA TELEGRAPH.—The report for the six months ending June 30 states that the gross receipts, including Government subsidies, have amounted during the half-year to £191,581, against £173,020 for the corresponding period of 1880, showing an increase of £18,561. The working and other expenses (including a sum of £21,844 for cost of repair of cables and expenses of ships), together with income-tax, absorb £55,230, against £50,384 for the corresponding half-year, leaving a balance of £136,350. From this is deducted £41,595 for interest on debentures, and contributions to sinking funds for redemption of the Australian Government subsidy and Manila debentures, leaving £94,755 as the net profit for the half-year. One quarterly interim dividend of $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent., amounting to £24,969, has been paid for the half-year, and it is now proposed to distribute another of like amount, together with a bonus of 1s. per share, payable on the 19th inst., leaving a balance of £34,830 to be carried forward. The Singapore-Batavia cable has for some time past been a source of great anxiety to the directors, owing to the increasingly numerous and costly repairs which have been necessary to maintain the line in working order. After careful consideration it has been decided to replace it with a brass-ribboned cable (580 miles in length), designed to resist the attacks of the marine insect which has been so destructive to the old line. An arrangement has therefore been entered into with the Telegraph Construction Company to carry out the work and pick up the existing cable for the sum of £95,000, which it is proposed to pay out of revenue by instalments. By this means it is believed a considerable annual saving will be effected in the cost of repairs.

OBITUARY.—Col. John William Willoughby-Osborne, C.B., of the Madras Army, died on the 8th inst., after a long illness, at Dehra Doon. He was the eldest son of the late Major General Willoughby-Osborne, of Hawford, Ombersley, Worcestershire, and was born in 1833. He entered the Indian army in 1850, obtained a lieutenancy in 1856, was promoted to captain in 1862, and became major in 1870, and lieutenant colonel in 1876. He served throughout the Indian Mutiny, and was wounded at the action of Kurereah. For his services in India he was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath. In 1860 he was made honorary aide de camp to the Viceroy of India, and in 1880 he was appointed political resident at Gwalior. Colonel Willoughby-Osborne married Laura, daughter of Mr. Charles John Shoubridge, of Old Palace-place, Richmond, Surrey.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £350,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £193,800; to Bombay, £100,000; and to Madras, £2,500, the average rate in all three cases being 18.7937d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 18.715-16d. will receive in full. This represents an advance of 1-16d. on the price obtained last week, but, while the whole of the amount offered was then taken up, the allotments on Wednesday did not quite equal 30 lakhs. Still the result is fairly satisfactory, from the fact that the Council, while fixing a higher minimum, can get rid of such a large proportion. Thirty-five lakhs are to be offered again next Wednesday.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday increasing firmness was shown in the market for bar silver, some transactions having been effected at 52 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per ounce. A small arrival of Mexican dollars by the Oder was disposed of at 51 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., being the rate which buyers have been ready to give for some days past. There was no quotable change in the rates of exchange as advised from India and China, but the higher value of money in Bombay, still prevalent, has induced the directors of the Bank of Bombay to raise their discount rate to 7 per cent. Rupee Paper is quiet, and, for the most part, steady in price.—On Thursday bar silver was a shade weaker, at 52 1-16d. per ounce, which shows a decline of 1-16d. per ounce, the demand being principally on Continental account. In Mexican dollars the amount of business was limited, and the price was unaltered, at 51d. per ounce. An advance of 3-32d. was noted both in the Four and Four-and-a-Half Rupee Paper, the quotations being respectively 83 9-16, 11-16, and 90 $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{3}{8}$. An improvement was shown in the Eastern exchanges, the rate from Bombay being 1s. 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; Calcutta, 1s. 8 3-16d.; Hong Kong, 3s. 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ d.; and Shanghai, 5s. 1 $\frac{3}{8}$ d.—On Friday the market was very quiet, and with somewhat larger supplies the price became rather easier at 52d. per oz. The violent gale which raged all day greatly interfered with the land telegraphic communication in England, and the banks having business relations with the East were practically without advices from the different centres. Rupee paper, partly from the same cause, was steady, and business kept within a very narrow limit.—On Saturday business was at a complete standstill.—On Monday a small amount of bars received by steamer was disposed of at 51 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per ounce, which marks a fall of $\frac{1}{4}$ d. The dealings were on Continental account, as at the existing price export of the uncoined metal to India is impossible. There were no dealings in Mexican dollars, which remained nominally without alteration at 51d. per ounce. Rupee Four per Cents. were unchanged, but the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. improved $\frac{1}{8}$, to 90 $\frac{3}{8}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$. The exchange from Bombay was telegraphed at 1s. 8 3-16d., from Calcutta at 1s. 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., from Hong Kong at 3s. 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ d., and from Shanghai at 5s. 1 $\frac{3}{8}$ d.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on Wednesday in the board-room, under the presidency of Mr. David Henry Small. The advertisement calling the meeting having been read and the report presented, the chairman said that his remarks would be very brief. The business of the bank, he was happy to say, continued to be most satisfactory. At the same time the results of the bank's trading had been somewhat inimically affected by the low rate of interest prevailing in India. As a consequence the returns to the bank had not been quite so good as could have been wished, but still it must be satisfactory to the shareholders to receive, as it was to the board to declare, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and also to carry £1,500 to liquidating the bad and doubtful debt account. With those few words he would move the adoption of the report and accounts.—Colonel J. T. Smith, in seconding the motion, said that when last he addressed a meeting of the shareholders a conference was about to sit in Paris in reference to a bi-metallic currency, and he expressed a fervent hope that the deliberations of that conference would lead to some tangible and practical result. It was a sorry fact recorded in history now that when those gentlemen met to discuss grave questions not one of them seemed to have the courage of his opinions, which had been so bravely vaunted in print beforehand. The conference had been adjourned until next summer much to the disappointment of many, and it was to be hoped that at the next meeting, if it ever took place, some reasonable and tangible proposition in reference to the subject would be made which would be generally acceptable. After a few observations from Dr. A. Beattie as to the advantages likely to accrue to all branches of industry from the discoveries of gold in India, the report was adopted, and the dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum declared.

ODDH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—An extraordinary general meeting was held on Wednesday, at the offices, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street. Mr. Pender, M.P., presided, and in opening the proceedings stated that the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council had been given for the extension of their railway from Moradabad, in Rohilkund, to Saharanpore, on the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway. The line, starting from Moradabad, after crossing the Ganges at Balawala Ghat, was to proceed through Roorkee to Saharanpore; and in connection with the extension it was proposed that a branch line should be taken from Roorkee to Hurdwar. The total length of line, including the branch, was 134 miles. In connection with this extension they had submitted alternative arrangements for the consideration of the Secretary of State—namely, either that the Government option of taking over the Oudh and Rohilkund line in 1888 should be relinquished until the next period under the contract, 1898, or that if taken over in 1888 with the junction line, supposing it to have been constructed, then that the whole of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway system should be under the management of the company, to be called the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway Extension Company, on terms to be agreed to. The board further recommended, as the most advantageous and simple plan of carrying out the work, that it should be undertaken at once as an integral part of the Oudh and Rohilkund contract system, on the understanding that the cost of the line was not to be allowed to interfere with the results of the working of the completed lines until at least three or four years after its opening, and that if the Government option of taking over the system in 1888 were to be exercised, that terms such as those made with the East Indian Railway Company should be agreed upon with this company for the future working and management of the whole system. In reply, it was pointed out that the Secretary of State considered "that it would not be expedient to commit the Government to a postponement of the period at which, under the existing contract, they had the first opportunity of purchasing the line; and he has, therefore, decided that the proposed condition of extending the period of purchase must be excluded from any arrangement that may be come to." It was further pointed out that, before coming to a conclusion on the other propositions submitted by the directors, the Secretary of State desired to refer the whole question to the Government of India for their consideration. The reply went on to state:—"With the view, however, of saving time, and of enabling the company to take advantage of the coming working season, Lord Hartington is prepared to allow them at once to issue debentures to the extent of £500,000 at 3½ per cent., it being understood that, in the event of the failure of negotiations, and of no terms being agreed to, the works on the extension line shall come into the hands of the Government, who will undertake to complete them, and to take over the debentures, receiving any balance of money which may have been raised by their means to meet the cost of the new line." Moradabad, continued the chairman, was at present the terminus in the North West of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway, constructed under the guarantee of the Indian Government, and the new line, although not included in the company's contract, was originally contemplated, and for long considered as a necessary link. The districts through which their railway ran had always been regarded and designated as the "garden of India." It had a total length of 546 miles. The important connection of their system with the East Indian Railway by a permanent bridge across the Ganges at Benares was now being provided, the bridge having been sanctioned by Government, and the works being in progress. There was, he said, good reason to suppose that the other connection, that now sanctioned, would prove profitable, for while serving as a feeder to the parent railway, this in turn would feed it, as would also the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, and vice versa. The proposed line would, moreover, "tap" a rich and unserved district, would give communication to the important Government engineering works at Roorkee, and meet alike the want so long felt politically and militarily of a second line of communication with the Punjab. The cost of construction, including a bridge over the Ganges, was estimated at £12,000 per mile, or a total cost of £1,600,000, including contingencies. The line of the new railway had already been surveyed by their engineering staff, and the centre line had been marked out. No delay need be incurred in commencing operations. The cost of these surveys to December 31 last, undertaken by instruction of the Government, had been £22,058, and would, of course, have to be refunded to the company in the event of the line being made by the Government instead of by the company. The line would be constructed on the standard broad gauge of the main trunk lines, in order to dispense with break of bulk and the consequent and scarcely avoidable contingencies of delay and loss. He concluded by moving a resolution empowering the board to raise the additional capital required for carrying out the works, "to be raised at such times and in such manner as may be determined by the Secretary of State for India in Council." The motion having been seconded, the chairman, in reply to questions, stated that the company had been very successful in the past year in placing 3½ per cent. debentures. It would be expressly provided that the profits of the old capital should not be interfered with by the cost of the extension. The present firmness of money was attributable to exceptional circumstances, but if they found that they could not raise money at 3½ per cent. they would have to go to the Secretary of State for India for power to raise it at 4 per cent. The accounts of the extension line would be kept distinct from those of the parent company. The resolution was carried unanimously.

THE GOLD MINES.—As Capt. Rodgers, of the Mysor Gold Mining Company, commenced crushing on Sept. 3, and has continued to crush up to date, his chance of winning the handsome bonus of £1,000, offered by the leading shareholders of Indian gold mining companies to the manager of the mine first producing 5000z. of gold, may be considered a good one. The shareholders offer a second bonus of £500 to the sub manager, or sub captain, we presume; and a third bonus of £500 for distribution among the staff. The Alpha Gold Mining Company ought to be also in the running; but there is no doubt about Kolar having got the start of the Wynaad—a start that the Kolar people are anxious to keep, and even improve upon. The command of the railway has conferred a great advantage upon Kolar in regard chiefly to getting machinery up rapidly from the coast.—Madras Mail.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 6s. "Athenæum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers over the greater portion of our North-American possessions. The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive, and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

"The Times."—"A remarkable work. . . It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S GUIDE.

No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 24. 6d. "Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of this Field for such help as is afforded by its pages."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1884.
Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some unlike and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."
